White House Parley Fails, NRA Future Yet in Doubt

Supreme Court Test Is Started

Constitutionality of Act Challenged by N. Y. Poultry Firm.

By Robert C. Albright.

Complicating a badly tangled legislative melee, all efforts to point the flight of the Blue Eagle failed dismally yesterday, leaving NRA compromise efforts suspended in air, and a deadlocked Senate at logger heads over a solution.

A White House conference on NRA's future ended in wide disagreement and confusion. A bipartisan group of 12 Senators heard the President insist on permanent extension legislation, after apparently concurring in a move for compromise.

As the Senate recessed, without breaking an antilynching filibuster, already six days old, the NRA disagreement added another long-drawn-out floor fight to the many items of conflict on the Senate prospectus.

The Supreme Court meanwhile grappled with questions of validity drawn in the present NRA law. Charging unconstitutionality, a brief was filed yesterday by counsel for the Schechter Poultry Corporation, of Brooklyn, N. Y. The Government probably will reply today.

In the face of yesterday's White House refusal to compromise on temporary extension of NRA, a strong bid for caging the Blue Eagle with restrictive legislation will be made again today in the Senate Finance Committee.

At the same time, Senator Pat Harrison, chairman of the group, is expected to attempt preparation of a new NRA bill, incorporating suggestions made at the White House yesterday by Donald R. Richberg, chairman of the recovery board. The Richberg proposal, it was understood, would broaden definition of interstate commerce to include some intrastate cases.

Undecided on the Administration's final course, leaders delayed presentation of concrete proposals until today. The NRA opposition bloc meanwhile rallied rapidly behind the plan of Senator Bennett Champ Clark, Missouri Democrat, for a temporary extension, with sharp limitations.

Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, dispatched telegrams to a number of small business men in his own State, to ignore NRA codes in their intrastate business.

1. Extension of the NRA act for one year only.
2. Elimination of price-fixing from codes.
3. Elimination of intrastate business regulation.
4. Execution of codes by the

Steel Doubles Total Income

Deficit Cut by Two-Thirds Preferred Dividend of 50 Cents Paid.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 30.—Sharp improvement over the first three months of last year was indicated by three steel companies reporting today for the first quarter of 1935.

Although still some distance from the profit mark, United States Steel Corporation showed a sharp reduction in the size of its total deficit, from $12,035,818 in the preceding quarter to $3,975,206 in the quarter just closed. This compares with total deficit of $8,791,370 in the first quarter of 1934.

The 50-cent quarterly dividend on the preferred stock was maintained. Payments have been at this rate since January, 1933, when the dividend was cut from $1.75.

Total operating earnings for the first quarter amounted to $12,428,449, after ordinary operating expenses but before interest and charges for depletion, depreciation and obsolescence. This compared with operating income of $3,761,716 in the final three months of 1934 and $6,578,731 for the first quarter last year.

Reflecting in part the location of plants near automobile manufacturing centers, National Steel Corporation and Inland Steel Co. both scored wide gains in net over a year ago.

National Steel's earnings in the first quarter of $3,367,632 equaled $1.56 a share on the common stock, compared with $1,642,328, or 76 cents a share, in the like period last year.

Inland increased its dividend to 50 cents a share from the 25 cents a share paid in the previous three quarters.

Net earnings for the quarter of $2,465,796 equaled $2.05 a share, compared with $1,104,537, or 92 cents a share, in the March quarter of 1934.

U.S. Chamber Speakers Flay New Deal on Many Fronts

Underwood & Underwood.

Business Apprehensive of Interference, Warns Harriman.

By Felix Bruner.

Speeches at the opening sessions of the twenty-third annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States indicated yesterday that business leaders are farther from agreement with policies of the National Administration than in the past.

Much more outspoken than last year, in addressing the chamber's general meeting and a half-dozen group meetings, they criticized almost every emergency set-up under the New Deal.

Mildest of the speakers was Henry I. Harriman, retiring president of the chamber, but he declared that "business is justly apprehensive of the increasing interference of government in the affairs of business."

Most outspoken was Forney Johnston, Birmingham, Ala., attorney, who obtained a Federal court injunction against the Tennessee Valley Authority. He charged that President Roosevelt is using his power to nationalize American industry.

"Bungling" Charged.

Silas Strawn, former president of the Chamber of Commerce, attacked the NRA and declared, "I am bold enough to make the assertion that I do not believe the book boys can draft a constitutional NRA."

C. B. Ames, chairman of the board of the Texas Co., hit what he called "the bungling effort of Washington bureaucracy to regiment American business."

Harper Sibley, Rochester, N. Y., capitalist, who will be the new president of the Chamber of Commerce, told newspapermen that business leaders will fight every attempt by the Administration to impose changes on the Nation that are not confined strictly to temporary recovery projects. He said business feared that the Administration would build up a burden of taxation that the country would not be able to meet.

Harriman suggested the following as steps toward restoration of business confidence:

1. An assurance that Congress will adjourn soon and that thereafter major reform measures will await a revival of industry.
2. An international stabilization of currencies at the earliest possible date, so that foreign trade may move with less hazard.
3. A strong assurance that future devaluation of the dollar will not be used as a measure to restore prices.
4. Assurances of a definite and drastic reduction of government expenditures after the present emergency appropriations have been spent.

Chamber of Commerce committees already have gone on record opposing the Administration holding company legislation and amendments to the banking acts, Harriman expressed similar opposition, but said that some changes might be desirable.

"As I discuss with business men the measures comprising the New Deal I am impressed with the fact that the chief objection is not to the basic principles underlying many of these measures but to the extremes to which they are carried," he said.

Discussing in detail the NRA, of which he has been an advocate, Harriman said:

"It is my conviction that the scope of the act should have been definitely limited, either by law or by administration, to those large industries which are truly interstate or

Plane Breaks Record in Hop Across Nation

Spans U. S. in 11 Hrs. 5 Mins., to Set New Mark for Transport Ships.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 30.—A big twin-motored passenger plane whipped in from the West Coast at sundown tonight to establish a new transcontinental transport record of 11 hours and 5 minutes.

Despite dust and snow storms which forced a 20-minute detour at one point, the passenger Transcontinental & Western air liner, making an unheralded experimental flight, clipped 29 minutes off the record set by Leland Andrews in an American Airline plane February 21.

"I think this flight proves that non-stop commercial flights are very practical," said D. W. (Tommy) Tomlinson, who was at the controls when the ship landed at Floyd Bennett Field.

Leaves Unannounced.

The plane left Los Angeles unannounced at 7:45 a. m., (Eastern standard time), and was clocked in at 6:59 p. m.

Tomlinson said the ship was held to its course by an automatic pilot 80 per cent of the time between the two coasts. He looked "fresh as a daisy," field observers said, when he stepped out of the cabin with an explanation of surprise at finding a crowd of 250 awaiting him.

He attained a maximum speed of 262 miles an hour, but had to slow down once when ice began forming on the propellers, he said. He "knew all the way" that they were ahead of the record time, he added.

"We had a tough time of it over Durango, near the Continental Divide, in Colorado," he related. "We ran into a terrific storm—ice, snow and sleet.

"We were 1 ton over loaded with gasoline and I couldn't climb over the storm, so I had to turn South. We lost about 20 minutes by the detour and we literally flew through the mountains.

Bogus Bills Net Two at Pimlico

Canadians Arrested, $290 in Fake Notes Found.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 30.—Two Canadians were arrested here today on charges of having passed counterfeit money at Pimlico Race Track.

One of the men, who said he was Leonard Phillips, 29, of Hamilton, Ontario, was nabbed after a two-block chase by track officials and police through the crowds at the track. The other, who said he was Earl Stewart, 28, of Dundas, Ontario, made no attempt to run.

Police said that track guards, city police and Secret Service operatives were on the lookout for counterfeit money at the track today. Two phoney $10 bills were passed there yesterday.

The charges against Stewart and Phillips were preferred by Bart Bratton, head of the Secret Service here. Police said the two men had $290 in counterfeit money, all in $10 notes, when arrested. They also had $29 in good American money and $7 in good Canadian currency.

WorkProgram Still Awaiting Word to Start

The Administration's $4,880,000,000 work-relief program was still waiting yesterday for a "go-ahead" order from the White House.

In spite of the President's announcements, outlining an elaborate set-up, no executive order has been issued actually creating the organization.

Meanwhile, with the exception of the CCC and PWA, where Secretary Ickes has "jumped the gun" in asking for proposed projects, not a wheel was turning in the machine that is designed to put 3,500,000 persons to work.

The CCC was going ahead under an allotment of $220,000,000. This represented an addition of $190,000,000 to the original allotment made by the President at the time he signed the bill. The only other allotment thus far made is $150,000,000 to the Emergency Relief Administration for direct relief.

Board Not Set Up Yet.

The allotment board itself has not been set up. Secretary Ickes will head it and some of its members have been designated, but no official appointments have been made.

The Division of Applications and Information, where all applications for works funds are expected to be received as the first step in getting the program moving, still was awaiting an executive order to bring it officially into existence. The division will be headed by Frank C. Walker.

No regulations have been issued governing this organizations. Blanks on which applications may be filed have not been printed. The only applications being received are those of people who want clerical jobs. Nobody is being hired. Three thousand such applications have been received and filed.

The same is true with the Progress Division, to be headed by Harry L. Hopkins, now emergency relief administrator. Mr. Hopkins has not been officially appointed as head of the new division.

No Orders Received.

The same situation exists in the Rural Resettlement Division, to be headed by Undersecretary Rexford G. Tugwell, and the heads of the new divisions to have charge of rural electrification and grade crossing elimination have not been designated. The 60 Government departments charged with carrying on part of the work have not received their orders.

Meanwhile, representatives of States, municipalities, counties, corporations and individuals are arriving daily to learn how they can get some of the works money. Each one is told the same thing:

"We are waiting for executive orders from the White House"

The conference committee report sending the works bill to the President was adopted April 5. Many thought the wheels would start turning immediately. The bill had been introduced in Congress last January.

Delayed Announcing Plans.

But, while the country waited, President Roosevelt delayed announcement of his plans until last week. This was only an announcement and not an order. Persons interested in starting work-relief are hoping that the order, or series of orders, will come soon. No explanation of the delay has been given.

Meanwhile, PWA representatives in the States, on orders from Secretary Ickes, are receiving applications for work allotments. But Secretary Ickes said frankly yesterday

Mellon Hits Morgenthau On Tax Case

Accuses Cabinet Officer of Trying to Interfere With Justice.

Politics Charged in Approval of Jackson's Conduct of Suit.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, April 30.—Andrew W. Mellon tonight charged Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., with making a "crude effort to interfere with the administration of justice," upon learning a telegram from the Secretary concerning the $3,089,000 Mellon income tax case now before the Board of Tax Appeals Board had been made public.

Morgenthau's telegram placed his stamp of approval on Government Counsel Robert H. Jackson's procedure against Mellon, telling him to continue "with no abatement in the vigor of your efforts to get at the simple truth * * * or in your insistence that they (business transactions) shall be judged by the standards of common business honesty."

Jackson had appealed to his chief after Ernest H. Van Fossan, presiding member of the board, rejected a brief in which he had attacked the position of privilege taken by Paul G. Rodewald, a witness, who refused to surrender certain correspondence. Frank J. Hogan, Mellon's counsel, said he waived any privilege in the matter, but he supported Rodewald's position in a 6,500-word brief.

Mr. Mellon said:

"I have refrained, during the trial of this case, from any public comment, secure in the feeling that the entire controversy had finally reached a judicial body that could be depended upon to render a decision based upon truth rather than upon innuendo.

"In spite of tactics pursued in high Government circles, when this matter was before the grand jury and when that grand jury refused to be intimidated and to return an indictment, I had assumed that the administrative officers would be willing to try the case before this impartial tribunal as I have been.

"Any invasion of my personal rights as a citizen is of relative unimportance. But when the Secretary of the Treasury, a member of the President's Cabinet, descends to a public attempt to influence a matter now on trial before a duly constituted court that action is a crude effort to interfere with the administration of justice, and a continuation of the political efforts of his administration in my case."

Hal Sevier Resigns As Envoy to Chile

By the Associated Press.

Hal Sevier, American Ambassador to Chile, was disclosed last night to have resigned from the diplomatic service and will return to the United States on Saturday.

State Department officials confirmed reports from Santiago that Sevier, who has been ill nearly a year, had decided it would be necessary for him to retire to restore his health. His home is in Corpus Christi, Tex.

State Department officials said no one had been designated to succeed him.

Sevier, for years a newspaperman, was vice president of the Corpus Christi Bank & Trust Co., and a director of the Corpus Christi National Bank when he was named Ambassador by President Roosevelt in 1933.

Roosevelt Note Denies Air Threat to Canada; Warns of Censorship

Britain Seen Joining Foes Of Germany

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

London, April 30.—Britain tonight seemed veering definitely toward union with those nations openly opposed to Germany's swift, surprising re-armament.

This was the situation foreseen in competent quarters as proposed Anglo-German naval conversations stood "adjourned" until after Adolf Hitler's statement on foreign policy, expected May 15.

These quarters declared it was now up to Hitler to make the next move if he hoped to keep Great Britain in her role of "good neighbor" and "honest broker" as concerns the Continent's troubles.

While French officials openly voiced hopes of negotiating bilateral air agreements with England, Italy and Belgium and the authoritative Italian newspaper, Giornale d'Italia laid bare Germany's asserted "big navy" program for 1935-1936, the British government fixed its attention on Hitler's forthcoming statement.

Fuehrer's Play.

Future developments in the tense arms situation, the British were described as believing, will depend upon what the German Fuehrer does toward clearing the atmosphere surcharged first by Germany's army and air expansion and then the revelation of renewed submarine construction—a revelation even startling to the British people, whose memory of the depredations of German U-boats during the World War is still fresh.

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, Lord President of the Council Stanley Baldwin and other members of the cabinet will make decisions tomorrow on the momentous questions arising from the submarine "bombshell."

After today's postponement of the Anglo-German naval conversations, speculation arose as to whether Great Britain might not cancel them entirely. Persons in close touch with the situation, however, expressed the opinion that was not likely.

In the House of Commons Geoffrey Mander, Liberal, flatly demanded to know whether the government did not think it would be useless to proceed with the conversations.

No Answer Given.

Vice Admiral Sir Hugh J. Tweedie, speaking at the annual meeting of the Union Jack Club, placed the blame for the whole European situation squarely on Hitler.

"It may be that all of us in the (armed) services are going to see hard times," he said.

REP. JOHN J. McSWAIN.

Letter to McSwain Hits Revelation of Secret Testimony.

Step to Arm Border Hotly Repudiated

White House Action Held Gesture to Placate Dominion.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

President Roosevelt yesterday administered a sharp rebuke to Chairman John J. McSwain for action of the House Military Affairs Committee in publicly printing "off-the-record" testimony of Army officers.

In a terse letter to the South Carolinian, he also moved to smooth over what threatened to become an international irritant by repudiating those portions of the testimony of two high ranking officers which might give offense to United States neighbors.

Pointedly, he informed McSwain that if the committee persists in publishing information given it in executive session by military leaders then he, as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, will find it necessary to censor such testimony.

Favored Arming Frontier.

The evidence to which Mr. Roosevelt took exception was given last February by Brig. Gen. Charles E. Kilbourne, former assistant chief of staff, and Brig. Gen. F. M. Andrews, new head of the General Headquarters Air Force.

A printed transcript of a supposedly secret session of the committee came to light over the week-end, disclosing that Gen. Kilbourne had favored an indirect arming of the Canadian frontier and that Gen. Andrews had discussed necessity of being able to "seize" French and British Islands near American shores.

Immediate reaction was two-sided. Temperatures at the War Department reached the boiling point and the Canadian legation called on the State Department for a copy of the committee's transcript—a request which was complied with.

Roosevelt's Note Stiff.

The White House then stepped into the situation by making public a letter from Roosevelt to Secretary of War George H. Dern, which inclosed a copy of the stiff note to Chairman McSwain. The President's letter to the committee chairman, written Monday, follows:

"My Dear Mr. Chairman:

"My attention has been called to 'Hearings before Committee on Military Affairs, House of Representatives, on H. R. 6621 and H. R. 4130.' This public document includes apparently a full report of an executive session of the committee of which you are chairman.

"It is necessary for me most respectfully to call to your attention and that of your committee the fact that if the testimony in executive session is printed in public documents in the same way as testimony in open session, I shall find it necessary as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy to require that in the future such testimony be given only after approval by me.

"Referring to page 16 of this printed document, I desire to inform your committee that certain portions of the testimony of Gen. Kilbourne, especially those relating to the Canadian border, do not represent either the policy of this Administration or that of the Commander in Chief.

"In the statement of Gen. F. M. Andrews, many portions of said statement, especially those relating to the territory of friendly nations, in Canada, in the Atlantic and in the West Indies, do not represent the policy of the Administration or of the Commander in Chief.

"I can go further and state that they do not reflect the views, purposes or motives of the United States Government. This Government does not in any of its plans or policies envisage the possibility of a change in the friendly rela-

France Quits Trade Stand; Will Bargain

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

On the eve of the initiation of the first real test of this country's reciprocal trade program, Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday announced that France had agreed to negotiate such a pact with this Government on the basis of the most-favored-nation principle.

The reciprocal trade agreement between Belgium and the United States becomes effective today. Under that agreement 60 nations of the world as well as Belgium will enjoy a reduction in the American tariff averaging 24 per cent on 47 articles.

In exchange, American exporters will benefit from a reduction in the Belgian duty averaging 35 per cent on 22 commodities. In addition Belgium has granted increased quotas on certain American products.

Belgian First General Pact.

The Belgian pact is first of a world-wide nature to come into effect. Under the reciprocal trade program, four agreements have been signed—with Cuba, Brazil, Haiti and Belgium.

The Cuban pact came into effect last September, but is a preferential agreement, outside of the general scope of these arrangements and applying chiefly to trade with the insular republic and this country. The Brazilian and Haitian agreements have not been ratified.

Consequently, operation of the Belgian agreement will be watched closely, both by friends of the Hull program and by high-protectionists who disapprove such lowering of tariff walls. Special attention will be given to determine whether third countries, to which the concessions to Belgium have been generalized, will derive a greater benefit than Belgium and whether imports from those countries prove injurious to domestic industry—questions now warmly debated in trade circles.

U. S. Diplomatic Victory.

The announcement that France had agreed to enter into formal negotiations with this country over a trade pact was regarded as a diplomatic victory for the United States. It was hailed with general satisfaction throughout the Administration for several reasons.

First, value of trade between this country and France is larger than that with any other country with which a trade agreement has been proposed or concluded, except Canada. France ranks fifth among nations as a buyer of American goods and ninth as a source of supply for this country. Rehabilitation of Franco-American trade may do much to relieve the depressed condition of cotton planters by restoring to them a valuable market.

The announcement was hailed with satisfaction, secondly, because it presaged an end to French discrimination against American products. The proposed agreement will require unconditional most-favored-nation treatment. This country has not had such an agreement with France, with the result that French import quotas and other devices to restrict imports frequently have discriminated against this country.

This situation became so bad that a month ago, when President Roosevelt announced that benefits of the Belgian agreement would be gen-

Crime Factory Gang Linked With N. Y. Raid On Armored Truck Netting $425,000 Loot

Million-Dollar Holdups Laid to 23 Suspects Being Grilled.

By the United Press.

Providence, R. I., April 30.—Carl Rettich and his alleged co-conspirators in the $130,000 Fall River, Mass., mail truck robbery seemed linked with the $425,000 Brooklyn armored truck robbery at a surprise arraignment here tonight.

Rettich and his brother-in-law, Ira Steele, occupants of the mansion-like Warwick "crime factory," were arraigned before United States Commissioner Fred A. Otis in connection with the mail robbery, and both pleaded not guilty.

Featuring the arraignment, however, was the appearance of a third surprise defendant, 30-year-old Robert E. Demarest, of New York, suspect not only in the Fall River robbery but also in the big Brooklyn holdup and a $50,000 mail-truck robbery at Butler, Pa.

Investigators say that Demarest was tied up with the Warwick "crime syndicate" and that its operatives worked not only in New England but throughout the East.

Confined to Providence County Jail on a drug charge, he resisted officers and tried to flee last night while being taken away for questioning in connection with the Warwick revelations. It was on a charge of resisting officers that he was arraigned tonight, and recommitted to jail in lieu of $10,000 bail.

Bail of $125,000 was set for Rettich, and it can not be accepted until 5 p. m. tomorrow. If furnished then, an additional charge will be placed against him.

Steele furnished $25,000 bail and was released.

Rettich, Steele and Demarest will appear in court for hearing on May 14.

Reading of the conspiracy indictments against Rettich and Steele disclosed that the men alleged to have plotted the Fall River holdup with them are Joseph Fisher, now in jail on an automobile charge, the slain Andino Merola, and Herbert H. Hornstein, all of Providence.

Hornstein, it was learned, has been arrested in Los Angeles and is en route here. It was Hornstein, authorities allege, who fraudulently registered the get-away car used in the Fall River mail-truck robbery.

Rettich, whose surrender late yesterday occurred almost simultaneously with the unearthing of added robbery loot, bones and bloodstains at his fortress-like estate, was nervous and shaky at the arraignment and Steele was even worse.

Steele in a lengthy grilling today was said to have given authorities valuable information concerning operations of the crime syndicate. Authorities continued their relentless grilling of all 23 alleged members of the million-dollar criminal gang.

Though the courthouse was not open to the public, Federal employes, newspapermen and those concerned with the case filled the courtroom at the arraignment. Several hundred persons gathered outside and on emerging Rettich, handcuffed to a marshal, covered his face with a handkerchief.

Probers Still Searching Rhode Island Mansion for Bodies, Cash.

Already $20,000 in postal robbery "swag" and fragments of human bones have been uncovered by ERA workers digging with picks and shovels in the mansion leased by Rettich.

Digging in a field adjoining the foreboding house, ten Federal agents and State police this afternoon uncovered a shotgun case, a quilt and a rug. The quilt and rug bore spots which appeared to be blood. Dr. Charles Rounds, State pathologist, took them over for analysis.

Late today the rear veranda was to be torn down by the excavators, who next were to rip apart subcellars and walls which gave up $8,000 of the registered mail money. On the theory that more of the loot is cached elsewhere, the walls of a vault in a garage at the rear of the mansion also were to be demolished.

Other crimes in connection with which the mob is being investigated are:

Murder of Danny Walsh, beer runner, whose disappearance long has been a mystery.

Murder of two gangsters believed to have been associated with the mob.

Praise of Ickes Rings as House Votes Him Aid

New Under-Secretary to Work-Relief Official Is Sanctioned.

By the Associated Press.

House Democrats yesterday sang a paean of praise to Secretary Ickes—who has just been put in charge of allotments out of the $4,000,000,000 work-relief fund—and voted to let him have a new $10,000-a-year under-secretary.

For two weeks there had been talk that the Secretary of the Interior should be reminded that Congress does have some power. Representative Woodrum (Democrat of Virginia), who has a lot of friends in the House, told newspapermen he was going to fight the attempt to give Ickes a new aid.

The flareup reached such proportions that House Democratic leaders declared hands off, fearful of defeat. But when the roll was called yesterday, the vote for the new under-secretary was 243 to 92—and Woodrum voted "present."

Accepts Senate Proposal.

The vote meant that the House had accepte da Senate amendment to the $60,000,000 Interior Department annual appropriation bill permitting employment of the new $10,000-a-year man.

In the House debate only one Democrat—Representative Truax, of Ohio—said an unkind word about Ickes. He was not allotted time to speak, but he arose to ask Representative Buchanan (Democrat), of Texas, this:

"If Ickes spent more time looking after his duties and not criticizing persons who advocate share-the-wealth programs, wouldn't he have more time to perform his own job?"

"The gentleman will have to answer that himself," Buchanan answered.

Nothing was said about it in the debate, but a couple of members afterward remarked—enviously and privately—that since Truax was a Representative-at-Large from Ohio and had no congressional district, he could not expect money to be allocated to his congressional district.

His Praises Resound.

Here are some of the Democratic words of praise for the Interior Secretary, who has been criticized frequently by members for a lack of courtesy to them:

Representative Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina: "He is a man of outstanding ability. * * * Nothing would be more unjustified than to say Secretary Ickes could not be trusted."

Representative Keller (Democrat), of Illinois: "I've known Harold L. Ickes for 25 years. If he didn't need this man he wouldn't ask for him."

Gum-Shoeing the Works Program; Leaky Army War Plans; Is Christianson's Face Red?

By Raymond Clapper

STATE and local relief officials are flocking in like starlings to find out what is expected of them under the new works program. Eagerly and expectantly they make the rounds.

They go to the office of Frank C. Walker, chairman of the works application and information division. They find many applications, mostly for jobs, and no information. The sign painters alone seem to have their work definitely mapped out.

They go to PWA but learn that Mr. Ickes is receiving applications for projects only on an as, if and when basis. He has plenty of storage space and is accepting the papers, but he hasn't found out yet what to do with them.

They go to the Agriculture Department to find out about rural work relief projects but there is nothing to give out.

At Harry Hopkins' FERA office, the nerve center of the works plan, they meet with little more luck. Occasionally a visiting relief official, with personal acquaintance, is persistent in his quest for information, and he may be taken mysteriously into a back room, where a desk is unlocked and a few papers containing tentative plans may be shown him under seal of heavy confidence. But he is told that nothing is decided and he is being shown the papers only as a personal favor to give him some idea of what they are working on.

So the eager visitor, who is by this time worn down to his last bunion, wires back home:

No executive orders have been issued setting up the new machinery. Mr. Roosevelt has dipped into the $4,880,000,000 fund for FERA and CCC money, but that is all that has happened officially. Plans for the new set-up have been announced in the press, but no official has any authority to act until an executive order comes through from the White House.

Congress completed the works bill April 5, almost a month ago. The delay in putting this measure into effects, in contrast to the high speed with which the Administration has acted on other emergency legislation, is puzzling in Washington, especially since the bill was introduced, in substantially the form in which it passed, last January. Conferences looking to substitution of work relief for the dole began back about Thanksgiving time.

One impatient person observed yesterday: "Mr. Roosevelt said the program would strike its peak in November, but he didn't say what year."

* * * *

A book is about to be published dealing with alleged censorship of the press at Washington and the Administration publicity setup. It is written under a pen name and simultaneously with its publication a Republican Senator will introduce a resolution asking a Senate investigation of the Government publicity machinery.

* * * *

In a sharp letter to the chairman of the House Miliary Affairs Committee, President Roosevelt deplores publication of testimony by Army officers regarding Army war plans for seizing, in the event of trouble, British and French islands near American shores, and disavows the testimony as not representing the policy of the Government. The testimony was given in executive session and later made public.

Army officers always have been nervous about discussing war plans before congressional committees even in executive session. They say that Senators and Representatives ask theoretical questions as to what they would do under certain conditions. The officers, drawing on the secret plans which the United States as well as every other country has, answer the questions. Sometimes it leaks out. Then everyone runs to cover.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, has a neat trick for reducing the chances of an embarrassing leak. When a Representative asks him one of those hypothetical war questions, Gen. MacArthur reaches over to the official stenographer and borrows his pen. Then he scribbles on a note pad while he gives his answer, keeping one eye on the stenographer to see that he doesn't find another pen and start taking notes. Thus the general makes sure there is no written record of what he says.

Army and Navy secret war plans frequently bob up to cause trouble. They have plans drawn for every conceivable combination of enemies. Mostly this is to give the officers exercise and keep them in practice rather than due to any practical expectation that the plans ever will be needed.

However, the present case seems to go somewhat further, which is what caused the severe embarrassment to the President. Part of the military testimony complained of by Mr. Roosevelt dealt with an intermediate air station for transcontinental flights near the Canadian border. This was a camouflaged provision in the pending Wilcox bill designating several strategic centers for defensive aviation centers. It was later eliminated because, even as disguised, it smacked too much of military preparation on the Canadian border. That wasn't so theoretical. Hence the presidential spanking.

Representative Theodore Christianson, of Minnesota, the speaker at the New England Republican rally in Boston last night, was just slightly embarrassed by New Deal trouble. New Deal trouble is what a number of Republican Senators and Representatives are suffering from during the present attempts to revive the party. It is an intestinal trouble, due to having voted earlier for New Deal measures which are now on the Republican naughty, naughty list.

Representative Christianson voted for AAA. So he had to tell his New England audience that the act, but not the way it has been administered, had much to commend it. He also voted for the Bankhead cotton control bill, the compulsory restriction measure which marked the zenith of regimentation. He said bluntly that this act should be repealed.

Probably no one in that New England audience, which is right now on a rampage against AAA and the cotton processing tax, knew that the speaker it was cheering voted for both of those measures.

Passing on to NRA, Representative Christianson was able to speak with fewer inhibitions. He voted against it and he gave the old Blue Eagle the works!

Republicans here who had read his address in advance regarded it as an excellent job, considering all of the difficulties, especially in bridging the chasm between Western farm belt Republicans and Easterners.

Incidentally, Christianson was the only member of the Minnesota delegation to vote against the bonus. But the Republican rally was no place to dwell on that. As a matter of fact, Christianson, as Governor of Minnesota, was a hound for economy. Running as a Republican in a Minneapolis district, he broke into Congress against the Roosevelt landslide in 1932 and repeated last year.

Secretary of State Hull has reason to believe he is making headway in Maine as a result of his recent warning to potato growers there to beware of being made tools for tariff lobbyists in Washington.

One farmer, with typical Down East brevity, wrote in this comment:

"Mr. Hull seems to have told us to tend to our potatoes and he'll tend to the Ship of State. Sounds like good advice."

Code Clerk Held As N. Y. Fugitive

A code authority employe was arrested yesterday as a fugitive from justice. Employed here the last year and a half, Cameron Hartwell Pulley, 49, of the 800 block of Connecticut avenue northwest, put up $500 bond and said he would fight extradition.

The charge against Pulley is grand larceny. Detective Sergts. Joe Shimon and Richard Cox arrested him at request of New York police.

From New York an Associated Press dispatch said Pulley was accused, according to Acting Capt. William Waters of the forgery squad, of cashing a worthless $250 check. The dispatch said he was arrested in September, 1932, released on bail and did not appear for an adjourned hearing.

LeBlanc Goes to Face Canadian Robbery Trial

The dapper suspect, held here since his arrest as a fugitive several weeks ago, waived extradition and was turned over to Canadian authorities. He was taken into custody with his wife in a fashionable Connecticut avenue apartment after his whereabouts were learned by a Baltimore private deteetive agency. His wife was questioned and later released.

Injured by Flying Glass.

Mrs. Alice M. Hall, 71, of 1236 Eleventh street northwest, was injured slightly yesterday when a plate glass window was smashed by high winds in the 400 block of Seventh street northwest.

Law Enacted in Cuba To Execute Kidnapers

Havana, April 30 (AP).—President Carlos Mendieta today signed the Falla law, the Cuban counterpart of the American Lindbergh law, making kidnaping punishable by death.

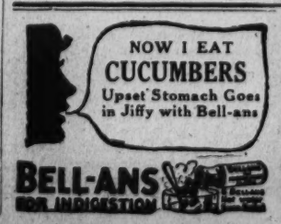
It is named after Eutimio Falla Bonet, who was recently kidnaped and released after payment of a large ransom.

The decree provides for the death penalty for "persons who prepare or execute a kidnaping of one or more persons, regardless of the purpose of the kidnaping, or for any person who knowingly abets kidnapers in any form." The clause relative to giving aid is effective only if the kidnaping is actually accomplished.

Reich Discounts Fear Over the Submarines

Berlin, April 30 (U.P.).—The German reaction to the British submarine scare was summed up by the newspaper Der Angriff (The Attack) today:

"We wonder whether Britain's fear of the U-boats is genuine? These alarmist stories seem rather intended to afford an opportunity to unleash wild armament propaganda in the House of Commons on Thursday."



Peace League Fete to Attract Many Notables

Mrs. Roosevelt and Ickes to Speak at Dinner for Jane Addams.

Many prominent governmental and diplomatic officials will be among those to pay tribute to Jane Addams, widely known social welfare worker, tomorrow night in the Willard Hotel.

The affair marks Miss Addams' seventy-fifth birthday anniversary, and will also celebrate the twentieth anniversary of the founding of the Women's International League.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, and Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, will be principal speakers.

Among those who have already reserved tables for the dinner, or will bring guests in small party groups are: the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington; Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasury, and Mrs. Morgenthau; Senor Dr. Don Francisco Castillo Najera, Mexican Ambassador, and Madame Najera; Hirosi Saito, Japanese Ambassador, and Madame Saito; Alexander Troyanovsky, Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and Madame Troyanovsky; Judge Fay Bentley, of the Juvenile Court; Mary Anderson, Chief of the Woman's Bureau, Department of Labor; and Mrs. Ernest Gruening.

Others expected to be present are Mrs. Hiram Bingham, Mrs. Gerard Swope, Miss Jo Coffin, Miss Kathleen Lowry, Mrs. Gardner Hammond, Mrs. Charles B. Howry, Edward Filene, Senator Arthur Capper, Miss Doris Stevens, Mrs. C. P. Reynolds, Mrs. E. C. Cole, Miss Maude E. Aiton, Mrs. Emile Berliner, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Bonsal, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. Avery Coonley, Mrs. John F. Folinsbee, Mrs. Gilson Gardner, Lillian Herstein, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Keating, Mrs. C. C. Lippincott, Mrs. Walter E. Meyer, Miss Mary McDowell, Belle Sherwin, Dr. Louise Stanley, Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, Mrs. Lionel Sutro, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Mrs. Thomas S. Louisiana Spurns $7,00,000 Bridge Project Canceled in Battle of Long and Ickes.

By the Associated Press.

Baton Rouge, La., April 30.—A $7,000,000 Mississippi River bridge proposed for Baton Rouge was stricken today from the list of Public Works Administration projects in the war between Senator Huey P. Long and the national administration.

At the same time Long's State administration forces took complete command of the police and fire departments in the City of New Orleans, where the Long machine is tugging away at the rival administration of Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley.

A. P. Tugwell, chairman of the Louisiana Highway Commission, a leading figure in Long's State organization, announced that the bridge had been abandoned because Secretary Harold L. Ickes, at odds with Long over Louisiana Public Works funds, had insisted upon handling the project by the PWA instead of the Federal Bureau of Roads.

Tugwell said Ickes had canceled a $4,000,000 loan and grant by the PWA for the $7,000,000 bridge and that the State would use a $3,000,000 allotment it had made for the bridge to put men to work extending the Louisiana paved roads system.

Shriners' Parade Will Last 3 Hours

350 New Autos Assured for Order's Officials.

The Shrine parade, a feature of the conclave to be held here from une 9 to 15, will last from three and a half to four hours, James C. Hoyle, executive secretary of the Shrine committee disclosed yesterday.

Hoyle also announced that the committee has accepted the offer of General Motors to supply 350 new automobiles, which will be used as official cars during the convention. The cars were tendered by J. B. Woodside, manager of the Washington office of the General Motors fleet sales division.

While General Motors is supplying the drivers, it was said, they will be placed under the direct supervision of the automobile committee, of which Herman Carl is chairman. There will be no "hop in Shriners" cars this year, as the committee proposes no interference with the taxi business.

Radicals to Rally Here Today; Europe Tensed for Violence

No Disorders Expected to Mar Capital's Day of Celebrations.

A pot-pourri of maypole dancing, athletic contests and child health exercises, seasoned with Communist and Socialist rallies in Franklin Park, are on the Capital's May Day bill of fare.

Celebrations by so-called radical groups are scheduled today in New York, Cleveland and other American industrial cities, as well as most of the European capitals, but Washington will offer only two outdoor programs of a political nature and neither is expected to cause police any trouble.

At 11 a. m. Mrs. Roosevelt, in observance of Child Health Day, will receive a delegation of school children at the White House. From 1:30 to 6 p. m. the city's 39 municipal playgrounds will teem with youngsters playing games, taking efficiency tests and singing songs.

Physical Tests Planned.

At 13 public schools physical examinations, conducted under auspices of parent-teacher associations, will be given boys and girls who will enter the first grade next September.

Lectures will be delivered in McKinley, Western and Dunbar high schools as part of the anti-tuberculosis campaign which is being pushed by the District Health Department and the District Tuberculosis Association.

Most elaborate of the children's exercises will be held at Wheatley School, Montello avenue and Neal street northeast, beginning at 1 p. m. More than 700 pupils will participate in the program, which will include the crowning of the May queen, Maypole dancing and a Japanese pageant.

From 9 a. m. to 10:30 a. m., four physicians and two dentists will be in attendance at Wheatley School, examining children of pre-school age. Other schools featuring this service today are Bancroft, Burroughs, Maury, Blow-Webb, Langdon, Woodridge, Brookland, Adams, Barnard, Park View, Truesdell and Whittier.

To Throng Playgrounds.

Playgrounds will be given over to children under six from 1:30 to 3 p. m. They will play games, sing songs, march in health parades and hear talks on personal hygiene.

Athletic efficiency tests will be conducted from 3:30 to 4:45 p. m., with youngsters competing for bronze, silver and gold buttons.

A father-son program, which is being introduced for the first time, will wind up the day's activities on the playgrounds, beginning at 4:45 and continuing until 6 p. m. Together they will play horseshoes, quoits, soft ball and other games and listen to health talks by playground directors.

Pamphlets were issued yesterday by "The Communist Party, U. S. A." to stir interest in the demonstration which will be held in Franklin Park at 3:30 p. m. They contained charges against capitalism, NRA, the work relief program, racial discrimination and the Civilian Conservation Corps.

A Socialist rally is scheduled to be held in the same place at 8 p. m. Permits for both demonstrations were issued by the office of National Capital Parks.

100,000 to Rally in New York.

Meanwhile plans were completed last night in New York, according to the Associated Press, for separate celebrations by Socialists and Communists in which a total of 100,000 persons are expected to participate. The Socialist parade will disband in Central Park, the Communist in Union Square.

Lewis J. Valentine, New York police commissioner, has assigned 1,100 patrolmen, commanded by 20 captains and 100 sergeants, to parade duty. One hundred mounted men will be available to preserve order. None will carry night sticks.

May Day has been chosen for the inaugural of the nature walk series, conducted by Arthur Stupka, Federal parks naturalist, under sponsorship of the office of National Capital Parks.

The first hike will start at 1:30 p. m. from Pierce Mill in Rock Creek Park. Parties will meet at Pierce Mill daily through Sunday, trips beginning at 1:30, 3 and 4:30 p. m.

1 Slain, 50 Wounded In Riot at Sarajevo

Zagreb, Yugoslavia, April 30 (U.P.).—One man was killed and 50 men, women and children wounded tonight in an election campaign riot at Sarajevo. Police and gendarmes fired on the mobs with rifles and charged with bayonets before they could break up the fighting.

The riots broke out when the police ordered a Mohammedan leader, Mehemet Spaho, to dissolve his meeting because the authorities objected to his manner of campaigning.

Pre-May Day Clashes Occur as Capitals Abroad Hold Tropos Ready.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

London, April 30.—Omens of violence appeared in Spain, France and Austria tonight as Europe's police took elaborate precautions on the eve of the annual May Day celebrations.

All over the Continent the authorities were wary, fearing the day, originally designated for peaceful labor festivities, would bring disorders. This was the situation:

Madrid—In a Communist demonstration at Madrid yesterday, a woman was wounded; police at Seville jailed ten Communists and Barcelona authorities seized four asserted reds, armed with chloroform and stilettoes, whom they charged planned to assassinate Gen. Lopez Ochoa, who was instrumental in putting down the leftist revolt in October.

Paris Holds Troops Ready.

Paris—With outdoor meetings banned, thousands of troops and police were held ready to prevent disorders in connection with 50 indoor radical meetings in the capital and many more in the provinces.

Vienna—Austrian leftists planned "lightning strategy" demonstrations against the Schuschnigg government, which offered free goulash and movies as counter attractions while holding armed forces ready to control demonstrators. Fascists clashed with radicals rehearsing in Vienna's outskirts.

Moscow—Joseph Stalin, Soviet dictator, made ready to review picked detachments of the huge Red army, numbering in all nearly 1,000,000 men, as the Communist Internationale, asking workers everywhere to join May Day demonstrations, declared humanity is approaching another world war.

1,000,000 Nazis to Meet.

Berlin — Reichsfuehrer Adolph Hitler's scheduled address at Tempelhof Airdrome, where 1,000,000 Nazis were expected to gather, dominated the Reich's preparations for Labor Day. Hitler was expected to review the army's conscript plans and perhaps touch on the international situation.

Rome—Italian police received orders to suppress any demonstrations tomorrow promptly. Italy's Labor Day was celebrated Sunday.

Elsewhere over the Continent nations sought means to keep May Day demonstrations from developing into riots.

Britain Not to Interfere.

British police expected to follow their usual policy of non-interference with soap-box oratory; The Netherlands decided to segregate Socialist and Communist demonstrators; Belgium's Socialists, now in the government, planned quiet street demonstrations and meetings, with the only trouble expected from Communists; Hungary prohibited all meetings and parades.

King Carol of Rumania followed Austria's example of proffering counter attractions, ordering elaborate military displays. Bulgaria planned special repressive measures for Communists.

Yugoslavia's government believed interest in parliamentary elections to be held May 5 would overshadow interest in May Day.

Death Takes Daughter Of Mormon Colonizer

Salt Lake City, April 30 (AP).—Mrs. Maria Y. Dougall, 84, oldest surviving daughter of Brigham Young, second President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and leader of the Mormon colonists into Utah, died of a heart attack at her home here today.

Until recent years she was prominent in Latter Day Saints activities. Survivors include four sisters and two brothers, all who now remain of the family of 56 children born to Brigham Young and his 19 wives.

Silver Price Steaded At 75 to 76 Cts. Ounce

By the Associated Press.

Closely watching shifting monetary developments, the Treasury last night found world silver prices far enough below its own offer for domestic metal to permit another overnight stand at the present level.

With the Government paying 77.57 cents an ounce for the product of United States mines, prices on the commercial markets reached a turning point in their short-lived recession but hung steadily between 75 and 76 cents an ounce.

Bragg Denies Violation Of Healing Arts Act

Prof. Paul C. Bragg, health lecturer and self-styled authority on physical ills, took the witness stand in Police Court yesterday to deny charges of violating the District healing arts practice act. It was the third day of his trial.

The professor described himself as an exponent of health—"obtained only by good food, sunshine, fresh air and right living." He denied accusations that he attempted to diagnose or cure physical ills.

Six other witnesses were heard. All testified they attended the professor's lectures, but never heard him offer to cure or diagnose ills.

NRA Validity Is Challenged As Test Opens

Arguments on Tomorrow in Poultry Case in Supreme Court.

Defendants in the now famous test case of NRA, which will be argued before the United States Supreme Court beginning tomorrow, filed a 203-page brief yesterday challenging the entire theory of the recovery act as a flagrant, unconstitutional abuse of power.

Frederick H. Wood, Joseph and Jacob Heller, counsel for the A. L. A. Schechter Poultry Corporation, of New York, filed the brief which bristles with attack on NRA codes as attempts "to regulate human activities literally from the cradle to the grave."

The Government's brief was sent to the printer last night by Donald R. Richberg, chairman of the NRA Board, and Stanley Reed, Solicitor General, who will argue the Government's side of the case.

The Schechters were indicted on 60 counts, 27 of which were knocked out on demurrer. On the remaining 33, they were acquitted on 14 and convicted on 19. On appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals, convictions were affirmed on 17 counts, but set aside on the two vital counts covering maximum hours and minimum wages.

Assails Code.

The pending case, up on appeal, was substituted by the Government for the so-called Belcher case to make a test of the constitutionality of the all-important issue of the Government's power, under the interstate commerce clause, to impose codes.

The defendants' brief assails the poultry code, which took effect April 23, 1934, as an unlawful "abdication" of the legislative powers of Congress, as an attempt to stretch the commerce clause to reach into intrastate affairs, as destructive of State rights and a violation of due process of law.

"The President," says the brief, "has no more power to make laws than administrative bodies have. It is, therefore, plain from the essential nature of the code itself and the manner of its enactment that the formulation and promulgation of the code of fair competition for the live poultry industry involved a complete abdication of the legislative power of Congress."

Hot Oil Decision Cited.

Citing the Supreme Court's recent "hot oil" decision holding that Congress unlawfully tried to delegate its legislative powers to the Executive, the brief states that in the poultry case "the delegation of legislative power by Congress to the President is much more flagrant, for nowhere in the recovery act has Congress declared any policy whatsoever, no matter how indefinite or vague, to govern these operations (intrastate slaughtering and selling operations by the Schechters)."

"To make matters worse," the brief goes on, "Congress has nowhere stated in the recovery act what shall and what shall not be considered 'fair competition' within that industry and within any industry. It has not even announced any standard or criterion of fair competition, no matter how indefinite. The statute baldly attempts to empower the President, with or without the assistance of trade associations, to write the law of fair competition which shall govern all those engaged in an industry, with their consent or without it."

Held Unconstitutional.

"From the foregoing it can be clearly seen that the approval by the President of the United States of the live poultry code was an unconstitutional exercise of delegated legislative authority, first, because Congress omitted to lay down any intelligible policy, or, indeed, any policy at all, for the governing of the industry; second, because Congress provided no standard to guide the President's action in determining whether a code of fair competition should be approved for any industry, much less for the intrastate operations of the live poultry business; third, because the President is not required to make and has made no findings of fact as to the necessity or propriety of a code of fair competition for the intrastate operations of the live poultry business to bring his act of approval within any standard for action that the recovery act may contain; and fourth, because Congress has set no limits as to what the 'fair competition' provisions of such code may be, but on the contrary has left it to the unrestrained discretion of the President, without any judicial review, to write the law of fair competition for the intrastate operations of the live poultry business, without any procedure complying to any extent with the due process of law required of him."

The brief charges that the methods of code formulation are "purely arbitrary and capricious," and that in such a "remarkably loose and wholly informal procedure" numerous acts become criminal offense. As the brief puts it, the result is "presidential fiats creating crimes out of acts not hitherto illegal or made illegal by Congress in the recovery act."

Wage, Hour Regulation Hit.

Scoring the idea that maximum hours and minimum wage have any relation to ordinary concepts or fair competition, the brief declares:

"The idea (to the contrary) seems to have originated with well-intentioned social welfare workers, who, never having had to meet a pay roll, seem to feel that it is more unjust for a business to pay employes what it can than to leave them unemployed."

Further in attacking the delegation of power to the President, the brief says, "Thus the power to ruin any business or industry lies in his hands, if these delegations be sustained."

"The issue," it declares, "is whether the Constitution is to be disregarded and governmental assumption of the power to regiment all individual commercial activity and all industry—whether commerce or not and whether intrastate or not—is to be sustained."

Citing the code to regulate the infants' wear industry, the one to regulate the funeral service business, and the one to regulate the retail monument industry, the brief commented:

"It is not too much to say that these codes purport to regulate human activities literally from the cradle to the grave and beyond."

Many of these regulated activities, it contended, have "only the most remote and fanciful connection with interstate commerce," and, if sustained as a valid exercise of the power to regulate interstate commerce, would mean that "the whole theory upon which our system of government is founded and upon which it has been maintained is gone."

The brief sums up the NIRA as "a bold and unparalleled piece of legislation of the most sweeping and drastic character." It argues that if the NIRA principles are to prevail "dictatorship is surely here."

Senators Attend Parleys at White House

Harris & Ewing.

Deadlock Ends Parley on NRA At White House

Compromise Proposal for Temporary Law Fails to Win Roosevelt.

Government, rather than by code authorities.

Senators returning from the conference reported that President Roosevelt, apparently impressed by the compromise argument, at first indicated readiness to concur.

A strong objection was entered by Richberg, who appeared late on the scene. Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin, also argued vigorously for permanent legislation, insisting the so-called compromise would not speed enactment. La Follette said NRA's defects were apparent and could be remedied by immediate legislation without awaiting a Supreme Court test. To their objections Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins added a word against abolition of intrastate NRA regulation.

President's Attitude.

In the end, the President announced his conviction that permanent extension of NRA, as proposed in his fireside chat Sunday, would best serve recovery ends. A majority of those present were not friendly to this proposal. The conference adjourned.

Senator Clark later announced his intention to press his compromise proposal in committee any way. Senator Harrison plans to call his committee today in executive session for a showdown on conflicting proposals.

"Evidently there can be no agreement," Senator Borah told reporters. "The matter probably will come before the Senate in the form of a new NRA bill. It must be fought out on the Senate floor."

Confident of Accord.

Senator Harrison, who had tentatively accepted the Clark proposal to extend NRA only until next April, in the interest of speeding enactment, still expressed confidence a satisfactory NRA solution will be worked out.

"You can put this down, NRA is going to be extended," he said.

Borah was equally emphatic that it "will never be extended in its present form."

A brief word picture of yesterday's White House conference was given by Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada.

"Senator Harrison's proposal seemed acceptable to the President at first," he said. "Later, however, Donald Richberg, chairman of the recovery board, argued for the full two-year extension without elimination of the two controversial provisons suggested by Harrison. After that we agreed to disagree."

Dissatisfied With Progress.

Arguing for one-year extension only, the NRA opposition contends in that time the constitutionality of various phases of the law can be cleared up in the courts, furnishing a basis upon which a new NRA law can be worked out. Administration Senators answer that if the Supreme Court rules adversely, the NRA would be a dead letter anyway.

Dissatisfaction with the legislative progress of the Senate was expressed emphatically at the conference by President Roosevelt, Senators reported.

Comment that the Senate is a slow-moving body, and the country is beginning to talk about it, was made by the President in the presence of Senate Majority Leader Robinson, it was said. In contrast, the President dropped a few kind words about the House being "well up in its program," it was reported.

The White House prodding did not shake the Senate loose from its anti-lynching filibuster, however. On the contrary, there were threats of a break in the solid Democratic South, if the Administration lent support to the Wagner-Costigan proposal to invoke Federal law to stop lynchings.

Waving his arms, shouting, Senator Ellison D. Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, made the threat, charging Southern Democrats have been "betrayed in the midst of an overwhelming so-called Democratic administration."

Glass Enters Fight.

"I for one," he said, "declare that if this proposal becomes a part and parcel of Democratic doctrine, involving the destruction of State rights and usurpation of local self-government, I shall pay no further allegiance to such a party."

Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, pitched into the fight again to pay tribute to former President Coolidge, declaring "there are Republicans better than some people who call themselves Democrats."

Coolidge, Glass said, in a speech at William and Mary College, said that "if some of the States did not more vigorously assert their rights the Federal Government would invade them and take them away." The Virginian said Coolidge gave "the finest vindication of the sovereign rights of the States in this Union that I ever heard fall from mortal lips."

Another attempt to technically adjourn the Senate, to make way for bonus legislation and dammed-up Administration legislation, is expected to be made today.

Borah's Advice.

Senators attending yesterday's White House conference on NRA were Robinson, Harrison, Clark, McCarran, Wagner, New York; King, Utah (Democrats); Minority Leader McNary, Borah, Couzens, Michigan; Nye, North Dakota; Hastings, Delaware (Republicans), and La Follette (Progressive).

Typical of telegrams sent out yesterday by Senator Borah to constituents who had sought his advice on NRA compliance, was the following, to Oliver J. Smith, of Weiser, Idaho.

"According to your letter your business is local or intrastate," Borah wired. "That being true, I entertain no doubt that you may proceed to conduct your business in your own way without regard to any proposed code or without liability for any fees or charges. In other words, the Federal Government has no power to interfere with the conduct of your business. I am so advising all who seek my advice on that question. I do not assume the Government will interfere; but if it does, please advise me."

Cubans to Have Election.

Havana, April 30 (U.P.).—Leaders of Cuba's four major parties have agreed on a program providing that the long-postponed Cuban general elections shall be held November 1, 1935, and that the new Congress shall begin immediately to rewrite the Cuban constitution, it was announced today at the presidential palace.

Illinois Closes Relief's Doors To 1,200,000

State Stations End Work as U. S. Withdraws Grants; Trouble Feared.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 30.—The Illinois Emergency Relief Commission, impoverished by the suspension of Federal aid, closed the doors of all its State stations to 1,200,000 clients tonight.

The unemployed in many sections were forced to turn to their own resources or private charity for their sustenance, but the majority were assured essential provisions for the next few days.

Chicago police, fearing radicals would seek to capitalize on the situation, took precautions against violence. Communists were reported to have planned May Day demonstrations at all relief stations in the city. Patrolmen have been posted at the offices. District police captains have been warned to hold squads in reserve.

Bare Necessities.

Commission auditors announced IERC agencies in 21 of Illinois' 102 counties were "flat broke" and that those in 32 others would be penniless by tomorrow night. Ten counties were described as able to carry on emergency operations until May 2; four until May 3; 14 until May 4, and 21 until next week. Chicago's 600,000 needy were guaranteed bare necessities until Sunday by a $1,200,000 advance from the Cook County board, but here, as in counties with some funds left, only food and medicine were furnished.

The 9,800 IERC employes were cut off the pay roll, but those volunteering their services mailed out supply orders where supplies still were available. The relief stations were shut.

Bill to End Crisis Up.

A bill designed to end the crisis and resume Federal grants came up for second reading in the State House of Representatives at Springfield. Already approved by the Senate, it would boost the sales tax from 2 to 3 per cent, extend the levy to utilities and enable Illinois to post its $3,000,000 monthly share of the relief burden. Its fate was uncertain. Should it be adopted tomorrow, FERA Administrator Harry Hopkins has indicated he would immediately advance $9,000,000 to revive the commission.

Gov. Horner, alarmed by the stalemate, carried a plea to President Roosevelt for a reduction in the State's relief assessment. Investigators here prepared to probe charges of waste and inefficiency in the IERC at the suggestion of the Governor and the commission.

Jefferson City, Mo., April 30 (AP). In an effort to keep Missouri on Federal relief rolls, the Senate appropriations committee voted late today to recommend a $500,000 appropriation as the State's share of relief costs for May. The State relief list totals about 600,000.

The recommendation was ordered rushed to the Senate, but the House had adjourned for the day and action by that body before morning was considered unlikely.

The committee's action came after the FERA warned Missouri would be cut off from Federal relief tomorrow unless the Legislature provided funds.

By the Associated Press.

Aubrey Williams, assistant relief administrator, said today Missouri must provide $500,000 a month as a condition for additional Federal allotments.

Williams said he had not communicated recently with Missouri officials, but they understood the State must contribute that sum.

43 Indicted by U. S. In Drake Fraud Case

Chicago, April 30 (AP).—Forty-three persons, including four women, were indicted today by the Federal grand jury on charges of using the mails to defraud in connection with the "Sir Francis Drake estate" swindle.

Principal defendants are Oscar M. Hartzell, now in Leavenworth Penitentiary on a similar charge; his brother, Canfield Hartzell, under arrest in New York; Otto C. ant, former Iowa banker, and Lester Ohmart, Joseph H. Hauber and Delmer C. Short, all of Chicago.

Judge Rules 'Out' Stench Bomb Proof

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 30.—The evidence in the case of the people against Benjamin M. Markowitz was so strong today that Justice Daniel F. Murphy ordered it removed from the courtroom.

Detective Stephen De Rosa, singularly unpopular for the moment, thereupon carried out a pint of the fluid commonly used in making stench bombs.

In a clearer atmosphere the trial was resumed and Markowitz was convicted of having been found in possession of the fluid and was remanded for sentence May 10.

Hollywood Killing Blamed on Cash

Jury Expected to End Inquiry Today.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, April 30.—A coroner's inquest was expected to conclude tomorrow investigation of the slaying last week of Paul Ivar, Hollywood couturier; the fatal shooting of Henry E. Bolte, sociology instructor, and the suicide of William Howard, naval reserve ensign, formerly of Washington.

Sheriff's officers said they were convinced the motive was money, and that Ivar and Bolte owed Howard several hundred dollars. Ivar was in arrears for services of Howard as chauffeur, Capt. N. G. Stensland, of the sheriff's homicide detail, said. Howard was believed by officers to have lent Bolte money.

After the inquest, funeral services will be held for Ivar at Angelus Temple.

Capt. Stensland said Howard shot and killed Ivar, went to Bolte's home, fatally wounded him, then committed suicide. Bolte died last night from two bullet wounds in the back.

U. S. Chamber Speakers Assail New Deal on Many Fronts

Nation Rejects NRA and NIRA, C. B. Ames Says

People Tired of 'Bungling' by Washington, States Texas Co. Head.

"The best thing about NIRA, NRA, the Blue Eagle and the administration of them is the fact that public sentiment has repudiated them," C. B. Ames, chairman of the board of the Texas company, told a Chamber of Commerce group yesterday. Mr. Ames has studied the NRA for the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, the National Association of Manufacturers, and for an independent industrial committee.

"The people have tired of the bungling effort of Washington bureaucracy to regiment American business," he said. "The efforts to impair the rights of the States, the effort to concentrate power in Washington, the effort to enlarge the authority of the President, the effort to by-pass the Constitution, have challenged the foundation of our Constitutional system."

Ames said the present bill for NRA extension does not provide the business self-government promised by President Roosevelt.

He suggested the following:

1. Codes should be voluntary; that is to say, they should be prepared and proposed by the industry affected.

2. Codes should be drafted with the greatest care so as to prescribe a rule of action which is clear, consistent and understandable.

3. Codes should be limited to a clarification of methods of unfair competition within a particular industry.

4. Labor provisions in such codes should be limited to minimum wages and maximum hours, and the prohibition of child labor.

5. Such codes of fair competition should be approved by a quasi-judicial body and not by an executive agency.

6. The enforcement of such codes should be by judicial process.

7 In addition to codes of fair competition, the law should permit agreements in restraint of trade when approved by a proper Federal agency.

Ames suggested that if the law contains these provisions there should be no reason for making NRA temporary, but it should be written into the permanent law of the land.

which definitely affect interstate competition."

Speaking of the new NRA bill, he said:

"As I read the bill I am impressed with the fact that it is a much more complex and confusing measure than the present recovery act. Too many restrictions and conditions are imposed, and too many changes have been made from the language of the present law."

Discussing the Agriculture Adjustment Administration, Harriman said that as an emergency measure it has met with a considerable degree of success, but, he added, "first, and primarily, we must see what can be done to foster exportation of farm products, and particularly cotton."

Ickes' "Shouting" Assailed.

Harriman expressed himself as sympathetic with the idea of old-age and unemployment reserves, but he said he hesitated to advocate enactment of such a comprehensive measure as the present bill at this time.

"If American business is vicious," Forney Johnston said, "it has taken a century and a half to discover it."

In the course of his speech he declared:

"I see no advantage to society in the house-top Allah shouting of Mr. Ickes and our other impeccables."

Speaking of the New Deal program generally, he said:

"I have no desire to criticize any measure advocated by the Administration involving questions of method, judgment or discretion of Congress or the Executive and involving no jeopardy to the social order established by the existing Constitution. That is the function for which they were elected, and they are entitled to fair play in executing it.

Calls Works Bill "Futile."

"It is impossible to include within this exception the continued determination of the Administration to request a scope of power equivalent to unlimited and unconditional authority."

Johnston described the works bill as a "futile effort by Congress to prescribe formulae for the application of a gigantic public works fund."

Hitting one New Deal measure after another, he added

"As further bearing on industrial confidence essential to recovery, I find general concurrence in the impression that up to this date American business is regarded by the Administration as under suspicion, if not on trial.

Utility "Obsession" Flayed.

"The ill-conceived ringmaster basis of the early days of NRA left scars," he said. "Far more serious is the President's apparent obsession, for there is no other word to describe it, that utilities must be Federally regulated and holding companies annihilated by the Federal Government in order apparently to make way for public ownership."

Johnston added that he believed some form of NRA, greatly simplified and on a voluntary basis, would be "definitely in the public interest."

"Is it more important to broadcast to the Nation how they can get a part of the national deficit than to cautoin them to remember their duty to the Nation and themselves?" he asked.

Asks "Where We Bound?"

Hitting at the NRA, Strawn attacked the Administration for dropping the Belcher case, and insisted there must be a court decision on the constitutionality of the recovery act.

"We have floundered along already for two years without knowing whether we were going to be locked up or not, and I think that we, as freemen and as Americans, have a right to know where we are going, and I think the Administration should tell us what their program is."

First District—David F. Edwards, Boston.

'Be Patient,' Roper Requests, Defending New Deal Agencies

Secretary Roper told American Trade Association executives last night that the New Deal would not destroy private enterprise and pleaded for patience and co-operation with the Administration in the drive for economic recovery.

"We must be patient in a period of general readjustment," he said, "if we would have the changes come after the fashion of an orderly evolution and not after the fashion of a destructive revolution."

Many of the regulatory efforts of the present era, he explained, force the good to suffer for the wrongs of the malpractitioners. The New Deal, he told his listeners, "is not intended to destroy business," but to "find ways and means of protecting all concerned against acts and agencies which, if left unguided, will utterly destroy our democratic civilization."

Mr. Roper recited figures to show that business and industry are gaining.

Automobile Refuses To Swim Across Creek

Wilson F. McCray, 22, of 4207 Thirty-ninth street northwest, and Preston E. Collins, 23, of 4503 Wisconsin avenue northwest, let spring bravado get the better of their judgment yesterday.

A little before noon they approached the ford of Rock Creek at the foot of Blagden avenue, in their small coupe, McCray driving. The creek, swollen by the heavy rain of the night before, was rushing along and a large tractor crane was stuck in the middle.

Unmindful of warnings given by a large crowd which was watching the unsuccessful struggles of the crane, they decided they could get through. The current carried them downstream and onto the rocks, where they were forced to wait a good hour and a half while rescue squad and a fire truck were called to pull them out. Their feet got wet when 2½ feet of muddy water swirled through the front seat of their car.

Woman Shoots Self, Bullet Kills Spouse

Benton, Ill., April 30 (AP).—The bullet Mrs. Mary Maddia, 40, fired to end her own life, also killed her husband, Pete, 45, today.

Police said the husband was struck in the heart by the bullet after it passed through Mrs. Maddia's body. He died immediately. She survived several hours.

He was attempting to wrest the gun from her when she fired the doubly fatal shot.

that he did not know how the applications would be handled.

"We are waiting for an executive order," he said.

Mr. Ickes said he did not believe the housing program would be disrupted by President Roosevelt's insistence that works money be spent within a year. Experience has shown that most housing projects can not be completed within that time.

"If we can show a substantial compliance with the time element, we hope and believe we shall be permitted to go ahead," he said.

Robert Fechner, director of the CCC, said $110,000,000 of his allotment would go to increasing the organization to 600,000 by August 1. This will be divided into $40,000,000 for clothing; $40,000,000 for supplies, materials and equipment, including trucks, and $30,000,000 for camp construction. The rest will be used to finance the organization until July 1. Enlistment of new men will begin June 15.

Cooke May Head Unit.

It is reported that Morris L. Cooke, member of the power policy committee and the National Resources Board, may head the new rural electrification division. Mr. Cooke was a caller at the White House yesterday. He said he had brought some data for which the President had asked.

Senator Pope (Democrat), Idaho, talked with the President about creation of a Columbia River Valley Authority and about a proposal to use relief labor to open abandoned mines.

Gov. Horner, of Illinois, called to discuss the relief situation in his State, where Government relief funds are being held up pending legislative appropriations.

Gold Mine Files Appeal From Hoarding Penalty

San Francisco, April 30 (AP).—Argonaut Mining Co. today asked the Ninth United States Circuit Court of Appeals to keep the Government from enforcing penalties against it under President Roosevelt's gold harding act of 1933, for failing to turn over to the Treasury 7,177 ounces of gold.

Federal Judge A. F. St. Sure dismissed a similar action by the company. In appealing to the circuit court, the company argued the various ruling of the Treasury Department and the hoarding act were inconsistent.

Money Now Available For Electrification

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Tappahannock, Va., April 30.—Money is now available for rural electrification work in Essex County, according to D. H. Crosby, county agent. He has asked that interested citizens see him so a delegation may appear before Allen J. Saville in Richmond to push the projects.

Whenever you hear anyone mention the "Result Number," he is talking about Post Classified Ads—National 4200.

Bureau Activity in Business Holds Up Billions, Executive Says.

John W. O'Leary, president of the Machinery and Allied Products Institute, told a group meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States yesterday that the country was ready to buy billions of dollars in durable goods and to put millions of men to work. This, he said, depends upon a return of business confidence.

Reasons for lack of confidence he listed as: Questioning of the profit motive; burdensome taxes and uncertain monetary policies; increasing activity of the Government in establishing or subsidizing enterprises in competition with private business, and increasing activity in the exercise of control over the management of private business by Government bureaus and officials.

He characterized some of these Government activities as "leading toward socialism" and "thoroughly destructive."

"Confidence will return," he predicted. "No nation with the resources, the energy, the potential possibilities of this country can fail to reverse the progress of the depression."

There are many straws in the wind to indicate that capital may be released in the next year or two, and that durable goods industries may show improvement as a result of this, Sidney J. Weinberg, of Goldman, Sachs & Co., told the same meeting.

Weinberg said an appraisal of prospects led him to believe that business soon will be sufficiently better "to allow the Government to retire from many of the functions that it has taken over, and, I hope, to carry on a sounder monetary policy."

Dr. G. A. Nichols, president of the Oklahoma City Chamber of Commerce, outlined the great demand for housing and declared resumption of home building would be a great step forward in solving the unemployment problem. He said there is an urgent need for more than a million new homes.

Bill by Wagner Means Strife, Chamber Told

Social Security Measure Assailed by Denby as Wrong, Dangerous.

Attacks on the Wagner labor disputes bill and on the social security bill were made at a Chamber of Commerce group meeting yesterday by Charles Denby, jr., Philadelphia attorney, and E. R. Lederer, vice president of the Texas-Pacific Coal & Oil Co.

"What has rightly been considered a matter of relief for the needy," Denby said, "and a matter of local concern and administration, has become a function of the Federal Government.

"Nothing could be more wrong, more dangerous or more certain to cost gigantic and impossible sums."

Lederer said he believed the Wagner bill would create strife and dissention and lead to endless court proceedings. He defended the company union as beneficial to workers.

Duplication of Levies Hinders Business, Says N. Y. Tax Head

Duplication and multiplicity of taxes are seriously hampering business, Mark Graves, New York State tax commissioner, said yesterday, addressing the taxation conference of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

"Little thought," he said, "has been given to the fact that the continued dipping of several governments into the same tax reservoir will destroy productivity and diminish the revenue of such taxing jurisdiction.

"When viewed from the standpoint of business, the situation is particularly bad. The absence of a fair degree of uniformity in the tax load, especially in interstate business, makes for unwholesome competition."

Mr. Graves suggested the following solutions of the tangled tax problem:

1. Having the State abandon the sales and consumption tax fields to the exclusive use of the Federal Government and adopting the division of yields theory in respect of such taxes of this nature as the Federal Government may levy.

2. That the crediting device be employed in personal and corporate income taxation and that it be extended to the entire Federal estate tax and gift tax.

3. That we surrender the soak-the-rich policy and recognize frankly the need for lower personal exemptions and more sharply graduated taxes in the lower brackets of income and inheritances.

4. As an emergency tax, if additional revenue is needed, the enactment by the Federal Government of a general manufacturers' sales tax, a part of the proceeds of which shall be apportionable to the States under the division of yields policy.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 30.—An exhibition of Mexican art will open tomorrow night at the Washington County Museum of Fine Arts here. The exhibit has been assembled by various artists, museums and the New York galleries and includes oil paintings, water colors, drawings, pastels, lithographs and woodcuts.

Farm Now Safe From Hazards Of Past, Asserts Col. Robbins

Through life insurance the vast majority of American families have a real stake in American business, Col. Charles B. Robbins, manager and general counsel of the American Life convention, told the insurance group at the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States yesterday. This stake, he said, amounts to more than $22,000,000,000.

This huge financial interest, he pointed out, consists largely of Federal, State, county and municipal securities; railroad securities, public utilities securities, and first mortgage real estate loans.

"The matter of farm foreclosures and the decrease in farm credit through inability of life insurance companies to make farm mortgages, is a matter of the greatest concern to the people of the United States, for agriculture is the most basic of all industries," Col. Robbins said.

He predicted the extraordinary hazards which have beset agriculture during the last ten years will not return for many years. He said that in event of inflation farm property constitutes the most tangible asset a life insurance company can own, and, with return of a degree of normal conditions, should result in profits to policyholders.

Beard Juror, Ill, Collapses; Holds Up Trial

Reputed Gambling King's Lawyer May Demand New Panel Today.

By Frederic B. Tuttle.

The second day of the trial of burly Sam Beard, reputed dictator of Washington's sporting world, ended abruptly yesterday when Louis G. Bates, gray-haired, middle-aged juror, collapsed in the jury room just after luncheon, halting—for the moment, at least—the District's efforts to convict "Big Sam" of conspiracy to violate the Capital's gaming laws.

Informed by Justice Joseph W. Cox of Bates' sudden illness, Assistant District Attorneys Roger Robb and John Fihelly, in charge of the prosecution, expressed willingness to continue the case with only the 11 remaining jurors—seven men and four women.

Defense Attorney John Sirica, however, requested that the case be postponed until this morning. Then, if Bates is unavailable for jury duty, he will decide whether to continue with a venire of 11, or demand that an entirely new jury be selected.

There appeared little chance last night that Bates will be able to resume his seat in the jury box. Physicians at Casualty Hospital, where he was taken after his collapse, said he probably was suffering from high blood pressure.

Throughout yesterday morning's session Beard sat patiently, listening somewhat indifferently as three witnesses described the wire-tapping in a room adjacent to an establishment alleged to have been operated by him. It was the wire-tapping that led to the raid on his elaborate quarters, and his arrest October 5, 1934.

The first witness yesterday was Walter Schultz, who said he was an expert from the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Mr. Schultz told the jury in detail how he tapped the wires of three telephones in the room adjacent to the establishment in the Mather Building, in the 900 block of G street, four days prior to the raid.

He tested some 400 pairs of wires in the basement until he found the paid leading to the telephone number District 6584, Mr. Schultz said. Previously it had been testified that the phone was listed to the National Amusement Co., alleged to have been operated by Beard on the fifth floor of the building. He tapped two other phones in the building, Schultz stated—District 5570 and District 3958.

"I listened in on one conversation," said Little, who is a son of Lieut. George Little, chief of the vice squad.

Took Notes on Conversation.

The final witness of the morning was John Nesbit, District Attorney's stenographer, who told how he listened in on the tapped wires and took stenographic notes.

Attorney Robb produced transcripts of conversations he heard over the wires. These, the court was told, were taken in shorthand as Nesbit listened in.

"Six wins at Coney Island."

Beard and the 12 co-defendants listened with interest. When court was adjourned for luncheon, Beard and his attorney posed for pictures and walked across the courthouse lawn to hail a cab.

"We'll win this case," grinned Beard, as he stepped spryly into the cab.

Miss Turner Wed To State Court Aid

North Carolinian and His Bride on Honeymoon.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Va., April 30.—John A. Livingston, librarian of the North Carolina Supreme Court, and Miss Rosalie Preston Turner, of Raleigh, former secretary to E. B. Jeffress, chairman of the North Carolina State Highway Commission, were married this afternoon by the Rev. Elmer C. Pedrick, of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church.

They will spend their honeymoon at White Sulphur Springs, where the bride's great grandfather, William P. Mangum, former United States Senator from North Carolina, spent his honeymoon after the Civil War.

Miss Turner arrived here this morning from Washington, where she had been visiting her sister, Miss Sallie Alston Turner, executive secretary to the Federal Trade Commission. Livingston formerly was Washington correspondent for the Raleigh News and Observer and other North Carolina newspapers.

Maryland Cautioned Against 'Dog Tick'

Baltimore, April 30 (AP).—Terming the American dog tick a new "public enemy" in Maryland, Dr. Robert H. Riley, State director of health, reported today he is making efforts to educate out-of-doors people to guard against it this summer. The tick is partly responsible for Rocky Mountain spotted fever and tularemia.

"We had never heard of those two diseases in Maryland until four years ago," Dr. Riley said. "It is possible that infected ticks were imported with cattle or on dogs. It also is possible that the disease had existed in very mild form here previously and was first recognized at that time."

France Gives In Accepts Hull's Bid to Bargain

eralized to other nations. Secretary Hull said that these concessions would be denied to the French unless they agreed to cease their discriminations and entered into a most-favored-nation understanding with the United States. This was the inauguration of Hull's "crack down" trade policy.

Informal conversations with the French dragged along, and about two weeks ago it appeared they were on the verge of breaking down. No doubt irreparable harm would have been done the Hull program had the French successfully defied this Government's threats of punitive action if the former remained intransigeant. About that time the French ambassador, Andre de Laboulaye, hurridly left for Paris.

M. Laboulaye's part in bringing about an agreement has not been revealed. But Undersecretary of State William Phillips yesterday announced that France would be guaranteed the concessions given Belgium for a six-month period, pending negotiation of an agreement. This places France in a category with Canada, The Netherlands, Spain and Switzerland, which also are now negotiating trade agreements with the United States.

Hull Program Vindicated.

Willingness of France to negotiate a trade pact demonstrated effectiveness of the Hull "crack down" policy. This development made it possible for Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre, speaking before a world trade round table of the United States Chamber of Commerce, to say that the policy "has already justified itself with concrete results."

"One nation has already agreed to cease discriminatory practices against United States trade," he said to the round table, which was chiefly devoted to a discussion of the entire Hull program. "Other nations, since the publication of the Belgian proclamation, have manifested in concrete terms a desire to enter into trade agreements and a readiness not previously in evidence to grant concessions."

Reminding his audience that "if the American standard of living is to be maintained we must trade," Sayre defended the Hull program against recent attacks, in some cases based on misrepresentation, he asserted. He declared, "It is not a question of nationalism on the one hand versus internationalism on the other, or of practical hard-headed dollars-and-cents realism versus impractical visionary idealism."

Sayre Defends Policy.

"Those who are working for the increase of international trade are not trying to sell out the business interests of the country to the highest foreign bidders, as a certain group of editorial writers would have us believe," he continued. "Quite the contrary, it is in order to give American business protection in the best sense of the term that the Administration has set its course and chosen its foreign trade policies."

Sayre said that in the field of agriculture, if foreign markets were eliminated, it would be necessary to retire 8,900,000 acres of wheat land, 22,800,000 acres of cotton land, 665,000 acres of tobacco land, 9,150,000 acres of corn land and more than 7,000,000 acres of land needed for horses to work these other lands.

"We must be prepared," he said, "in cooperation with other nations, to reduce the excessive barriers which have been raised against the importation of foreign goods. We must be prepared to consider the welfare of American industry and American agricultural production from a national viewpoint—and not from the single angle of a particular industry.

Cuban Gains Cited.

"It is frequently said that high tariffs are necessary in order to maintain high wages. But the facts lend scant support to this slogan. High wages and a high standard of living are the results of able management, a high efficiency of labor, rich natural resources, and a plentiful supply of capital."

R. A. Anderson, president of the American Chamber of Commerce of Cuba at Havana, praised the Cuban reciprocal treaty, explaining at the United States Cchamber meeting that trade between the two countries through last September, October, November and December, when the pact was in effect, was 90 per cent greater than in the corresponding period of 1933. Cuban imports of American automobiles increased 700 per cent, he said.

By bieng able to market their products here the Cubans are enjoying "relative prosperity," and with improved economic conditions and a greatly stabilized political situation, he asserted, the insular republic "is rapidly approaching the

R. J. Baker, president of the American Steamship Owners Association, urged before the world trade round table that the Government establish a permanent shipping policy. He said that as a result of the program of the last seven years in that field "we have laid the groundwork for a merchnt fleet well suited to the needs of commerce and defense."

ish fleet's work now is overseas, he added:

"There may be a cure for that. Our friend Hitler, like his predecessor, may see that our service is once more in home waters."

Authoritative quarters in London confirmed to some degree the revelations in the Italian newspaper, asserting they had facts showing that submarines are only part of extensive plans for naval expansion which Hitler will announce April 15.

Long Planning Seen.

The British sources said the Reich's decision to build U-boats was not the result of the tense situation of the last few weeks, since designs for the undersea craft were completed in December and some parts actually constructed about Christmas.

The Giornale d'Italia's article, based on information it said it obtained in Paris, asserted Hitler planned, in addition to the submarines, construction of 31 naval units, including two 20,000-ton, one 6,000-ton and two 10,000-ton cruisers.

During the day Francois Pietri, French naval minister, conferred at length with Sir Bolton Eyres-Monsell, first lord of the British admiralty, reportedly concerning the German submarines. The British Ambassador to France, Sir George Clerk, visited the French foreign minister, Pierre Laval, to discuss the same topic.

Although well-informed circles said no decision had been reached, there was increasing belief that Britain planned to protest to Berlin the latest development in the Reich's rearmament.

Flames Raze Home, Virginia Landmark

Rockhill, Loudoun County, Had Stood Since 1790.

By the Associated Press.

Leesburg, Va., April 30.—Rockhill, one of Loudoun County's fine old Colonial homes, seat in early Colonial times of the Belt and Giddings families, was destroyed this afternoon by fire.

The flames, fanned by a high wind, had made the old brick structure a blazing mass by the time the Leesburg fire company reached the scene. Tonight there were only gaunt high brick chimneys and massive walls where once stood a manor house, built in 1790 by Alfred Belt.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Heflin, residing on the property, were at a funeral when the fire started. They returned to find the home in ashes. Firemen and neighbors were able to save little furniture. Two children who were at home discovered the blaze under the roof and spread the alarm. The fire was believed to have been caused by a defective flue.

Mont Alto Foresters Get New Assignments

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., April 30.—Several transfers among the State forestry officials at Mont Alto have been made by the department of forests and waters, effective immediately, it was announced today.

Henry E. Clepper, a graduate of the State Forest School and a former research forester at Mont Alto, has been returned as forester in charge of the Mont Alto State Forest and Nursery. Dr. E. A. Ziegler, director of research, has been transferred to the division of research in Harrisburg. George S. Perry and Walter Leach, attached to the research staff, also have their headquarters in Harrisburg.

an hour. I had to slow down considerably through the storm because of ice on the propellers.

"East of the Grand Canyon we were flying at 16,000 feet. I got my best speed over the Alleghanies.

"I wish you would say that this was in no way a one-man flight. Hal Snead attended to the radio beams and the gasoline tanks, and Redpath did a swell job of navigating.

"For 900 miles we never saw the ground, but that didn't bother me, for my radio stations were coming in beautifully."

Tomlinson said the plane took off with 1,350 gallons of gasoline, after a run of 1,500 feet, and had approximately 300 gallons left when it arrived.

"We could have gone 500 miles farther," he added.

As the Sun Sets.

A brilliant red headlight gleaming in its nose, the big monoplane roared in just as the last rays of the setting sun were disappearing over the skyscrapers of Manhattan.

A strong gale was blowing, and the plane deliberately overshot the field while its pilot studied landing conditions. Then it banked casually over Jamaica Bay and came down in the wind to an easy landing.

Tomlinson, a vice president of T. W. A., had high praise for the Sperry pilot, saying it was "very helpful."

All of the passenger seats had been removed from the plane to make room for extra gasoline tanks. A supply of oxygen was carried, in case storms forced the ship to seek the substratosphere.

Experimental flights which it had made on the West Coast and an unsuccessful effort to obtain a permit to fly it to Hawaii had caused the Douglas plane to become known as a "mystery" craft and a "flying laboratory."

tionship between the United States and any foreign country.

To Live Up to Treaties.

"I call your especial attention to the fact that this Government not only accepts as an accomplished fact the permanent peace conditions cemented by many generations of friendship between the Canadian and American peoples, but expects to live up to not only the letter but the spirit of our treaties relating to the permanent disarmament of our 3,000 miles of common boundary.

"Very sincerely,

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

At the State Department, Undersecretary William Phillips said that the letter speaks for itself and no further explanation is considered necessary. Officials particularly regretted the incident with regard to Canada because of the fact that trade negotiations are now under way with that country after a long delay.

Testimony of Generals Kilbourne and Andrews concerned the Wilcox bill to provide for establishment of air bases in various parts of the country. The bill, redrafted to meet War Department suggestions, subsequently was approved by the committee and now is pending in the House.

Suggests Lakes Area.

"We would like to put one close to the Great Lakes," Gen. Kilbourne said in discussing the air bases, "but we must avoid going too far in establishing new military stations close to the northern border and limit ourselves to those essential in peace-time training operations.

"We do not want to accentuate anything that would look as though we contemplated passing away from the century-old principle that our Canadian border needs no defense. I think it would be very unfortunate if we did."

The committee the same day heard from Capt. H. L. George, of Maxwell Field, that a coalition of European powers could send freighters to any one of the numerous off-shore islands in the North and South Atlantic, and from those vantage points launch disastrous air raids against the United States.

Andrews Lists Dangers.

Gen. Andrews said that, even with Canada neutral, an enemy could avail himself of these bases:

Newfoundland (including Labrador), St. Pierre and Miquelon, Bermuda, Bahama Islands, Jamaica, Trinidad, British Honduras, and the Lesser Antilles—all British and French possessions within a few hours by air from the United States.

"To insure against air attacks being launched from any of these bases in time of emergency," Gen. Andrews went on, "they must be kept under surveillance to discover any evidence of preparation of such bases, and we must be ready to bomb such installations as soon as they are discovered."

Gen. Andrews said that a "Chesapeake Bay area" force is needed, using Langley and Bolling fields as a nucleus, "to protect us from air attacks from Bermuda and the water areas between Bermuda and the Atlantic Coast between Long Island and Savannah."

Dern Defends Officers.

The President's letter drew a quick response from Secretary Dern and an explanatory statement from Gen. Andrews. Gen. Kilbourne is now stationed at Manila and Chairman McSwain was out of the city, in New York.

Gen. Andrews said his testimony was given with "the full understanding and belief on my part" that it was to be "secret." He said he never had discussed it with "higher authority" and that it "represents merely my own view as an abstract military study with no concrete political thought or reference."

Secretary Dern wrote the President that "in all fairness to the officers concerned, it was their understanding that the testimony was entirely secret and was not to be made public under any circumstances. I am sure they would not have expressed themselves so freely had they not had such an assurance of the situation."

Incident Without Precedent.

On Capitol Hill, the House Military Affairs Committee met in executive session, without McSwain, but acting Chairman Lister Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, insisted the President's letter was not discussed. Hill said he did not know how the printing of secret testimony occurred, while the committee's secretary, Kenneth Anderson, and others, preferred not to discuss it.

The incident was believed without precedent in recent years. President Roosevelt is reported to have discussed it with McSwain and Representative Charles A. Plumley (Republican), of Vermont, when, by coincidence, they attended a dinner at the White House Monday night.

McGrady Sent To Auto Strike To Halt Spread

Cincinnati and Cleveland Units of General Motors Close in Walkout.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Perkins last night ordered Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, to go immediately to Toledo, Ohio, to try to settle the Chevrolet automobile workers' strike there.

McGrady planned to leave immediately.

An American Federation of Labor official for many years, McGrady last summer was a member of the longshoremen's labor relations board which handled the waterfront strike on the Pacific Coast.

Meantime, Francis J. Dillon, American Federation of Labor organizer in the auto industry, said that the federation wanted to "establish peace" in the auto plants, but that the position of the General Motors Corporation in refusing to deal with the Toledo Chevrolet strikers until they went back to work was "unjustifiable."

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, April 30.—The week-old strike in the Toledo plant of the Chevrolet Motor Co. spread into two other General Motors Corporation units today and caused a third to announce an indefinite shutdown.

Workers in the Chevrolet assembly and Fisher Body Co. plants at Cincinnati struck in response to an appeal from the Toledo local of the United Automobile Workers of America, an American Federation of Labor organization, for support. Both plants suspended operations, General Motors Corporation officials here said.

The Fisher Body plant at Cleveland will close down indefinitely at midnight, Lincoln Scafe, general manager, announced today.

9,000 Affected at Cleveland.

"We cant' operate if there are no chasses to put bodies on," said Scafe. He predicted other Fisher and Chevrolet plants in the Middle West might have to close, but said the Cleveland shutdown was not a lockout.

Approximately 9,000 men are employed in the Cleveland Fisher Body plant. The closings at Cincinnati and Toledo affected more than 4,000 other workers, but no definite data on the actual number of strikers were available.

The Toledo members of the Mechanics Educational Society of America, a union of tool and die workers, announced through Early S. Streeter, secretary of the Toledo office, that they will not work on parts formerly manufactured at the Toledo Chevrolet plant if the company attempts to have the work done in other plants in the region.

The issue raised in the action of the MESA also was raised by the A. F. of L. local in the Buick plant at Flint, which protested the possibility operations halted at Toledo would be transferred to Flint.

Discuss Strike.

Harlow H. Curtice, Buick president, arranged to confer with the Buick workers immediately in an effort to iron out the situation. Olaf E. Hanson, president of the Flint Buick local, said the workers were anxious to reach an amicable agreement.

A delegation of Toledo strikers planned to attend a mass meeting of Buick employes at Flint tonight to urge them to walk out. Hanson said no formal strike action could be taken at the meeting since it is not a closed union session, but he said the situation would be discussed.

When the Toledo strike was called, the A. F. of L. demanded the right to represent the workers in collective bargaining negotiations, asked for a minimum wage of 70 cents an hour, abolishment of the "speed up" system and other adjustments. Company officials held that the National Automobile Labor Board appointed by President Roosevelt a year ago was setting up the legal collective bargaining agencies and that the strike was "an arbitrary and lawless act."

General Motors officials here declined to comment today on the situation. The Automobile Labor Board said it was taking no action since neither side had asked it to attempt a settlement.

Virginia Indorses Forest Loan Plan

Conservation Body Favors U. S. Aid to Buy Lands

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 30.—Acquisition of land for use as State forests with funds from the Federal Government has been adopted as an objective of the State Conservation and Development Commission, Chairman Wilbur C. Hall announced today.

The announcement followed a conference of officials of the commission, the State tax department and representatives of the United States Forest Service. The conference went on record as favoring the $20,000,000 Fulmer bill now before Congress, which provides that the National Government make available loans to States for establishing of State forests.

Non-interest bearing loans would be made to States, under terms of the bill, and the loans would be secured by the land purchased. The debt would be retired by payment of half the gross proceeds from the areas acquired.

Permits Issued For $1,887,356 In Construction

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Closing the first four months of the year with $1,887,356 in new construction ordered, Arlington County has exceeded any like period in its history, it was revealed at the office of the county manager yesterday.

The records show that during January there were 18 permits issued for new homes with an outlay of $78,300; in February 39 permits were issued with an expenditure of $175,125 and in March 88 permits with a total expenditure of $433,696 were issued.

With the issuing of a permit for an apartment house to Colonial Village Corporation for $850,000 April is the county's record for building with a total of $1,200,235 representing 92 permits.

Of the permits issued all have been for individual home construction with the exception of three apartments, representing an outlay of $895,000 and another permit for the erection of a warehouse in Rosslyn, at a cost of $40,000.

Investigation shows that the most remarkable feature about the rapid development of the county is that in a majority of cases the new homes have been sold before completion.

As to the construction of the three apartment projects, it is reported that virtually all their space has been requested. On the large one, on Wilson boulevard, in Fort Myer Heights, ground has been broken one week. One of the smaller ones is now under roof and the third will be started this week.

County Manager Roy S. Braden said yesterday installing a $2,500,000 sewer system was largely responsible for the building gains.

With Arlington County's approximately 3,000 Federal employes as contributors vry year to the Washington Community Chest, efforts will be made this year to have at least a portion of those funds turned over to the county welfare board.

The county board has appointed its chairman, B. M. Smith, and Hugh J. McGrath, chairman of the county welfare board, to confer with officials of the Community Chest with the view of permitting those residents of the county employed in Washington to designate where their contribution shall go.

According to Mrs. Mae E. Jacobs, during the Community Chest drive in 1931, county residents were permitted to designate where their contributions should go, and between $15,000 and $16,000 came to the county welfare board. Since that time no funds have come to the county from Washington, Mrs. Jacobs said.

With residents having to contribute in Washington and the urgent need for funds in the county, it is pointed out that it is hardly reasonable to expect them again to contribute in the county.

The executive committee of the auxiliary to the Arlington Hospital Association yesterday completed plans to bring its charter membership to 100 by the next meeting of the association June 4. The meeting will be held at the Lyon Park Community Hall. Walter U. Varney, member of the board of directors, will speak.

Mrs. W. D. Martin, of Lyon Village, is chairman of the membership drive.

Arlington Lodge, No. 193, I. O. O. F., last night celebrated its fourteenth anniversary.

Among the speakers were County School Superintendent Fletcher Kemp, Norbert Melnick, district deputy grand master, and Harvey Marcey, noble grand.

Edward Douglas White Council, No. 2473, Knights of Columbus, will meet tomorrow night at its clubrooms, 14 Garrison road, Clarendon.

E. J. Frack, professor of military science and tactics at the Washington-Lee High School, announces the following promotions in the cadet corps:

Richard Strickler, to lieutenant colonel; Stanley Cole, to major; Francis McGonegal, to captain; Julian Georgie, to first lieutenant; Richard Yeatman, to first sergeant; Vernon Hager, to platoon sergeant, and William Lancaster, to sergeant.

The Arlington County Master Plumbers Association will hold its monthly meeting tomorrow night in the Moose Hall, Courthouse road and Wilson boulevard, Clarendon.

Appeals Court to Rule on Right Of Two Boys to $27,000 Find Fight Goes On for Pot of Gold Uncovered in Baltimore Cellar.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., April 30.—The Maryland Court of Appeals today received the task of passing upon the right of two 16-year-old boys to retain possession of a $27,000 pot of gold they found buried in a Baltimore cellar.

The court received the case on appeal by owners of the property on which the gold was found and heirs of a one-time resident of the property. Title was awarded in Baltimore Circuit Court last February to the two boys, Theodore Jones and Henry Grob.

Jones is the son of Mrs. Bessie Jones, widow, who for eight months prior to the finding of the copper pot full of coins in the cellar of the house, occupied rooms on the second floor of the three-story building.

Appelants in the case are Mrs. Elizabeth H. French and Miss Mary P. B. Finlay, owners of the property, and heirs of Andrew J. Saulsbury, one-time resident there.

The face-value of the coins, some of them more than 100 years old, is only $11,427. Federal agents who sought to impound them under the Federal gold laws placed their numismatic value at $27,872.50.

AAA Victory Seen In Maryland Vote

County Agent Makes Forecast on May Ballot.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chestertown, Md., April 30.—The outlook for approval of the Government's crop adjustment program when the wheat issue comes up for referendum in Maryland next month is favorable, according to J. D. McVean, Kent County agricultural agent here, and Charles E. Wise, jr., secretary of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation, who made a recent tour of the State.

Of the 8,000 farmers cooperating in the program in the State, the majority will vote in favor of retaining crop adjustment as a basic principle of farm policy, it was predicted. Nearly all farmers eligible under the program are signing the corn-hog adjustment contracts again this year, the experts said.

The farm bureau executive said here that attacks leveled at the processing tax by industrial interests "is a direct attempt to prejudice public opinion against a principle which has long been practiced by industry but by agriculture now for the first time. Those against the processing tax are also against crop adjustment and orderly marketing. The tax is the farmer's tariff and is economically sound. It has not only paid for itself but, through its influence upon farm income, has been the greatest single factor toward industrial recovery."

Youth's Death Destroys A Childhood Romance

Baltimore, April 30 (AP).—The childhood romance of Howard Jones, jr., 20, and Miss Dolores Cheelsman, 19, had been blasted today by the young man's death. Mrs. Lillian Jones, mother of the youth, disclosed today that the couple, sweethearts since childhod, were to have been wed in June.

Jones was killed yesterday and three other men were hurt when the box car in which they were working was rammed by three freight cars that coasted down an incline.

Virginia Cities Told To Seek PWA Funds

Richmond, April 30 (AP).—The State PWA office here today began to dispatch letters to scores of officials of cities, towns, counties and State governmental institutions, advising them of the opportunity to apply for loan grants, or grants only, under the new $4,000,000,000 work-relief program.

Col. James A. Anderson, State PWA engineer, said that projects of an estimated total cost of $100,000,000 were listed in the State inventory, but that "the mere listing of needed projects by the municipal officials is not, and can not be, considered as an application for funds.

Student Ballot Again on Reforms

Referendum Set Today on U. of V. Election Plan.

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, April 30.—University of Virginia students will go to the polls tomorrow for the second time within the past weeks in an effort to settle a campus controversy over the annual election of college officers.

There will be a referendum under the official sanction of the student assembly to determine whether a reformed system of nominating candidates will be put into effect this year, next year or not at all. Present candidates are nominated by the two social fraternities.

A previous referendum was declared void by the assembly after a split between College Topics, undergraduate news organ, and the honor committee, two bodies which proposed reform after general dissatisfaction with this year's nominees, who for the most part were outstanding athletes.

Visitors Inspect Work at Academy

Board Divides to Speed Inspection Task.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 30.—The board of visitors of the Naval Academy, divided into committees to facilitate the inspection, today visited the different academic departments.

Two of the committee groups devoted attention to the content of courses, including practical work of the drill periods, and the summer term, teaching methods, tests and examinations; another studied plant maintenance and midshipmen's subsistence, and a third observed ethics, discipline and entrance requirements.

Tonight Rear Admiral David F. Sellers, superintendent, gave a dinner in honor of the visitors.

Culpeper Pledges Help for Grayson

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., April 30.—Pledging loyalty to the administration of the new national chairman of the American Red Cross, Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, his former home-town chapter last night accepted the challenge issued by Dr. Grayson, at the recent national convention, for expansion of membership and for responsibility in educating the masses in prevention of highway accidents.

Delegates to the national convention, Mrs. A. S. Brand and Miss Mary Lee Somerville reported that Virginia led all States in the 1934 roll call and that Culpeper showed an increase of more than 100 in membership. John L. Teets, Virginia State Red Cross representative discussed importance of a safety course in the schools as a preventive of highway accidents.

Mrs. A. S. Brand, former roll call chairman, was elected chairman of the Culpeper Chapter; the Rev. W. Francis Allison, vice chairman; Mrs. R. E. Fincham, secretary, and Miss Frances Hickerson, treasurer.

Maryland Sets Vote on Wheat Plan Renewal

Farmer, Countys' Agents to Discuss Program at Baltimore.

Maryland wheat growers and county agents will meet tomorrow in Baltimore to lay plans for the State-wide referendum on renewal of the wheat adjustment program, it was announced yesterday.

Dr. Thomas B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland Extension Service, who is in charge of the State's crop adjustment programs, said the wheat growers would vote May 25.

The object of the referendum, he said, will be to find out whether Maryland growers desire a wheat control program after the present contracts expire at the end of the harvest season. It is proposed that the contracts be renewed for three years.

Francis Flood, of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, will address tomorrow's meeting, to be held at 9:45 a. m. at the Southern Hotel.

He will explain the plans and proposals with respect to future adjustment programs, the general situation as to wheat supply and other factors affecting the need for adjustment measures.

Not only the signers of present contracts but all who are eligible for such contracts will be permitted to vote in the coming referendum. In Maryland almost 8,000 farmers have signed wheat contracts and received benefit payments amounting to more than $1,500,000.

Skyline Association Is Formed at Meeting

Harrisonburg, Va., April 30 (AP).—The Skyline Shenandoah Scenic Route Association, a regional chamber of commerce embracing the east side of the Shenandoah National Park from Front Royal to Waynesboro, was organized at Elkton last night by 100 representatives from seven valley communities.

It will cooperate with the Eastside Highway Association which met at Luray yesterday to renew its drive for completion of a primary road between Elkton and Waynesboro south of Shenandoah River and adjacent to the park.

Science Group To Cite March Of Chemistry

Virginia Academy Plans Symposium on Last Day of State Parley.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 30.—The part played by chemistry in Virgina's development will be reviewed by State, industrial and academic chemists Saturday in a symposium featuring the last day of the Virginia Academy of Science meeting in the University of Richmond chemistry building.

Maj. W. C. Jones, State chemist, will tell the story of Virginia's chemical development since the early days of the colony at Jamestown to the present time. Among the interesting topics of his paper will be the earliest exports of pitch, potash and glass from the Virginia colony and glass and iron furnaces which were the infant industries of the early settlers.

He also will review the development of munitions manufacture during the War Between the States and the World War and the promotion of chemistry by such men as Washington, Jefferson, Lee and Maury.

Other papers will picture present-day chemical activities with a foresight of what the future holds. Major chemical industries in the State will be reviewed by Dr. R. E. Hussey, of Virginia Polytechnic Institute; William Clift, of Phipps & Bird, Inc., and C. Traxton Valentine, of the Valentine Meat Juice Co.

The remarkable diversity of products and the rapid technical progress which have placed the cellulose industries in the front rank of the State will be described by Dr. Hussey while other basic industries, including the production of acids and alkalies, nitrogen fixation, fertilizers, oils, tanning, and pigments will be discussed by Mr. Clift.

"What the Chemical Industry Means to the State" will be discussed by C. W. Newman, of the State chamber of commerce.

The symposium will close with "An Eye to the Future" by Dr. Lauren B. Hitchcock, of the University of Virginia, who will discuss some of the factors governing the establishment of the industries in Virginia, some gaps in present production and the need for a State plan for the development of the chemical industries.

School Entries In Spelling Bee Now Total 285

Greene County Contest to Be Held Tonight in Standardsville.

Enrollment of schools in the National Spelling Bee, sponsored by The Washington Post, reached 285 yesterday. Some schools are selecting their champions this week; in other sections the county contests are being held. All matches are open to the public.

The best spellers in Greene County schools will meet in Monroe High School at Stanardsville at 8 p. m. today to compete for the honor of representing the county in the area finals in Washington May 18. The number of representatives allowed from each school has been announced to teachers by A. W. Yowell, division superintendent of schools, who is in charge of the match.

Sister M. Joseph Marie has announced Margaret Brown and Alma Elder, both eighth-grade pupils, as the champions of Sacred Heart School in La Plata. They will take part in the Charles County match at La Plata High School tonight. Miss Mary Keech, seventh-grade teacher in Hughesville High School, has registered Frances Connelly and Hazel Padgett for the same match.

Morganza School Enrolled.

St. Joseph's School, at Morganza, has been enrolled by Sister Mary Clara, principal, who announced Leonard Thompson and Helene Russell as the representatives for the St. Marys County match.

Two more Stafford County schools entered yesterday, making 14 schools taking part in the combined King George-Stafford match next Tuesday night in Falmouth High School. Although these counties were late in getting under way, a good contest now is assured. Entries will be accepted until Monday.

Miss Jewell Hall entered the Oakton School and registered Gladys Leeds and Ada German as the representatives for the Fairfax County match. G. F. Poteet, principal, entered Floris Elementary School for the same match.

Marlboro High School held its match Monday morning, with Gardner Shugart, principal, as judge and Mrs. Frank P. Scrivener calling the words. The winners were: Helen Purschwitz, Elizabeth Peace, John Woolen and Margaret Priset. Although three grades took part, all four winners are eighth-grade pupils. These pupils will take part in the Prince Georges County match in Marlboro High School Friday at 7:30 p. m. Mrs. G. E. Lancaster, of Bowie, and Dr. William A. Griffith, of Berwyn have consented to be judges at that match.

Other Schools Enrolled.

Other schools which registered their representatives yesterday are:

Montgomery County — Germantown: A. L. Hicks, principal; Ollie May Norwood and William Young.

Loudoun County—Hillsboro: A. L. Hutton, principal; Irene Boyd and Curtis Longerbeam. Also Lincoln High School: A. O. Hutton, principal; Genevieve Lemon and Hugh Grubb.

Schools enrolled are invited to send their best spellers to the various county matches, dates of which have been announced, even though they do not select them in time to register them with The Post prior to the match. Any such names should then be sent later, to Alice Fox Pitts, spelling bee director, in order that the pupils may receive their certificates of merit.

Shooting of 2 By Sheriff Told At Liquor Trial

Bondurant Says 'Toll' for Cargo Was Asked in Virginia Case.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., April 30.—The shooting of "the Bondurant boys," by a county deputy sheriff came up here today for review before the Federal jury hearing the trial of 23 defendants in the Franklin County liquor conspiracy case.

The story was related by James F. Bondurant, who survived the officer's shot. He said he and his brother were shot down in the road at Maggodee Bridge by Deputy Sheriff Charley Rakes as they attempted to haul 305 gallons of Franklin County Liquor out of Red Valley.

A few moments before the shooting, Bondurant testified, Rakes had demanded, as a toll for crossing the blocked bridge, one of the three cars the brothers were using in the haul. Looking on, he said, was another deputy sheriff, Henry Abshire, with whom he had been negotiating protection for some time.

The evidence shifted the scene of the Government's case to a new section—the burnt chimney area—of Franklin County. In the record was the testimony of 36 witneses, approximately one-fourth of those summoned by the United States in the trial, most of whom had testified about the payment of "granny fees," to raiding officers for the protection of liquor activities.

Bondurant, a native of Snow Creek, son of a former county supervisor, told of moving over into the Burnt-Chimney-Red Valley section to set up a lumber business. He said he and his brother started making liquor and, as the business grew, operated some "nice stills." He said he went to see a garage man about arranging protection. This move, he said was not successful, so he later went directly to Deputy Henry Abshire. The witness quoted Abshire as saying he "thought he could" arrange for protection. He said he paid the deputy from $10 to $25 a month when he was operating and Abshire "cut" him only once. Meanwhile, he said, he was "cut" frequently by Officers Jeff Richards and Edgar Beckett.

Mrs. Mary Porter Dies in Hyattsville

Wife of William D. Porter Was Born in Capital.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Porter, wife of William D. Porter, died yesterday at her home, 14 Avon avenue, Hyattsville. Mrs. Porter was born in Washington, but had lived in Hyattsville for 42 years.

Surviving her, besides her husband, are a daughter, Mrs. J. H. Reeder, of Newburg, Charles County, Md., and a son, Robert G. Porter, of Hyattsville. Before her marriage Mrs. Porter was Miss Torbert.

They were attended by Miss Reszella Hollis and Mr. Carmen J. Ferro. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Westenhaver, and a graduate of St. Joseph's School. The bridegroom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Binns.

Specialists in Distribution

Milkmen are in business to distribute milk.

They recognize that the dairy farmer should have a fair price for his milk.

They favor farmer's cooperative organizations when well managed in the interest of the producers and confined to the collective sale of milk.

Collective bargaining is approved and welcomed by the corporate milkman.

When the cooperatives undertake the processing and distribution of milk, they complicate the service of companies organized solely to do those jobs with no improvement of their own position.

He is on strange ground when he enters the field of distribution.

Ventures of producers' cooperatives in the business of retail distribution have not been convincingly successful.

Usually the attempts result in wasteful duplication of facilities, impaired service to the public, and ultimately, severe financial loss to the producers. The dairy farmer serves best by sticking to his cows.

They are ably and adequately represented by the corporate milkman.

Milk Board Wins On Price Fixing

Case First Since Reversed Decision Backing Act.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 30.—The State milk commission today won the first case in which its authority had been challenged, since the State Supreme Court of Appeals reversed a former decision and declared the control act valid.

Judge Frank T. Sutton, jr., granted the commission a mandatory injunction in Law and Equity Court here to restrain Henry T. Patrick, of Lynchburg, from selling milk and buttermilk below the minimum prices fixed by the State agency.

Patrick is required by the injunction to make reports to the board as required under Regulation 2 and to pay assessments provided in Regulation 6 of rules prescribed for the Lynchburg area. The injunction expires June 1.

Delaware Plant Installs $2,000 in New Machines

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Seaford, Del., April 30.—The Seaford Garment Co. has installed $2,000 worth of new machinery, N. M. Conaway, manager of the plant, said today, and is now running to capacity, employing 100. The Walker & Gilbert factory, in Blades, is also running to capacity, giving employment to about 85. The pay rolls of these two factories go a long way in helping to relieve conditions in both towns.

Bill May Bar Four Riding in Front Seat

Baltimore, April 30 (AP).—A bill which would prohibit more than three persons riding on the front seat of an automobile will be introduced at the next session of the General Assembly.

John E. Raine, chairman of the commission named to recodify the State motor vehicle laws, said he felt such a law would aid in reducing the number of accidents.

Hat Passed to Save Mascot of Cadets

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., April 30.—Joe and Black Hazard are not worrying about the financial status of next year's cadet corps at Staunton Military Academy. It is enough to know that for the present year they have been spared.

Police discovered that Joe and Black Hazard, two canine mascots at S. M. A., were without necessary licenses. Apparently the dogs are the property of no one in particular.

So when word got around that the animals were to be sacrificed, the cadets passed the hat and enough was forthcoming to provide Joe and Black Hazard with credentials for twelve months.

A Questionable Proposal.

The bill introduced by Senator Lewis, making it possible for the President to extend and make permanent various functions now exercised by the Secretary of the Interior, contains proposals that should receive careful scrutiny. The important issue is not whether the hard-worked head of the Interior Department needs a $10,000-a-year assistant. Rather it concerns the possible consequences of reorganizing the department along the lines of this bill.

For example, Mr. Ickes thinks that the PWA, an independent temporary organization, should become part of the regular departmental set-up. This suggestion alone is one of great moment and calls for searching legislative analysis. The decision certainly should not be left to executive discretion, since inclusion of the PWA within a regular department would go far toward assuring its permanent existence.

It is questionable whether the Federal Government should maintain an organization of the type of the PWA after the present emergency has passed. Certainly, the scope of its activities will be greatly contracted and for that reason alone it will be subject to radical modification. Similarly, the desire of Secretary Ickes to attach the Oil Administration—of which he is the head—to the Department of the Interior is a dubious proposal. So far the efforts of the administrator to regulate interstate shipments of oil have been far from successful, and there is a question as to whether the present temporary law provides a proper permanent solution of the control problem in this field.

These are only a few of the issues raised by a seemingly innocuous proposal to convert the Department of the Interior into a Conservation and Works Department. The very name signifies an intention to embrace new fields of activity, some temporary and others of a permanent nature, carried on at present under the supervision of other departmental heads. If there is to be a reallocation of duties and a reorganization of departments such as would be necessary to meet the wishes of Secretary Ickes, the changes should be plainly indicated in any legislative proposal coming before Congress.

The Shocking Emile.

Paris has remembered that "Germinal" was first published 50 years ago, and so Paris has been commemorating Emile Zola. The event is perhaps more interesting to the historian of fashions in morals than to the critic of literature.

Zola's strategy was surprise. Except for one or two such experiments as "Le Reve," all his troops were shock-troops. From the days of "L'Assommoir" and "La Terre," his success depended almost entirely upon his ability to startle the young and horrify the old. Age was easily horrified a half-century ago. The youth of the Eighties were startled by episodes which the youth of these Thirties would scarcely remark. Power Zola possessed, yet little save that one kind of power.

His was a talent inevitably fatal to itself. Unfortunately for the "daring" author who is "daring" and nothing more, the worlds open to his conquest are relatively few, and his public resents repetition. Zola had to be followed by at least three decades of romantic writing, had to wait for new readers to be born and grow up, before there came any demand for successors to his Naturalistic School—who would go it one better, or one worse.

The New Traffic Law.

The tragic accident in which Mrs. Sarah Bowerman, wife of Washington's popular public librarian, was struck down yesterday by an automobile out of control, once more emphasizes the need for eternal vigilance in the campaign to control inefficient driving.

The long-sought passage of the so-called safety responsibility bill for Washington represents a considerable advance. With the President's signature, the District will join the 21 States and eight Canadian provinces that have already adopted the bill. It is based on the theory that enforcement of traffic regulations must precede any satisfactory elimination of accidents. If statistics can be trusted, Washington may now look for some improvement in its traffic record. Last year, with a general increase of 16 per cent in automobile accidents throughout the country, of the seven States to show a decrease, six of them had adopted the safety responsibility bill.

Operators' licenses and registration certificates of both local and out-of-town drivers may be suspended on any one of three counts: driving while drunk, leaving the scene of an accident illegally, or failure to pay a judgment in a traffic case within 30 days. The local enforcement will, of course, be routine. But approximately 25 per cent of District accidents involve out-of-town drivers. However, of these, two-thirds bear Virginia and Maryland licenses. Inasmuch as both these States already have adopted the bill, Washington can rely on full cooperation from neighboring traffic authorities in promoting enforcement.

To the District traffic officials and the American Automobile Association who have sponsored this safety legislation, the community owes a vote of thanks.

Toward Bimetallism?

Representative Dies, of Texas, has found a silver lining to the dark clouds which to most people seem to be gathering around the Administration's silver-buying program. The consequent rise in silver prices has resulted in the disappearance from circulation of large amounts of silver coins in countries such as China and Mexico, with troubles ahead for another great silver-using nation—India. But Mr. Dies concludes that the final result of our erratic silver policy will be a world-wide bimetallic currency system at a 16 to 1 ratio. It would be interesting to know by what chain of reasoning this conclusion is reached.

Excepting China, no great nation uses silver as a standard of value, and the trend has been away from a metallic base in those countries that have been forced to abandon the gold standard. Moreover, whenever there is speculation regarding the outlook for an international monetary conference, the discussion deals with rehabilitation of the gold standard. The alternative most frequently recommended is reliance upon some form of managed currency, possibly tied to gold.

Certainly there is no gainsaying the strength of the arguments in favor of a speedy return to a stable world gold standard. The fluctuating exchanges, resultant exchange restrictions, interference with foreign trade, augmented unemployment and a whole train of accompanying evils are due to currency instability.

Nevertheless, our silver-purchase policy has strengthened the hands of those who argue that the time is not ripe for an international currency agreement. Even if the present silver policy is discontinued after the metal reaches $1.29 per ounce, the irresponsibility with which Congress launched us upon a course that has increased existing world currency chaos will perpetuate fears of fresh experiments on our part.

Countries operating upon a gold-standard basis, and silver-using nations compelled to use paper in place of the silver currency of which we have denuded them, can not be expected to fall in with the ideas of a few of our politicians. There is no evidence that other nations harbor the illusion that bimetallism at some particular ratio will meet the needs of the rest of the world, to say nothing of the United States.

Fighting Forest Fires.

Today the ordinary airplane flies 210 miles per hour—the distance of a city block in a second!

From his perch a thousand feet above the treetops the airman scans the landscape for miles around. He sees behind the mountain, down into the deepest canyon. In one hour's flying this inspection covers 5,000 square miles on a clear day. Two airplanes survey the largest forest reserve in the land on a three-hour flight.

The pilot through his glass detects a distant tiny wisp of smoke. Some passing tourist in that canyon has tossed a cigarette stub into the leaves. In two minutes the airman is circling over the spot, his radio broadcasting its exact location, the extent of the fire, the nature of the adjoining timber, the nearest water, the best way to approach it.

The ground station would not discover this smoke for several hours. In fighting forest fires it is time that counts. Nature may take a century to replace the first hour's devastation.

The Nation's valuable timber is disappearing with alarming speed. One year's losses would put an adequate forest patrol into the air.

Col. H. H. Arnold several years ago commanded Cressy Field, California. He directed his Army pilots to take their flying exercises over the nearby national forest. This area was divided into checker-board squares on their maps. Each pilot made a daily flight over his square to radio down his discovery of incipient fires. Air headquarters telephoned the alarm to the ground stations in the forest. Often 24 hours were saved to the fire-fighters. Col. Arnold's idea was splendid, but such work did not belong to the Army Air Corps, and it was stopped.

As the Post-Impressionist has frequently pointed out in his Column, this modern implement again should be employed by the authority responsible for the preservation of our forests.

What, May Day Again!

May Day, it goes almost without saying, is not what it used to be. Even the customs usually associated with it are no longer to be found except in the dictionary, the Encyclopedia Britannica, and a few junior colleges. But in spite of the absence of village greens, bucolic lads and lassies, and even the pole itself, May Day has rolled around once more and some sort of recognition of it is expected.

An extensive search for information suitable for an editorial discloses only a few prosaic facts. Webster says this is "the fifth month of the year, containing 31 days." And that is most decidedly that. The Encyclopedia Britannica does its best to loosen up on the subject, but it still sounds like the Encyclopedia Britannica. "All classes of the people were up with the dawn," says that august tome, "and went a-maying." "A-maying," to explain, meant chopping the choicest tree of a nearby forest, dragging it to the village where it was stripped and decorated with flowers, and erecting it so that those so inclined could dance around it.

But those were the pre-shoppe days of merrie England. So far as can be learned from every available source, the tradition of May Day is now practically extinct. Industrialism has killed it on the village greens and dictatorships have stamped out its socialistic observance along with parliaments. In Russia there will be big parades, but even there the new Moscow subway probably seems more important. But there is still its designation as Child Health Day. Physical education classes will take advantage of the date to doff middy blouses and cut cheesecloth capers in formation. And in such weather surely any excuse for lively exercise is welcome.

Today, then, is May Day. Further than that the deponent saith not.

Fate Of The Nation.

The editors of The Nation must be busy with explanations these days. For the 70-year-old weekly, long characterized by its militant liberalism, has been purchased by—may the gods bear witness—an international banker! Already the anvils of sarcasm are ringing as Die-Hards and Communists sharpen their little darts. But whatever jibes may be forthcoming, Maurice Wertheim, the purchaser, can turn them all. No better proof of liberalism could be conceived: he permits his banking hand on the right to know precisely what his publishing hand on the left is doing, and smiles the while.

While the development is not without its humorous aspect, it is significant as further evidence that the truly great man can never be measured in terms of his social or economic environment. For Mr. Wertheim has been an unfettered thinker all the time he has been a successful banker, and advancing years have in no way sapped the independence of his mind.

He has been a director of The Nation for the last eleven years, during which period the editorial attitude has certainly not become more conservative. Moreover, he was a founder of the progressive Theater Guild and among his other directorships counts both industrial establishments and the New School of Social Research. Perhaps some part of his clear liberalism may now express itself through the broad-measure columns of the paper. Perhaps the magazine will now no longer feel compelled, for instance, to wax ecstatic over everything Russian merely because it is Russian.

The present excellent editorial board remains in full charge. Control of The Nation, however, is to be vested in an independent foundation with a self-perpetuating board of directors. Mr. Wertheim, who will serve as a member of the board, presumably will provide the necessary working capital. Thus the continued publication of this journal of opinion is insured, for which the American public should be duly grateful. As part of the left-hand lens in the stereoscope through which the passing scene is made intelligible, it serves as a most valuable aid to proper perspective.

Life's Little Ironies.

What was scheduled Sunday as the season's swan song for the New York Philharmonic Orchestra turned out to be a sparrow scherzo instead. Disdaining even the great Toscanini's baton, the slightest movement of which is regarded as law when he is conducting, the sparrow, or "flutterer" as he is sometimes called, proceeded to live up to his nickname. The audience was thoroughly demoralized by the bird's indecision as to an appropriate resting place. Not even a chorus composed of such names as Elizabeth Rethberg and Giovanni Martinelli, was able to hold the people's attention.

Toscanini, in following his own inclinations and ignoring certain traditions adhered to by his foreign predecessors, has made an enviable and unique record in this country. It is his custom to conduct without a score and usually this in itself is sufficient to command the most rapt audience. But even the rarity of this accomplishment was forgotten in the antics of the commonest of all birds.

That a sparrow, with vocal ability wholly limited to an unpleasing, occasional cheep, should steal the stage from some of America's most famous human songbirds is but another of life's little jokes. It is doubtful if Toscanini, "wrapped in the solitude of his own originality," was aware that Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" was playing second fiddle to one of nature's pests. At any rate, he was able to ignore the intruder, which was more than Amelia Earheart could do last week when what might have been another record-breaking flight was foiled by a mere bug lodging in her eye.

Horse Sense.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

It is agreeable occasionally to be able to compliment a Legislature upon showing common sense and an opportunity now arises through the tabling of the bill proposing to require all school teachers and professors to take an oath of allegiance to the State and Federal Constitution.

Similar proposals have been hooted out of the Legislatures of several States and it is proper that the California Legislature should similarly dispose of a meaningless measure which, as a practical matter, is ballyhoo and a statutory insult. Some of the agitators in this respect would be well off if they could show as good a bill of health in the matters of intelligence and patriotism as can the educators they propose to single out as proper objects of public suspicion.

Hard To Get Away From.

During the temporary absence of Mr. Elderman, The Post's cartoonist, a symposium of editorial reaction to current national and foreign affairs will be published from day to day in this space. The reprinted drawings will not necessarily represent our own viewpoint, but are selected as reflections of considered opinions on the passing scene. The editors of The Post wish to make full acknowledgment of the courtesy of their contemporaries in granting permission for this procedure.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Favoring Japan's Proposal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Both the Senate and the House have been considering measures which their authors hope will keep America out of the next war. One of these measures is designed to take profit out of war. Another one is meant to enforce American neutrality. Such proposals are, of course, commendable, but their authors frankly admit that when war sentiment runs high such well-intentioned measures might be repealed by Congress.

Why not accept the Japanese suggestion that the major navies of the world cut their respective strength in half? There should be some way to work out a definite naval program on the basis of that suggestion if the powers, particularly our own country, are really solicitous for world peace. The Japanese contention, as I understand it, is that all navies should be so reduced that none would be capable of engaging in aggressive operations in distant waters, and that all should be employed for the defense of their respective territorial waters. It is difficult to see how any reasonable critic can object to such a proposal.

The late President Roosevelt said in one of his messages to Congress that "a strong and self-confident nation should be peculiarly careful not only of the rights but of the susceptibilities of its neighbors." These words should be taken to heart at this particular time when the nerves of nations seem to be on edge. There is no reason why we can not be friendly with Japan.

Japan, ever since her entrance into the society of nations through the good offices of our own country, has made unceasing efforts to adhere to the "good neighbor" principle in her dealings with us. One instance of this was her voluntary restriction of the immigration of her laboring class to our country.

The Japanese have long been ardent admirers of the United States. They have been earnest students of the West in all lines of activity, patterning their schools after ours, adopting our banking and industrial systems as well as the latest methods of sanitation and up-to-date knowledge of medicine. The United States has the responsibility of maintaining this high place in the esteem of Japan. Should we cooperate with Japan in the naval question we would rise still higher in the Japanese estimation. The time is ripe for a constructive move of this nature.

Reply To Mr. Lanier.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Re the reply of Alexander Sydney Lanier, in The Post of April 24, to the letter entitled "Share Croppers' Distress," by "American Reader:" It should be noted that when Mr. Lanier proceeds to describe conditions existing on this typical plantation, he begins by an attempt to gloss over the wretched conditions, so often exposed, which exist among share croppers in the South by saying, "While not denying, perhaps a few isolated cases of abuse."

What Mr. Lanier carefully conceals, and what we would like to know is, how much can the tenant save out of all the munificence from the landlord? Does he, or can he at the end of the year have anything to show for his year's labor? Any money? Does the landlord compel him to buy his provisions from the plantation "commissary?" If so, at what rate of increase over their cost in public stores? Why does not Mr. Lanier tell all this?

He even states that the landlord looks after the spiritual welfare of the tenants. This is generosity indeed. One wonders if this is religious advice from the landlord himself or by means of furnishing preachers. He states that with all this generosity "they are in many ways far better off than the landlord," the identical language used by slave owners during slavery of the "ideal happy condition of the slave." One would like to know if the landlord would be willing to swap places with the share cropper in view of the latter's better condition.

And now, timely enough, there appears in The Post of April 27, right on the heels of Mr. Lanier's denial, one from Madge Lorin in which she further deals with the wretched condition of the share croppers in the South, painting their condition far more deplorable than that depicted by the writer to whom Mr. Lanier takes exception. What has he to say to this? His letter seems a very lame attempt to gloss over real facts in the case.

PRESLY HOLLIDAY.
Washington, April 27.

Recovery Proposals.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Granting the morale of the country is low, with a fifty-fifty break it can come back and be finer than ever before.

It should be embodied in the Constitution that not more than one-fourth representation be given one group, profession or class in our legislative halls, State and Nation—as example, one-fourth lawyers, one-fourth dirt farmers, one-fourth hard-headed business men and one-fourth miscellaneous. This would bring about a more uniform representation, give a balanced viewpoint and encourage more of our able lawyers, business and professional men and farmers to enter politics in order to serve their country.

Secondly, add up the average additional costs of plows, machinery and manufactured goods sold within the United States above the world price and return it to the farmers in bounty. Cut out all red tape and let the farmer raise all he can and regain the world markets. This bounty will put farmers on a parity or equal footing with industry, as there is and can be no protection for cotton and wheat which must be sold at world prices. Take off or reduce the processing tax if the textile group is not intelligent or efficient enough to compete for world trade, and other groups likewise. The automobile industry is so efficient no protection is asked or given and it holds the world trade.

The time has arrived when we must go forward as a Nation. When the above-mentioned things are accomplished, the wheels of industry will hum; we will become a happy, industrious and prosperous people—a blessing and joy will be ours.

JOHN BELL HOOD.
Jonestown, Miss., April 27.

Outmoded Protection.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I notice by the findings of the recent school bus tragedy at Rockville that the driver of the bus was held for carelessness and the railroad train crew released. The judge states that the driver showed negligence because of his failure to stop and he also states "Maybe I'm out of touch with the way people regard railroad crossings, but I feel that it is the duty of everybody to stop and see if a train is advancing."

Now that traffic is so great and speed considered a necessity, it would be quite a task for the traveling public to follow the rule as stated by the judge. The railroads, in order to keep themselves out of trouble, had laws passed that it was the duty of all before crossing railroads at grades to stop, look and listen. These laws were put in force at the time of horse and buggy traffic and are not practical now when automobiles travel at the rate of 50 or 60 miles an hour and railroad trains at 50 or 100 miles an hour.

Some other provision should be made to take care of traffic. Where there is a grade crossing there should be a watchman 24 hours a day whose duty it is to signal traffic at all times and not just when a train is approaching. It was claimed the engineer blew the whistle and the other devices for giving warning were all in good working order. Automatic signals, ringing of bells and blowing of whistles are no longer a protection to these fast-moving transportation carriers and should not be depended on any longer. WILLIAM J. GROVE.
Lime Kiln, Md., April 27.

Note To Reviewer.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to correct the writer of a Weekly Review in The Post, suggesting that the 41-year-old King Boris III is very much unmarried. He married the Princess Giovanna of Italy, third daughter of the King and Queen of Italy, at Assisi (Italy), October 25, 1930.

However, I wish to say that the page is splendidly written and I read it every week with great interest and pleasure.

GEORGE GAZZERA.

Universal English.

English as a universal language has many champions. Perhaps the failure of all the artificial languages has something to do with it. There is no question that English is now more widely spoken than French, long the accepted language of diplomacy, while Latin, once the accepted language of scholars, is going rapidly into the discard.

But the case is not quite so simple as this. English is difficult to learn, and it lacks the lucidity of French. There are those, too, who would argue that a universal language is not desirable, but that facility in the use of other languages than one's own would be a mere potent instrument of culture. There is something to be said for this contention.

The Post Impressionist

Unmasking An Old Friend.

Post Office, Wednesday.

"MOVING in a general northeasterly direction, the Gulf Stream crosses the Atlantic Ocean, from the Gulf of Mexico to the southern part of the British Isles, then flows along them, thus tempering their climate."

You learned that at school, didn't you?

Of course you did!

And you have never met an Englishman who didn't assume that this noble activity on the part of the Gulf Stream was proof positive of Heaven cherishing an especial tenderness for Great Britain?

Of course you haven't!

Well, the schoolbooks were all wrong.

And those boasting Britishers were worse.

For French scientists have just found out——

* * *

But let us break it to you gently. You have been fond and foolish, but you have been very human.

* * *

It is curious—and it is pathetic—how most of us cling to at least one straw of faith in science.

* * *

Every man is warned, by what intellect man possesses, that there is no reasonable basis for such faith. Every man, in his own lifetime, hears Science proclaim some "New Truth" destructive to some old one—and then lives to hear Science repudiate this New Truth for a newer truth, refute today what yesterday it would have died for, all the while subconsciously getting ready to jeer tomorrow at the Newer Truth which it promulgates today.

For ever so long, the doctors prescribed crushed toads for fever, diamond-dust for love. A generation ago, Science had us all descending from apes; today it doubts whether any of us descends from anything.

About the time of the World War, Freud reduced human emotions to a single emotion and a couple of dreams; this year, Dr. Jung, once Freud's warmest disciple, enlarges human emotions to a generous dozen and differentiates dreams until they have a good deal less significance than those of Pharaoh's household. Once, if you broke a leg, you ought to have all your teeth out; now if you are losing every tooth in your head, you ought not to allow any to be extracted.

* * *

Truth is absolute, whatever else is relative. Ask Prof. Einstein.

* * *

And yet every man clings desperately to some modicum of belief in Science!

He believed, until yesterday, in the Gulf Stream.

* * *

So you have company in your misery.

* * *

The French found out the fraud. The very London Times admits it:

"Nothing is sadder, as life advances, than the exposure of one's friends," sighs that Times, "the realization, reluctantly and in the face of massive evidence, that they are humbugs. It is particularly galling when they have for years been receiving tributes of gratitude for the kind deeds they were supposed to be doing. Now to join the ranks of the exposed comes one of our oldest friends.

"It is a myth, the story Englishmen love to tell to foreigners . . . of how the Gulf Stream sees from afar the noble, but rather cold, British Isles and hurries to do some unostentatious warming. We are not in fact so favored. The Gulf Stream does not reach us."

* * *

To be sure, the Times suggests that the French scientists are envious. It says they may imply that the Gulf Stream, which admittedly does at least start on its mission of mercy to England, is tempted en route by the beauties of France, like any American tourist.

But this base suggestion won't hold—water. The French scientists aver that the Gulf Stream never, in effect, gets anywhere—just fritters itself away in mid-Atlantic.

* * *

From Science the Times flies for consolation to reality. It recalls that England need not "take too much to heart the exposure of the Gulf Stream, because the benefits, such as they are, remain. Somebody is doing something to take the edge off England's northernness"—and anybody who wants to may claim the credit.

So "the chief annoyance" caused by the findings of the French savants will be among school-teachers. "If now it is geography's turn to go, what certitudes are left, what subjects can be trusted to stay the same for a generation or so while a schoolmaster's back is turned?"

* * *

* * *

But precisely therein we find our own share of consolation:

Up until this Year of Grace, ever since Benjamin Franklin first wrote about the Gulf Stream, Science declared that the Gulf Stream crossed the Atlantic. Now Science says the Gulf Stream stops half-way.

Therefore, Science will next year discover that there isn't any Gulf Stream.

And then, year after next, Science will discover that the Gulf Stream does cross to England, after all.

Along The Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

A Good Time.

THE seriousness with which Mr. Roosevelt looks upon the situation in the Senate, as evidenced by his effort to arouse support behind his program Sunday night is apparently not shared by the Senators themselves. A group of them went up to the White House yesterday to see what he wanted done about the pending NRA bill and seemingly had a splendid time. All the afternoon they were laughing down on the Hill about what happened.

BARGERON.

It seems that first Mr. Roosevelt took the occasion to chide Joe Robinson over the tie-up in the Senate. He told him the country was getting very impatient, and inasmuch as the House was working along so smoothly it did seem that something could be done to speed up matters in the Senate. No sooner had Joe's colleagues got over enjoying his discomfort than the matter of the NRA came up.

• • • •

The Senators suggested that it would be best to extend the NRA for a year with provisions outlawing price-fixing and confining the act to interstate business. Mr. Roosevelt is reported to have said "yes, yes," that was the thing to do, when who should appear but Donald Richberg. Donald said it was not the thing to do, that what should be done was to extend the NRA as is and furthermore this sort of extension fitted in with what Mr. Roosevelt said about the NRA in his Sunday night speech. Whereupon, Mr. Roosevelt is reported to have agreed that Donald was right, that full extension did fit in with his speech. So they all agreed to disagree and the matter was left right where it was.

What tickled the Senators so much, apparently, was they couldn't find any attitude expressed in Mr. Roosevelt's speech. Then why should he say Donald's view fitted in with his attitude was something they couldn't understand. Anyway it seemed to tickle them very much. If Donald hadn't come in and reminded the President of his Sunday night attitude they insisted everything would have been jake.

• • • •

Apparently, Donald appeared from the seclusion into which he had gone to prepare for the NRA fight before the Supreme Court. He was relieved from virtually all other duties recently to do just this. Ordinarily, Stanley Reed, the very competent solicitor general, would be depended upon to save the NRA, but it has become a very personal matter with Donald and so he is to be in the fight, too. He is said to have told friends that it was the fight of his life and one that he relished.

You can appreciate how it really is the fight of his life, because, having been relieved from his other duties, if the NRA goes under there will be no duties left for him.

This would not have been the case several months ago. At that time Donald had almost as many duties as Mr. Ickes. Had the NRA been shot from under him then he could have, for one thing, held on to his co-ordinating business. But under the circumstances now one can bet his last penny Donald's whole heart will be in the plea before the Supreme Court.

• • • •

There are a lot of things hard to understand about Donald. One would think he would have grabbed at the Senators' proposal, that is, extension of the NRA for a year without price fixing and intrastate regulation. Because he has frequently said the NRA wants to withdraw from both. He wants to withdraw from them but he doesn't want withdrawal written in the law.

There are some indications that he wants to do his own interpreting as to what is interstate commerce and what is price fixing. And there are also indications that if it were left to Donald to determine what is intersate commerce he would hold that a pair of pants bought in one State and worn in another constitutes interstate commerce.

Perhaps, what is back in Donald's mind is a graceful retreat. He can't get Hugh Johnson out of his head. Hugh is always saying the NRA was a going concern when he left it. This burns Donald up.

Pastor Quits Charge.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., April 30.—The Rev. Ralph W. Lind, pastor of the Fayetteville Lutheran charge for the last 10 years, has resigned to accept the pastorate of a church at York. He will take up his new duties June 1.

President's Radio Talk Showed Little Of New Deal's Real Goal

Business Courage Fails, Mistrusting Motives Of Administration.

By Elliott Thurston.

NOT the least extraordinary thing about the New Deal is the wide variety of social and economic philosophies which its chief figures represent. And with the President continually trying to strike a compromise it becomes quite impossible to discover just what viewpoint is to prevail. Often the attempt to compromise produces meaningless confusion.

• • • •

To many minds, the President's latest radio talk was disappointing because it gave no further clew to the riddle of where the New Deal is the headed. Nobody is any the wiser, as a result of that speech, as to whether we are in for a policy of self-containment or serious effort to restore world trade, whether we mean to go on seeking higher price levels; whether we are to have an economy of abundance or one of continued restriction; whether we are seeking ultimate return to some presumably modernized gold standard, or whether we are to have a managed paper currency.

There are many other questions which practical men, whether in business or government, would like to have answered—which they believe could and should be answered. Mr. Roosevelt furnished no answers last Sunday night, nor is it possible by diligent inquiry to gain from prominent officials any idea of what are the direction and larger purposes of the New Deal. All too often Administration officials confess off the record that they do not have the faintest idea of the ultimate aims; that while they have their own views they either can not get them accepted at the White House or are not sure where the President stands.

• • • •

THERE are numerous examples: tariff policy, the silver-buying program, naval expansion, for instance. Nobody knows whether Secretary of State Hull's views on tariff reduction under the most favored nation formula are the views of the President or whether, as many suspect, Mr. Roosevelt leans more to Mr. Peek's opposing ideas. Nor, with the uncertainty over the objectives in price-raising and monetary policy, is it possible to divine whether the New Deal seeks ultimately to stabilize currencies and to restore world trade.

The meaning of the silver policy, with its devastating deflationary effects upon two good neighbors, China and Mexico, remains wrapped in mystery. Why are we accumulating all of this metal? We do not need it as backing for the currency, for we have more gold for that purpose than we know what to do with. Does the silver buying represent only a weak surrender to the silver bloc or is it part of some large, but undisclosed, scheme for a future managed currency?

Why are we in one breath excited about "neutrality," striving to "take the profits out of war," and seeking means to insulate and isolate ourselves from the rest of the world in case of another great war; yet in the next breath we are calling for the biggest naval and air establishments in our history? Is there any rationalization of these things, or is it just a haphazard combination? Is a vast armada necessary to keep us out of war or is it to protect our trade in case of war?

• • • •

IT is absurd to say that many of these larger questions can not be answered yet. Undoubtedly most of the uncertainty which prevails in the country, the misgivings and doubts, arise from the fact that nobody is able to guess where the New Deal stands on such fundamental matters. Inevitably many fear that there is no plan or program or rationalized purpose. Business men, particularly, in the absence of any satisfactory answers, and confronted repeatedly with governmental compromises on what they consider important, fundamental issues, can not be blamed for distrust and lack of confidence.

Faith in the currency, in the integrity of the Federal credit, in the New Deal's purpose to permit private profits, does not depend merely upon spoken assurances that the Administration seeks a sound currency, or to safeguard the budget, or to allow "fair" profits, whatever they may be, but upon its attitude and actions generally. And the inability to understand what its larger purposes are, to reconcile wholly contradictory actions and policies, plus the constant compromises on fundamentals, are bound to undermine faith in all assurances.

To not a few friends of the New Deal a great part of this mystification seems unnecessary—and fatal. It seems to be standing in the way of the progress of a recovery that almost all authorities agree is possible and already under way, but retarded by the needless confusions. It is not so much that business men, especially, oppose specific actions or policies as that they can not understand the future implications. Repeatedly business men say that they do not care so much what rules are made for the game as long as they can find out what they are or what they are going to be. If they could get some sense of direction, of definiteness, they could go ahead and do business, even though the rules seem harsh or unnecessarily restrictive.

• • • •

THIS state of affairs is by no means new, but it becomes increasingly acute as the New Deal appears to be floundering and as impatience increases because of the President's purpose to go on changing still more rules of the game while failing to make understandable the deeper, larger, final purposes of past as well as future actions and policies. So there is complaint in terms of objecting to more reforms until there is more recovery.

The confusion and the complaints are by no means merely blind, or partisan. Much the same state of mind prevails in Congress, not simply with the opposition but with the President's own party, the loyalists as well as the outspoken dissenters. It is not possible off-hand, to think of one Senator, for example, who is not filled with the deepest doubts and completely confused about the real direction and purpose of the New Deal.

The loyalists, of course, do not proclaim their troubled state of mind from the housetops. They go along under the rules of party loyalty. But they are not loyal to the New Deal. They either do not understandit, or they fear it, or they definitely do not believe in it. This is no secret to anybody familiar with the real, off-the-record, opinion throughout the Democratic side of the Senate.

Even Congress Confused About Purposes Of National Leaders.

THE loyalists, at least, would agree that much of this confusion should be and must be cleared up in the interests, not only of their party but, what is surely far more important, in the interests of the progress of recovery. The two are identical in the end. They would like to get together with the Administration and arrive at some fixity of policy and purpose, even if that involves throwing some things overboard and confessing some errors. They feel, naturally, that the President is not being well advised, that he is too much surrounded, as all Presidents are, by the sycophants who tell him only what they think will please him, not what he ought to hear.

Above all, the opinion repeatedly heard in Congress, among Republicans as well as Democrats, is that the opportunity to clear the way for real progress in recovery is at hand, that it is being missed or, at least, jeopardized by failure to come to and stick to a few definite fundamental conclusions and convictions, and, finally, that the basic objectives should be stated so that the country, whether it likes them or not, will at least know what they are.

No End of Books

G. H. Doran Fills His 'Chronicles Of Barabbas' With The Friends Of A Publisher's Lifetime.

IN 1884, at the age of 15, George H. Doran became a publisher's helper at $2 a week—this in a Toronto firm printing religious tracts. Now, after 50 active years of selling what other men have written, after becoming one of the Elder Statesmen in the profession, he has set down without notes and from memory his vivid and absorbing recollections, calling the book "Chronicles of Barabbas" (Harcourt Brace, $3.50).

The allusion needs a word. As Mr. Doran tells it, Lord Byron had once done some especial kindness for his publisher, the very grasping John Murray, jr., in return for which Murray sent him a lushly bound copy of the Bible. Thinking this "a highly irrelevant if not completely hypocritical" gesture, Byron straightway sent the Bible back—after making one little change. In the Gospel by St. John (not St. Matthew, as Mr. Doran has it) Byron scratched out a word so that "Now Barabbas was a robber," made it read "Now Barabbas was a publisher."

And, says Mr. Doran, "I must confess that the first 25 years of my publishing was after the manner of Barabbas—for in the eighties and nineties of the last century the poor author suffered at the hands of his publisher." But, in Mr. Doran's span, the tables have turned . . . "competition among publishers has fringed the scarlet robes of authors with ermine and gold, and in the publishing world the peerage is now the Society of Authors and not the Association of Publishers."

BUT Mr. Doran's reminiscences make something better than a philosophy of publishing. To be sure, he notes the rise of a trade into what has become a profession. He points out that it was the literary agent who rose in the eighteen-eighties like "a valiant David to do battle with Goliath" and all but command of the field for the authors. He observes the rising tide of young publishing houses and comments rather forlornly that "as book-publishing becomes more and more a species of sublimated magazine-publishing the younger publishers fall in with the mood of the month, rightly concluding that the reading public is too fickle in these days of flux to justify those adventures into ambitious projects which called for large investments but held out the hope of permanent demand."

Yet that is a rare mood of Mr. Doran's. Though he is a proudly self-acknowledged Victorian, though the shock of the war (whose secondary effects he knew with peculiar intimacy, from an eastward voyage with the deported Capt. Boy-Ed to his commission from the British ministry of information to print allied propaganda from August, 1914, on) made him change his modes of thinking and of doing business, there is scarcely a note of reactionary melancholy in the book. The Irish is too strong in him for any weltschmerz. All he records in these pages is genial and pleasant and lovely.

All, that is, save his opinion of Lawrence, which begins: "I barely escaped being publisher for D. H. Lawrence . . . . As I have closely followed the work of Lawrence since that time, I have congratulated myself that I have not been his publisher" and ends: "His is a voice crying not in the wilderness 'Repent ye!' but in the red-light district of humanity he would debase to the level of his own puerility and intellectual degeneracy."

In the margin beside that last passage I scribbled: "My eyes!" But we've other things to attend to.

• • • •

CHIEFLY, "Chronicles of Barabbas" is an account of Mr. Doran's friends among authors, editors and publishers met through his roles in George H. Doran Co. and Doubleday, Doran & Co. That they are legion is the best accolade one could give him. And that they are figures about whom the reader can't help but wish to hear is what gives this book its continual lively fascination.

Here is a salient chapter on Arnold Bennett, "ever," says Mr. Doran, "my friend, counsellor and enthusiast." The event, in 1908, which was to bring them together was very simple . . . Mrs. Doran had to spend several days in bed, chanced to read "The Old Wives' Tale," and said to her husband: "I have been reading the most marvelous book I have read in 20 years . . . do cable at once for the American rights." But when a thousand sheets of the book came over, no more than 350 sold. Then out of the blue, Estes & Lauriat in Boston sold 500 copies in two weeks through the persuasion of one of their salesmen, Frederic G. Melcher (now proprietor of the Publishers' Weekly and donor of the Newbery Medal for children's books). And the book took the country like a prairie fire.

So Mr. Doran became Bennett's American publisher and intimate friend. The chapter tells us everything about Bennet from his practice of rising every day at six and writing a thousand words on a pot of tea before nine, to his friction with his first wife and his lyric rejuvenescence with his second.

And here is a sidelight on the distinguished delineator of women's character. Bennett, at 46 and the full tide of his fame, was talking with Mr. Doran, telling him how entertained he was that almost every woman who met him asked: "How do you know so well the heart of a woman that you can write so understandingly about her?" To this he always replied: "All I have to do is to think I am a woman and write as a woman feels."

"But of course, George," he continued, "that is all damn nonsense; the real fact is I have had 41 mistresses."

• • • •

MR. DORAN has equally frank remarks on H. G. Wells . . . . "the greatest and most versatile mind I have ever encountered," who wants to write one more large-scale volume, "Man and His Work," and after that to produce a general encyclopedie less verbose than the Brittanica.

There are portraits of E. V. Lucas, "who personifies all you have ever conceived to be your ideal (certainly mine) of the intellectual gentleman of the old school;" Mary Roberts Rinehart, "My First Lady of the Land," whose son, Stanley (of Farrar & Rinehart) married Mr. Doran's daughter (the model for Mrs. Rinehart's "Bab: A Sub-Deb"); Irvin Cobb, admired old friend for whom Mr. Doran has but one prayer: "God keep him from becoming a professional Southerner;" P. G. Wodehouse, known as "Plum" to his intimates, who never in the least degree suggests the effervescent humor which comes from his pen; Max Beerbohm, "urbane, ingratiating, studiedly naive, he would appear to be remote from things practical; but give him 6, 12, or 24 hours to consider a proposed exchange of talent for cash, and there emerges one of the most acute economic minds, a perfect confusion to the designs of even a modern and regenerate Barabbas."

And roughly, I should judge, about 80 more portraits of the great and near-great. To compare the book with Frank Swinnerton's somewhat similar "The Victorian Scene" is to find in the "Chronicles" a rather dismaying thinness of critical acumen. But Mr. Doran seems to have made wealth of anecdote and geniality of appreciation quite enough for a feast.

To Attend Chamber Sessions.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 30.—John B. Ferguson and Dr. Victor D. Miller, president and director, respectively, of the Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce, will attend sessions of the national chamber at Washington tomorrow. Last year Ferguson introduced a resolution urging grade-crossing elimination as a public works project.

Herrick And May

By
Wm. Lyon Phelps

THE poetry of Robert Herrick of Devonshire, England, who published his volume called "Hesperides" in 1648, is alive with the spirit of May and all the flowery days of spring. I recommend all readers to take down from the shelf this book and read it during the Maytime.

I have just received an interesting letter from Henry Tetlow, of Philadelphia:

Now is the time of year when—I was about to write "all good men"—when one should take out his "Hesperides." How many have read the whole of Herrick,—and if not, why not? Is there anything lovelier in English than the first fourteen or fifteen lines of "The Welcome to Sack," beginning.

So soft streams meet . . .?

Of course, I can not read Herrick any more without recollections of Prof. Beers and his great introductory remark:

But is strikes me that that is one of the greatest pleasures of great writing: the associations its repetition invokes.

Prof. Beers' comment referred to the fact that at times Herrick wrote the daintiest and most graceful lyrics and at other times the coarsest and most disgusting epigrams.

For May Day suppose we read together a few stanzas from Herrick's:

CORINNA'S GOING A-MAYING.

Upon her wings presents the god unshorn.
See how Aurora throws her fair,
Fresh-quilted colours through the air:
Get up, sweet slug-a-bed, and see
The dew bespangling herb and tree.
Each flower has wept and bow'd toward the east
Above an hour since: yet you not dress'd;
Nay! not so much as out of bed?
When all the birds have matins said,
And sung their thankful hymns, 'tis sin,
Nay, profanation to keep in,
Whereas a thousand virgins on this day
Spring, sooner than the lark, to fetch in May.

Rise and put on your foliage, and be seen,
To come forth, like the spring-time, fresh and green,
And sweet as Flora. Take no care
For jewels for your gown or hair:
Fear not; the leaves will strew
Gems in abundance upon you:
Besides, the childhood of the day has kept,
Against you come, some orient pearls unwept;
Come and receive them while the light
And Titan on the eastern hill
Retires himself, or else stands still
Till you come forth. Wash, dress, be brief in praying:
Few beads are best when once we go a-Maying.
Come, let us go while we are in our prime;
We shall grow old apace, and die
Before we know our liberty.
Our life is short, and our days run
As fast away as does the sun;
And, as a vapour or a drop of rain
Once lost, can ne'er be found again,
So when or you or I are made
A fable, song, or fleeting shade,
All love, all liking, all delight
Lies drowned with us in endless night.
Then while time serves, and we are but decaying,
Come, my Corinna, come, let's go a-Maying.

Throwing of Circulars Scored by Auto Club

District authorities were called upon yesterday by the Keystone Automobile Club to take drastic action to halt the throwing of advertising circulars, leaflets and other material into moving motor cars. The club pointed out that this practice is highly dangerous and has been both the direct and indirect cause of numerous automobile accidents here.

Joseph Auerbach Dies; Retail Merchant Here

Joseph Auerbach, resident of Washington for more than 60 years, died Monday at Georgetown Hospital. He was well known as a Mason, a retail merchant, and a member of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants. He was also a prominent member of the Washington Hebrew Association. He is survived by his widow, Edna Weyl Auerbach, daughter of the late Max Weyl, well-known artist, and two children, Mrs. Mirian A. Wolf and Joseph Auerbach, jr.

Funeral services will be held at 10:30 o'clock this morning at the residence, 1810 R street northwest. Burial will be at Washington Hebrew Congregation Cemetery.

Intelligence Test for Legislators.

("An intelligence test for all candidates for local, State or national legislators is a need of the hour."—News item).

1. What is meant by public service, and is it largely dependent on the way one screens in the newsreels?

2. Which do you consider of the greater importance in building a successful public career, a live concern for the public interest or a passion for the microphone?

3. Which came first, the egg or the lobbyist? Or are they synonymous?

4. Do you believe that all statesmen should speak from manuscript or that it is all right to be incoherent without any notes?

5. In the following statements which are incorrect: (a) Politicians are invariably unselfish; (b) A man can go highest in American public life by voting for what he thinks right regardless of orders from the boss; (c) Party platforms are drawn in good faith and should be frequently consulted?

• • • •

6. Name four great statesmen in the history of America, and how long do you think it would take a man running ten miles an hour on a good road to find five others?

7. What are Jeffersonian principles and why do speakers who harp on them the most know so little about them?

8. What American Presidents made the following statements: (a) "He's had his;" (b) "One more round of stud and then we quit;" (c) "There is such a thing as being too proud to fight;" (d) "My friends and neighbors, I come before you for another informal radio chat"?

9. Which is of the greater importance to a political future, the advice "Burn those letters" or "Never take orders over a party wire"?

10. Do you think the quality of statesmanship would be improved if all legislators were compelled to listen to phonographic records of their own speeches?

• • • •

11. Check the word which properly completes the sentence: "Magna Carta was ——." A noted Polish violinist. A celebrated opera singer. Winner of the 1931 Derby. The name given the best dahlia shown in the 1934 New York Flower Show.

12. When you use the phrase, "loyalty to my constituents," are you referring to more than two persons and are they both district leaders?

13. When you point with pride, do you use the thumb or forefinger?

14. What is a "life devoted to the public service" and is thick fog of advantage in tracing the devotion?

15. If you were called on to vote on a bill of great importance to human welfare, but conflicting with the interests of people of influence in your party, which of the following courses would you take: (a) Develop halitosis of the intellect; (b) Go on a fishing trip over the period of consideration and roll call; (c) Vote for the bill; (d) Listen to your master's voice?

16. Would you rather be right than be President? How about being alderman, mayor, State Senator or Congressman at large?

17. Do you think a public office is a public trust, a public entertainment, a public scandal or a public screen test?

18. In advancing a public career rapidly, which do you think most essential, a flawless program and a spotless record, or a cross-word puzzle and a national hook-up?

Slightly Confusing.

President Roosevelt compares his program to the building of a ship. "It is difficult for a person who does not know ships to tell, when he looks at the frame in the shipyard, how it will turn out," he says. Yes, but what the Republicans claim is that you can always tell whether the shipyard workers are building a ship or a merry-go-round.

"America as a whole feels a lot better. Fear is vanishing."—The President. On the other hand, maybe it just demonstrates again that a nation's hair can't stand on end indefinitely."

It seems that Germany has been building U-boats. Not for war, of course; just for duck shooting.

22 Billion Insurance Called U. S. "Stake."

Through life insurance the vast majority of American families have a real stake in American business, Col. Charles B. Robbins, manager and general counsel of the American Life convention, told the insurance group at the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States yesterday. This stake, he said, amounts to more than $22,000,000,000.

This huge financial interest, he pointed out, consists largely of Federal, State, county and municipal securities; railroad securities, public utilities securities, and first mortgage real estate loans.

"The matter of farm foreclosures and the decrease in farm credit through inability of life insurance companies to make farm mortgages, is a matter of the greatest concern to the people of the United States, for agriculture is the most basic of all industries," Col. Robbins said.

He predicted the extraordinary hazards which have beset agriculture during the last ten years will not return for many years. He said that in event of inflation farm property constitutes the most tangible asset a life insurance company can own, and, with return of a degree of normal conditions, should result in profits to policyholders.

Club Habana Will 'Glorify' Its Roof Home

By Kay Ware.

When the Club Habana opens for the summer season atop the Arlington Hotel on or about May 27, it will be on a glorified roof top—quite the "tops," so to speak. The Daniels Brothers, local architects, who were responsible for the Cuban and Caribbean motifs in the Club Habana will create some unusual lighting effects, tricky gadgets, a new dance floor and other surprises. Gina and Giano, a clever dance team, will present the dances of yesterday, today and tomorrow with a touch of sophistication.

And if you don't know—that the little Titian-haired cigaret girl regularly rides to her job in a taxi . . . that Louis (Lou to his friends) Franco spells his name with a "C" . . . that Jimmie Bright has developed a smooth tap dancing style since rehearsing on Habana's hardwood dance floor . . . that there's a special and cozy nook recently opened to guests, and that it boasts of a "blue moon," a crystal pool, fountain and real stars—all at no extra charge.

The Shoreham Hotel puts variety into the floor show in the ballroom this week, with Park and Clifford, a hand-balancing act, as headliners.

Troika has recovered from its Russian Easter celebration and has settled down to finishing up its season with a bang—in fact, with a number of them. The first bang is the new dance team, Bolshakoff and Larinova, recently arrived from London, after a European tour.

Milton Garrett at the Dude Ranch has signed up a brand new lot of beautiful girls for his new floor show. Among them are the Page sisters. Helen Stommel, singer, and Jerry Ralston, tap dance artist, also are on the bill. Ralph Garren and his Dude Ranch Orchestra furnish the music.

Senorita Conchita Vita, Jackie Faye and Rhoda Lee, head the new show at the Madrillon. Dorothy Skinner, radio soprano, will continue another week.

Leon Brusiloff and his boys present dance music at both dinner and supper hours, with Jack Schaeffer and Ross Del Roy stepping out of the orchestra to offer comedy specialties.

A new revue at La Paree this week features a lovely chorus, eccentric and tap dancers. Marie Fowler's show song is "It's Mating Time."

At Child's Gingham Club, York and Lewis lead the show, with Dotty Rozelle, Amelia Gilmore, Mary Jo Hamilton and Sammy Richardson running a close second, third, fourth and so on. Miss Rozelle is particularly helpful with her piano selections between dance groups. And she wears a different frock each evening.

Up at the Lotus a fire-eater plays around with hot pokers, molten lead and what not. It may be done by a trick, but Nagyfys (the gentleman's name) makes it lok roeal enough. The Davies sisters present soft-shoe routines, Beth Kirtly toe taps and Larsar and Fedora entertain with South African dance forms.

NRA Is Barred From Removal Of Blue Eagle

Georgia Company Granted Temporary Injunction by D. C. Court.

Justice James M. Proctor, in the District Supreme Court, yesterday issued a temporary injunction restraining the National Labor Relations Board and the National Recovery Administration from removing the Blue Eagle from the products of the Standard Tailoring Co., of Columbus, Ga., pending a final hearing.

The company, through Simon Schwob, who trades as the Standard company, complained that as a result of being placed in the middle of a dispute between two groups of union employes, it had been accused of violating the collective bargaining clause of the NRA and had been threatened with the loss of its insignia.

Through its attorneys, the Standard company said that its employes had voted, in the majority, to form a company union. As opposed to this union, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America formed a union and insisted upon dealing with the management in labor troubles. When the company was faced with the two groups it chose to deal with the majority, it was claimed, and as a result was threatened with withdrawal of its Blue Eagle.

Cocktails and Youths Don't Mix, Judge Says

Cocktail parties and members of the younger generation will never mix, in the opinion of Police Court Judge Ralph Given.

While hearing assault and intoxication charges against Alfred P. O'Malley, 20, who gave his address as 2400 Sixteenth street northwest, Judge Given scored the popular custom of Sunday evening cocktail drinking. O'Malley was accused of battling three policemen.

"These Sunday evening cocktail parties are a terrible thing for the younger generation—boys and girls alike. After drinking a few concoctions, they have no idea what they are doing."

To Honor District P.-T. A.

The District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers will receive special recognition next Friday at the convention of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers being held this week in Miami, Fla., for its work in securing medical care for the largest percentage of children who were found to be in need of such care during the 1934 summer round-up campaign.

Broadway + + By Ed. Sullivan

Broadway at 42d St.

New York, April 30.

One of the real characters of the town is Charlie Pope, of the Friars Club, the theatrical organization. For years, Pope has been one of the real big race track bettors of a community that likes to wager money on the ponies. On one occasion, he won $125,000 in a single day at the track, and leaving the track, he handed $5,000 of his winnings to the nuns who stand at the race track entrance, day after day, mutely appealing for the poor. But times change, and in the past two years, Pope hasn't won that kind of money and hasn't had a lot of money with which to operate. Who has? But as best he could Pope has clung to his "system," a system of progression. That is, if he lost a $2 bet on a horse, the next time the horse ran he'd bet $4, the next time $8, the next time $16, etc., etc. "You've got to play a system all the time," he'd explain to his bewildered pals. "The time you fail to play it, the horse wins." The other day, Pope's system demanded that he bet $412 on a horse, so you can imagine how many times that horse had lost. His friends begged him not to do it, pointed out that the horse didn't have a chance to win. Pope, fearful himself, nevertheless dug up $412 and made the bet. The horse won and paid him exactly $12,000!!!

It was the first of the real warm nights, and I left the windows open in the living room while Patsy Flick and I rehearsed our vaudeville act. The next day, I sort of sensed a chill in the air when I rode down in the elevator. The other tenants, passing me in the lobby, regarded me coldly. Luckily, a friend living in the same building brought the story to me. "Tudor City is gossiping about what happened last night, Ed," said the friend. I looked at him in real amazement. "They say that you had a terrible ow with your wife. They heard you screaming at her for almost an hour." Then the light dawned. Patsy Flick, at the top of his voice, had been yelling, "Don't push me—don't lay a hand on me." We had rehearsed it over and over, and through the open windows floated the threatening voice of Flick. I trust that the Tudor City residents, reading this, will wire, "Come home, all is forgiven."

The other night, as the reunion of the Seventy-seventh Division in New York, Jack Waldron, master of ceremonies at the Hollywood Restaurant, was reunited with his buddies of the famous Lost Battalion. He had been a bugler with the outfit in the Argonne, and between fights he had played with the Argonne Players, which must have been quite a troupe. The tenor of the combination was Mario Rudolfi, an Italian. The Argonne Player, after the fracas, played a week in Paris. Rudolfi was a tremendous hit, and some big shot in the audience gave him a letter to Otto Kahn. Today Rudolfi is Mario Chamlee, Metropolitan Opera star.

• • • •

Al Jolson, back on Broadway, is singing better than he has sung in the last ten years, and that is a matter for amazement. His flicker comeback, I think, is responsible. Jolson, after "Hallelujah, I'm a Bum," which was a flop, was really crushed, mentally. The backwash of this bad picture hurt his radio work, too. The veteran said little, but to those of us who knew him, his moodiness, alternated by fits of extreme nervousness, told the whole story. Then, overnight, Jolson clicked big in Warner's "Go Into Your Dance" and his radio programs clicked, too. Sunday night, at the Eddie Cantor benefit, Jolson stepped out on the stage as confidently as when he was at his Winter Garden peak. He tore down the house. The star who had been the No. 1 man of the musical theater for ten years was No. 1 man all over again, and the whole town's talking.

• • • •

Watching a theater audience from the stage is interesting. Looking through the magnifying glass in the peephole at the Capitol, for instance, you get a marvelous picture of an audience's reactions. The gum-chewers are always a study in motion, and each gum-chewer has a different technique. There are always several people who look like professional pall-bearers. They watch the stage intently, but with no expression on their faces. They don't laugh, they sit passively. There is always a ready laugher, a beaming-faced man or woman, who is absorbed in the picture. Performers like to see a cross-eyed man or woman in the audience. They consider crossed eyes good luck.

Burial Services Of Lydia Smith Set for Today

Mother of State Official Will Be Interred at Union Bridge.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Union Bridge, Md., April 30.—Burial of Mrs. Lydia A. Smith, mother of Nathan L. Smith, chairman of the Maryland State Roads Commission, who died at the home of her son, at West Forest Park, Md., yesterday, will be held here tomorrow. Services will be conducted at West Forest Park by Henry R. Sharpless, of the Society of Friends during the morning.

Mrs. Smith was born in Baltimore 86 years ago. She was long a resident of Union Bridge, moving here soon after her marriage to Jesse Smith. After her husband's death some years ago she moved to West Forest Park.

Mrs. Smith was active in the Society of Friends and in the Women's Christian Temperance Union. Besides her son she is survived by two grandchildren and several nieces.

Mrs. Mollie Scott.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., April 30.—Burial was held here yesterday for Mrs. Mollie Scott, 59, widow of J. C. Scott, former representative in the West Virginia House of Delegates. She was stricken at the grave of her husband as she visited the cemetery to place flowers on the grave.

Mr. Scott, upon his death three years ago, was succeeded by his daughter, Mrs. Lucile Strite.

Mrs. Scott was a native of Keyser, W. Va. Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Lucille Strite, Maugansville, Md., and Mrs. Ada Banks, Berkeley Springs; two sons, Charles and James, Berkeley Springs; three brothers, Edward Stewart, Cumberland; James Stewart, Keyser, W. Va., and Samuel Stewart, Berkeley Springs.

Miss Sally Watson.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 30.—Miss Sally Watson, 87, one of the oldest residents of the city, died yesterday at the Martha Jefferson Hospital. The funeral was held this morning from Christ Episcopal Church, services being conducted by the Rev. Robert F. Gibson.

Surviving are one nephew, Walton Barker, of Nashville, Tenn., and three nieces, Mrs. Ben Williams, of Clayton, Mo.; Mrs. Colwell Balch, of Alhambra, Calif., and Mrs. E. M. Smith, of Los Angeles, Calif.

Mrs. Langhorne is survived by two sons, Richard H. Langhorne, formerly State senator, and John S. Langhorne, of Evington, and two daughters, Mrs. Smelzer V. Kemp, of Lynchburg, and Mrs. Charles W. Haden, of Evington.

Carrie Mullen Cope.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 30.—Funeral services for Mrs. Carrie Mullen Cope, 84, who died at her home here, were held this afternoon with interment in Hill Crest Burial Park. The Rev. Harry Evaul, pastor of Centre Street Methodist Episcopal Church, officiated.

Mrs. Cope was the widow of Samuel G. Cope, retired merchant, who died Tuesday morning. Surviving are two sons, Alonzo J. and Charles E. Cope, prominent in musical circles, and a grandson, John L. Cope.

John Raese Services.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Davis, W. Va., April 30.—Funeral services will be held tomorrow at the Presbyterian Church, for John Raese, 78, a resident here 50 years, who died at Memorial Hospital, Winchester, Va., early yesterday. Burial will be in Davis Cemetery.

Mr. Raese served as mayor, member of the city council and street commissioner. He was a member of the Maccabees. Mrs. Raese died last fall. The surviving children are Walter, Curtis and Furman, and Mrs. James Browning, Morgantown, W. Va.; Mrs. Harry Parsons, Charleroi, Pa.; Mrs. C. M. Shannon, Mount Jackson, Va.; Mrs. Fred Ridgeway, Ridgeway, W. Va., and C. W. Raese, present mayor, and Robert and Richard Raese, all of Davis. There are also 15 grandchildren.

Eva Dunn Madison.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 30.—Mrs. Eva Dunn Madison, 33, wife of Otis A. Madison, of this city, died yesterday at University Hospital, and the funeral was held this afternoon from Prize Hill Church, at Boonesville, services being conducted by the Rev. W. A. Orser.

Besides her husband, she is survived by one son, Gordon M. Madison, and a daughter, Miss Doris M. Madison. She also leaves three sisters, Mrs. O. P. Maupin and Mrs. Preston Via, of this city, and Mrs. W. B. Maupin, of Free Union, and five brothers, W. B. and Edward L. Dunn, of Ivy; Thomas Dunn, of Free Union; Oscar Dunn, of the Panama Canal Zone, and Davis J. Dunn, of this city.

Margaret Coleman.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville Va., April 30.—The funeral of Mrs. Margaret Coleman, 26, wife of William L. Coleman, was held this morning from St. Paul's Episcopal Church, services being conducted by the rector, the Rev. William H. Laird.

Abia M. Martin.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 30.—Abia M. Martin, 94, Union veteran of the Civil War and one of the oldest residents of Harrison County, is dead at his home three miles from Bridgeport. He was the last survivor of the 14 children of Isaac and Florania Woods Martin and the father of 13 children, 13 of whom survive.

John Stout Dead at 90.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 30.—John Stout, 90, native of Harrison County, who was well acquainted with "Buffalo Bill" Cody and many other famous Indian scouts of pioneer days on Western plains, is dead at his home in Winfield, Kans.

The aged man served in the Civil War.

55 Policemen Face Surgeons In Health Test

Blood pressure brought inspectors and patrolmen together on even terms yesterday when Maj Ernest W. Brown and 54 other policemen who have reached retirement age were examined by the Board of Police and Fire Surgeons.

The superintendent, five of the department's six inspectors and all but a few of the captains and precinct commanders were included in the wholesale consignment handled by the board yesterday. Next Tuesday the annual examinations will be completed, with 48 policemen scheduled to go before the seven board members.

Three-fourths of the men examined yesterday were lieutenants or higher. The first ones to finish the ordeal were Maj. Brown and Inspectors Burke, Bean, Headley, Lamb and Stott. Privates and sergeants were last to leave.

Required at Age of 55.

Metropolitan policemen, regardless of rank, are required to take the annual physical examination after they have reached the retirement age of 55. Assistant Supt. L. I. H. Edwards, only inspector missing at yesterday's tests, faced the doctors about a month ago, when he was ordered to take a vacation for his health. He returned to duty last week.

Blood pressure was the chief topic of conversation among the officers as they emerged from the clinic rooms, which are in the No. 16 Engine Company firehouse near Thirteenth and K streets northwest.

Makes No Recommendations.

Findings of the board won't be sent to the District Commissioners for three or four weeks, Dr. John A. Reed, secretary, said. He pointed out that the board makes no recommendations relative to retirement, but only remits the men's physical classifications. Those in Class A are in "perfect" health, Class B denotes that the policeman has minor disabilities which are not serious enough to decommission him, while the names of those falling in Class C are presented to the retirement board.

The other doctors who examined the policemen yesterday besides Dr. Reed and Dr. Daniel L. Bordon, chairman, were Drs. William H. R. Brandenburg, F. Y. Williamson, Virginius Dabney, W. Warren Sager and B. F. Dean.

List of Those Examined.

Mrs. Bolton Entertains At Musicale

Guests Hear Program by Miss Doris Doe, Opera Singer.

Wives of Officials and Diplomats Present at Afternoon Party.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The drawing room of Mrs. Chester C. Bolton's home on Wyoming avenue presented a beautiful and golden background for the artist who sang there yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Bolton, wife of Representative Bolton, had invited a large group of ladies of the Diplomatic Corps, and the two houses of Congress to hear an interesting program of music given by Miss Doris Doe, contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who has been spending several days with her. Miss Doe sang Monday at the luncheon given in honor of Mrs. Roosevelt by the members of the Congressional Club.

The sunlight poured into the drawing room through pale citron-yellow window curtains, and was reflected on the honey-colored walls. On the window sills were huge bowls of yellow pernet roses, and on the piano and mantel were still larger bowls of white peonies, blue delphinium and yellow tulips. Miss Doe wore a gown of deep pansy blue lace fashioned with a shoulder cape, and a corsage of purple orchids. Her program included a group of German songs, an aria, "Lia's Lament," by Debussy, and a group of ballads, among them "The Ragged Piper," by Beryl Rubenstein, dedicated to Miss Doe. She was accompanied at the piano by Mr. Fritz Kitsinger.

Tea Follows Program.

After the musicale, Mrs. Bolton, wearing a frock of chartreuse green crepe printed with small black and white figures, led the way to the dining room, where tea was served. And everybody lingered though they had stayed late encoring Miss Poe, for tea at Mrs. Bolton's is a real treat. Not only are the tea and the accompanying dainties delicious but the room in which they are served is most attractive. It has deep peacock blue walls, lovely old furniture, and more flowers, a huge vase of spring flowers on the table, and doors opening onto the sun porch where flowers bloom in boxes and pots.

Among those there were Mrs. W. Warren Barbour, wife of Senator Barbour, wearing a handsome costume of black and white, and accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Joseph Carrere, who is visiting in the Capital for several weeks; Mrs. Warren R. Austin, wife of Senator Austin, in a black and white printed crepe frock with a black hat trimmed with touches of green; Mrs. Wallace White, jr., wife of Senator White, who was serving tea at one of the tables, and Mrs. Bertrand Snell, wife of Representative Snell, who poured coffee. Also Mrs. Hiram Bingham, wife of former Senator Bingham; Mrs. Robert D. Carey, wife of Senator Carey; Representative Florence P. Kahn, Mrs. George Burnham, wife of Representative Burnham; Mrs. McCook Knox, the Misses Patten, Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock and Miss Dorothy Sollers.

Guests From Diplomatic Set.

From the diplomatic corps there was a large group of ladies including Mme. Sokolowska, wife of the Counselor of the Polish Embassy; the Marchioness Rossi Longhi, wife of the Counselor of the Italian Embassy; Mme. Saint, wife of the Attache of the French Embassy chatting in French with Mme. Petroff, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of Bulgaria, and her sister-in-law, Mlle. Marie Petroff, Mme. Bjalal, wife of the Minister of Iran; the three young daughters of the Ambassador of Chile, Senor Don Manuel Trusco; Senora de Calderon, wife of the Spanish Ambassador, and Mme. Munir, wife of the Turkish Ambassador.

Also Princess Damrss, wife of the Minister of Siam, and a neighbor of the hostess; the Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian Ambassador; Mme. Peter, wife of the Minister of Switzerland; Mme. Van Haersma de With, wife of the Minister of the Netherlands; Mrs. Close, wife of the Minister of the Union of South Africa, and Mme. Pelenyi, wife of the Hungarian Minister.

There were also Senora de Alfaro, wife of the Minister of Panama; Mme. Boncesco, wife of the Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation, and the Baroness Beck-Friis, wife of the Counselor of the Swedish Legation, and Miss Anne Randolph and Miss Mary Randolph.

Spencer Eddy, Jr., and Miss Mary M. Livingston Are Married.

The marriage of Miss Mary Moncrieffe Linvingston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Moncrieffe Livingston, of New York, and Mr. Spencer Eddy, jr., son of Mr. Spencer Eddy, former United States Minister to Rumania, and Mrs. Joseph V. Kuznick, of San Francisco, took place yesterday in New York. The ceremony was performed in St. Thomas' Church by the Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, D. D., rector.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white satin trimmed with lace from her mother's wedding dress. The gown was made on simple, close-fitting lines, with a low-cut square neck and short puffed sleeves, connected at the elbow with long, white gloves. A train, 7 yards in length, begins at the waist. Over a tulle base from a wreath of orange blossoms was a veil of rosepoint lace worn by the bride's mother and grandmother. The lace ended at the floor, and the tulle extended beyond the length of the train. A shower bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley completed the costume.

Miss Eleanor Livingston was maid of honor for her sister. Other attendants were Mrs. Ogden Goelet, Miss Marian Stuyvesant Gray, Miss Dorothy McGee, Miss Anton Dunn, Miss Amy Aspegren, and Mary L. Griggs. Geraldine Livingston, sister of the bride, and Thora Knapp daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Knapp, of New York, were flower girls.

The maid of honor wore a frock of pink chiffon fashioned with a square neckline, short puffed sleeves and a sash of blue taffeta. The full skirt terminates in a short ruffled train. She wore long white gloves, large picture hat of pink chiffon and shoes to match her costume. The bridesmaids were gowned similarly in blue chiffon with pink sashes. All carried bouquets of blue delphinium and pale pink roses.

The church was decorated with dogwood, palms and spring flowers.

Mr. Herbert Whitman, of New York, was Mr. Eddy's best man. Ushers were Mr. Berwind Harjes, Mr. Herman Harjes, Mr. John A. McVickar, Mr. Robert L. Cammann and Mr. Bruce Harvey, all of New York, and Mr. Lloyd Cabot Briggs, of Boston.

Junior League Plans Program At Horse Show

Proceeds to Be Used to Aid Welfare Activities of Organization.

The Junior League of Washington, having selected the leaders of its committees, was preparing today to develop a pretentious program for its activities at the National Capital Horse Show, scheduled for May 9, 10 and 11 at Bradley Farms.

A number of specialties will be conducted by the league each day of the meet, while a schedule of events is to be run off on children's day, the final day of the show.

Proceeds form the league's efforts will be used to help carry on the organization's welfare activities, which include the appropriation of funds to the social service and occupational therapy departments of the Children's Hospital and the employment of a worker for the blind at the Library of Congress.

Mrs. Benjamin W. Thoron has been named general chairman of the league committee this year, with Mrs. J. William Fulbright, vice chairman, and Miss Anne-Carter Greene, Mrs. William W. Mackall, jr., and Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, advisory committee members.

Sub-committee leaders are Mrs. John L. Newbold, jr., tickets and boxes; Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., and Mrs. John A. Selby, cafeteria; Miss Emily C. Mackall, treasurer; Mrs. William North Sturtevant, beer and soft drinks; Mrs. B. Lauriston Harding, jr., and Mrs. Fontaine C. Bradley, shop; Miss Margaret Mackall, personnel; Mrs. Forrest B. Royal, children's day; Mrs. Theodore P. Noyes, grounds and ice cream; Miss Cecil Lester Jones, waitresses; Mrs. John B. Ecker, jr., cashier, and Miss Marvin Breckenridge, publicity.

Emlen Davies Receives Bid To Royal Court

Capital Student at Vassar Will Be Presented in London June 25.

How Miss Emlen Knight Davies, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, is to finish her year at Vassar is a puzzle, for yesterday there arrived in her mail an invitation to Buckingham Palace for the presentation on June 25. So Miss Davies will get through her examinations as best she can, and will sail the first week in June with her father for London to make her bow to the King and Queen.

It will probably be an experience such as no young girl has had in many a year, for not only will there be the excitement of the presentation, but London will be at its very gayest for the jubilee festivities will be over and the crowds in England for that occasion will remain for more parties and weekends in the beautiful country estates.

Miss Davies is the second of this year's Washington debutantes to be presented at court. Miss Stellita Stapleton, daughter of Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton, has just returned from England, where she made her bow at the first court of the season March 28.

Mrs. Davies and her sister, Mrs. Knight Cochran, will sail for Europe May 8, and will spend some time on the Continent before going to London, where Mr. Davies and Miss Davies will join them in June.

Senora de Alfaro Is Luncheon Hostess

Senora de Alfaro, wife of the Minister of Panama, entertained at luncheon yesterday in the legation in compliment to Mme. Daniel Steen, wife of the Norwegian consul general in Montreal, Canada.

The other guests were Mme. Munir, wife of the Ambassador of Turkey; Mme. Prochnik, wife of the Minister of Austria; Mme. Sze, wife of the Minister of China; Senora de Bordenave, wife of the Minister of Paraguay; Princess Troubetskoi, Mrs. R. E. Schuirman, Mrs. Emerson Howe, Mrs. J. W. Turrenine, Mrs. James Moran, and Senora Victor de Alfaro, daughter-in-law of the hostess.

Carlotta Wheeler Wed in Honolulu

Marriage to Lieut. Williams Is Announced.

Cards have been received from Mrs. Eustace Conway Wheeler announcing the marriage of her daughter, Miss Carlotta Thompson Wheeler, to Lieut. Henry Williams, jr., son of Capt. and Mrs. Henry Williams, U. S. N., in Honolulu, April 4.

The bride's gown was of old lace fashioned from her mother's wedding dress. She was given in marriage by her mother and her only attendant was Mrs. Leon J. Manees, wife of Lieut. Manees. Lieut. Willis Manning Thomas was best man.

'Permanenting' Found Painless In D. C. Salon

"The Chair" Made Easy by Beauty Operators in Modern Shop.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

NO SOONER are the orchards a riot of blooms and the ground spread with a pale carpet of forget-me-nots than we feel our perennial spring urge for a permanent. We picture ourselves looking ten years younger, prettier, and far more feminine with a mass of soft, loose waves framing our face. And then we think of those torturous hours spent in the "chair" while an operator pulls and tugs, and combs, and twists. We wonder, is it worth it?

In the midst of such wonderings came news of a new beauty salon, where permanents are not only painless but each one perfection plus. It seemed too good to be true, until a visit there, and the privilege of seeing a client actually "permanented" served as sufficient proof.

At this shop, itself modern in every detail, only the newest and best permanent paraphernalia is used, and only long-tried and proved true operators serve you.

Besides being a haven for "permanent" clients, it's literally seventh heaven for all those who want any type of beauty work done. The high ceiling with its frosty glass skylights, the comfortable, modernistic booths, with the luxurious lounge chairs, heavy henna drapes and a profusion of flowers, all give atmosphere, which, combined with the type and numerous kinds of service rendered here, make it a truly ideal 1935 beauty salon.

Musical Gong Sounds.

It's quiet, cool, light, airy and strikingly spic and span. No note jars. Music lends the final touch, for when the manager calls your operator it isn't "Hey, girl!" or "Here, Monsieur" Instead, she sounds a musical gong, and the young lady or gentleman appears from out of nowhere.

Proof that no type of service seems too varied to render was substantially offered when a customer, evidently in a great hurry, came into the shop. "Tell me," she said to the manager, "do you have men or women operators?"

"We have both," the manager answered.

"Well," said the lady, "do you give soapless shampoos?"

"There are several types of such shampoos," the manager explained, enumerating one after the other.

The customer, overwhelmed by this display of versatility, decided which type she preferred, selected a handsome young Frenchman to give it, and made her appointment then and there!

But don't mistake! Don't think because there's ideal service and the place itself looks like a million-dollar establishment, the rates are sky high. As a matter of fact they are extremely reasonable, for this is a shop which caters especially to a "neighborhood" clientele. You'll find it located a little distance "out" on Connecticut avenue. However, even though you're close "in town" you'll discover this trip—a short 10 or 15 minutes' drive at most—well worth your taking.

Bracelets for Summer.

If you're planning on going native this season—at least as regards your costume—then why not do it in a real way and begin with a pagan display of bracelets. After all, that's an economic way to start. A downtown store helps you by offering extremely attractive catlin bracelets for as little as 3 for 50 cents.

Wear three, or six, and you have your "native" touch. If you prefer the conservative side of the fashion fence, wear one or two bracelets. Don't hesitate to wear them, though. They're smart as can be with short - sleeved or three - quarter-sleeve dresses, and ever so flattering to arms. If you've attractive arms, they help to show them off. If you've all elbows, they serve to attract attention away from the too decided angles.

The bracelets come in a variety of colors. Choose them alike, or make up your own combinations.

Carnations Suggested.

You can enliven your spring ensemble with two lovely carnations, one red and one white, looking ever and ever so real. And fragrant as real flowers, too. This attractive little boutonniere is offered to you for only 50 cents in the toilet goods department of a downtown store.

New Make-up Boxes.

Who can estimate the convenience of a make-up box? It serves, first of all, to keep the dressing table from being cluttered up. It will hold the powder, rouge, lipstick, mascara and ever so many small things necessary for milady's toilet. The mirror in the top gives a grand close-up and helps you tell whether there's too little this or too much that. And then when you're traveling, what a boon to pack the make-up box filled with sundry cosmetics, instead of packing each one separately. Lastly, an attractive make-up box is a decided ornament for the dressing table.

Certain little make-up boxes in a local store add another service to this list. They supply you with bath powder! You buy them filled to the brim with soft, fragrant powder for the bath! And when this is gone, there's your box, ready for use in the boudoir. It costs only $1.

Kerchief Frock Flattering To All Types of Figures

Pattern No. 837.

THE SIMPLE shirtwaist type of dress with a vivid kerchief around the neck is one of the picturesquely casual styles that belongs in every summer wardrobe. Here is a new version. It would be very gay in a printed linen or cotton, with a scarf or belt to match the bright tone of the print.

The rather long line of the button-on kerchief and the inset panel in the skirt makes it flattering to all types of figures, youthful or mature. The sizes range from 14 to 44, and are accurately cut to fit with precision.

Size 18 (36) requires 3⅜ yards of 35-inch material and ⅝-yard of contrasting trim.

Physician Gives Helpful Points On Taking Care of Infants

Overclothing Causes Many Summer Illnesses, Dr. Cutter Warns; Keep Them Out of Doors as Much as Possible, He Advises.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

A NEW-BORN babe is a marvelous creation. There he lies, an hour or two after birth, bathed and oiled, asleep in his crib. Of course, he is the very image of mother, or grandfather, or Uncle George, and why shouldn't he be? He has within him descendants of the germ cells of countless ancestors, with four grandparents, eight great-grandparents, sixteen great-great-grandparents, and so on. Some—we hope all—of his forbears have given him clean, virile cells, for his future is influenced in large measure by his heredity. But what a load he must carry—all those ancestors, with their varying traits of character. Perhaps generosity will defeat greed and avarice, alertness contend with stupidity, or honor be pitted against sly shrewdness.

Of course, the baby must live, and everything that circumstances will permit should be done to help him start up the ladder of growth. Great care is necessary, as, of 100 babies born alive, only 91 will be living at the end of the first two weeks. This rather high death rate is due to many causes. Infants may be underweight at birth, or premature, or sufficient care may not have been taken to keep the baby warm.

Immediately after birth most babies will cry, for as soon as the skin comes into contact with the outside air a stimulus to the muscles of breathing is set up. When this does not occur it may be that some powerful narcotic used with the mother has affected the infant, in which case artificial respiration may be necessary. Occasionally infants will have "blue spells," when the skin will vary in color from dark blue to dusky red. In such cases oxygen and carbon dioxide are of the greatest value.

Infant's First Bath.

The initial bath is given with the room at a fairly high temperature. Care must be taken to use a pure soap, one that contains no free alkali. After thoroughly cleansing the skin the body is gently rubbed with sterile olive oil. Thereafter, until the baby is two or more weeks of age, water is not again used on the skin, sterile olive oil being employed for cleansing purposes. The temperature of the bath water must be approximately 100 degrees F., and the water should be boiled first and allowed to cool before being used. If the room temperature is below 85 to 90 degrees F. bathing should be conducted under a blanket, care being taken not to wet the blanket and thus cool the baby's skin.

If the baby is weak or underweight we must make certain that he receives plenty of fluid. For this purpose sterile water (boiled and cooled) or a solution of glucose or corn sirup may be used. This is prepared by adding a teaspoonful of glucose to four to six ounces of water. This may be followed by food. The mother's breasts may be pumped and the milk diluted half and half with sterile water, gradually increasing the milk ratio until the baby is taking breast milk at full strength.

The Clothing Problem.

Infants may show a tendency to vomit food and liquids. If this is excessive, feeding must follow each vomiting period to make certain that sufficient water is retained.

During the first months of life even very young infants should spend as much time as possible out of doors. This does not mean that the child must be in a baby carriage. An upstairs porch is suitable, or the baby may be thoroughly wrapped and placed close to an open window inside the house.

Cheaper Cuts Of Meat Often Are Delicious

Pot Roast or a Piece of Braised Beef Tasty if Cooked Properly.

By Dorothea Duncan.

WE CAN'T go on forever snubbing the butcher and using meat substitutes and fish, even if meat prices do insist upon soaring, for our families will rebel. Still you don't have to carry your budget away out of bounds by buying the tenderest and juciest steaks, chops and roasts, for there are the lesser cuts of meat that need only the proper procedure of cooking to win the family's approval.

You can't go wrong on a pot roast or a piece of braised beef, if you prefer. The pot roast may be cooked in a deep iron pot or one of light-weight aluminum or stainless steel on top of the stove. Some of these more modern kettles have drip-drop covers to conserve all the moisture and a flat bottom to fully utilize all the heat of gas or electric burners rather than the old rounded base made to fit an uncovered stove hole.

Cuts Heat in Kitchen.

The slow cooking over a single burner lessens the heat in the kitchen these warm days, too.

The process of braising, for this is the procedure for a pot roast, includes browning first to secure a high color and flavor, followed by long simmering in a tightly covered container so that the steam penetrates every fiber of the meat and makes it tender and juicy rather than tough and dry.

Carrots, onions, turnips and potatoes may be cooked with the meat if the container is large enough. The vegetables cooked this way will gain a delicious flavor imparted by the meat juices. You will cut down on the number of pans, too, and dish washing will be less of a burden.

First we think of the beef roasts for braising, a round bone cut from the chuck, a rump cut of beef, a heel of round and a three-corner roast. Don't forget though that an arm or shoulder of veal makes a very attractive pot roast, too.

Let's not forget, while mentioning the less expensive cuts of meat, to include a shoulder of lamb, best roasted in the oven, and lamb steaks which require slow cooking.

Cooked in Tomato Juice.

Follow the general directions for pot roasting, but try this variation. The meat will be doubly tender if marinated overnight. Today we are cooking the pot roast in tomato juice, so fit it into your pan and marinate overnight with tomato juice, covering the pan snugly. When ready to cook, remove the roast from the juice, brown as directed, simmer in the tomato juice and add a few fat onion slices and dash of Worcestershire sauce.

Following is today's suggested dinner menu:

Dinner Menu.

Pot roast of beef with tomato sauce
Browned potatoes
Mashed squash with cream
Green salad with French dressing
Bread and butter
Fresh fruit cup
Coffee Milk (for children)

Strawberry and Pineapple Cup.

1 cup orange juice
1-3 cup lemon juice
1 cup diced pineapple
Sugar
1 cup strawberries

Combine the orange and lemon juice sweetened to taste, keeping the mixtures rather tart. Chill. Wash and drain the strawberries and hull them. At serving time cut the berries in half, except six large ones, mix with the pineapple, place in glasses and cover with the fruit juice. One large, perfect berry set on a tiny circle of pineapple may decorate the top of each fruit cup.

Dorothea Duncan will be glad to help you with your culinary problems. Write to her, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, in care of The Washington Post.

CULBERTSON on BRIDGE

It Might Have Been.

North did not make his four no-trump bid in the hand below merely to show that he held the necessary two Aces and the King of a bid suit. He felt that a six-no-trump contract could be made, and no strong trump suit was available.

North, Dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

North	East	South	West
1♣(1)	Pass	2♡	Pass
2♠	Pass	2NT(2)	Pass
4NT(3)	Pass	5♡	Pass
6NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—The choice of opening bid is covered by the Principle of Preparedness. If North opens the bidding with one spade, he may have to bid clubs at the two and possibly at the three level.

2—South might rebid the hearts, but correctly prefers to initiate no-trump at this juncture, giving the implication of general strength, rather than a powerful heart suit, as the basis for his previous game-forcing jump takeout.

3—North's plus values over his opening bid justify going beyond three notrump.

The Play.

West opened the three of diamonds, dummy played low and South won with the King. South led a heart to dummy's Jack, which was taken by East's Queen. East continued with the diamonds, knocking out dummy's Ace. When the hearts did not break and the club finesse lost, declarer went down three tricks.

Comments.

On the face of the North-South cards, there are only six tricks in spades and diamonds, so four heart tricks plus the Ace of clubs will still not produce contract. If declarer gives up a heart trick he must win the club finesse. But if he wins the club finesse and cleans up the club suit with only one loss, he wins four clubs, four spades, two diamonds and two hearts, making contract with no further hazards.

His proper play is to tackle the clubs rather than the hearts. There is a choice of leading the Queen of clubs or leading up to it. If the adverse clubs are split, either approach suffices; on the whole, it is better first to lead low toward the Queen. Declarer could not be blamed for a wrong guess had he attacked thec lub suit, but he certainly deserved censure for starting the hearts before the clubs. The even split in clubs would have given him his contract without difficulty had he adopted the correct line of plan.

The GAME of LIFE

By Priscilla Wayne

Ellen Mallory, business girl, is enormously pleased to win a sectional tennis tournament, and is eager to pursue her tennis career by entering the national tournament. But Michael Dale, her fiance, sternly refuses to hear of it. He insists that she must give up tennis so that they can be married right away, as she had previously promised to do.

Their disagreement ends in a quarrel. Ellen's mother is pleased, for she wants to keep Ellen's paycheck in the family, and is determined that Ellen capitalize on her tennis ability. Her opposition only makes Mike seem the more desirable. After waiting in vain for word from Mike, Ellen phones the garage where he works and learns that he is out of town. Later she learns from his mother that he phoned her and also wrote her a long letter before he left.

Now go on with the story:

AFTERWARD, Ellen dreaded to remember the bitterness that followed. Mrs. Mallory admitted readily enough that she had neglected to tell Ellen about the telephone call, even that she had intercepted the letter.

"I was baking rolls that day, in the range, the kind you like. I just put the letter in the fire."

"You didn't open it?"

"Of course I didn't open it. You don't suppose I'm the kind of person who opens other people's mail."

"But you kept it from me. I'll never know what was in it." Ellen's voice was almost a sob.

"That's different—keeping it from you. I did it for your own good."

"But it isn't for my own good. I've decided I'm going to marry Michael Dale on any terms that he'll have me. This week has been enough for me. I can't get along without Mike. I don't want to get along without him.

"I'm going to tell him just as soon as he comes back tonight that I'll marry him right away, just as quickly as he'll have me, and I'll give up anything he asks me to give up."

"You mean that you'd give up your job?" Somehow it seemed to Ellen that she had never seen her mother's face whiter.

"I mean that I'll give up my job—everything—I'll do whatever he asks me to do."

"But what are we to do here? Bob, Aunt Ellen—all of us. What are we to do if your salary stops?"

"Do? Why do just as you did before it began. You got along without my salary before I started having one. I suppose you can get along without it now—oh, maybe it won't be quite so easy but——"

Her Trump Card.

Ellen's mother went over to the writing desk by the window, produced a key to the locked drawer and opened the drawer with hands that trembled.

"Here," she said, handing Ellen a letter. "Read it for yourself."

It was a very curt letter from the banker. It did not sound as jovial as he had been when he congratulated Ellen on the street only a few days before. In fact, the letter told Mrs. Mallory very briefly and very curtly that the interest on her note to the bank was overdue, that she must come in at once and discuss with him what she meant to do about the principal, which was also due, and it added that the bank did not care to renew the note again.

No, it was not a scene that Ellen wanted to remember. But, in spite of it she went over it and over it that night in her room.

A note for more than $500, a furniture bill of twice that amount and other debts. The sum total of them all staggered her. Her mother had made a clean breast of their financial situation. There was a total, in all, of $2,700.

Two thousand seven hundred dollars. Ellen set the staggering total down in black and white—$2,700. It seemed colossal to her, unbelieveable, staggering.

She thought of her salary, $22.50 a week. Why, if she paid $40 a month on the debts, it would take her—how many months to pay it? She divided the sum shakily. Forty dollars a month. Forty goes into 2,700—67 times and some left over. More than five years—almost six years—to pay that debt even if she paid $40, regularly, every month.

She considered other means. They could send the furniture back that her mother had bought recently—almost $1,000 worth of furniture, carpets and rugs and curtains and new linoleum for the kitchen—well, the house looked $1,000 better for it, that was certain. But the porch, that had been built—they couldn't very well take that off.

One by one she scanned the other debts of which her mother had kept a record, just a little here and a little there, but a staggering total. Some to the druggist, a grocery bill, several installments on the sewing machine and the washing machine, a lumber bill, any number of bills for labor on the sun porch, even a bill at the hardware for glass and hinges and locks.

And all this time she'd been dashing around, spending money for new clothes, going to tennis tournaments and goodness-knows-what when her mother owed everyone in town. Never again would she have the face to meet the men her mother owed.

"I've handled it this long," her mother had told her in that miserable conference, "I've kept the worry from you all this time."

"Yes, but I wish you hadn't. I wish I'd known."

"Foolish girl. What could you have done if you had known?"

"We wouldn't have gone in debt, that's all. We just wouldn't have gone into debt. We could have done without this new furniture. We could have gotten along without building the sun porch——"

"Get along, do without—that's all I've ever heard," her mother railed. "And just when I had the right to expect you'd help me——"

"I've paid you $12 a week for more than a year."

"Yes, and I was making it take care of things. You'd see. We'd have come out of debt. But now you plan to get married—plan to shake your responsibilities."

Couldn't Call Him.

With trembling hands, there alone in her room, Ellen tore the little sheet of accounts into shreds. It didn't help to go over it again and again. There wasn't any way to make it different. Two and two, added together, always make four. There isn't any magical way of stretching money.

She had planned to call Mike—joyously.

Staring at the little heap of torn paper, Ellen knew that she could not call Mike—then or any other night. She must go on with her job, day after day, week after week, month after month.

She turned out the light quickly, crept into bed. She couldn't bear to think of it. Aunt Ellen would have been better off if she had never had a sweetheart. Memories would have been less bitter.

She called at the bank the next day—just as she'd promised her mother she would. Mr. Applequist was kind, but firm. I've wanted you to come and talk it over," he said. "I hoped your mother would bring you along."

"She asked me to come," Ellen explained faintly.

"Well, I'm glad to talk to you about it. As a matter of fact, we're willing enough to renew this loan but we must have a definite plan of the way it's going to be paid back. Your mother promised $20 a month. She hasn't kept her promise very well."

He turned the note over to where, on the back, each payment had been entered. "You'll notice—months at a time when she's made no payment of any kind. I don't mind telling you, Miss Mallory, that if all our notes were as poorly secured as this one, this bank would be in a pretty bad way."

"Then you will renew it?"

Ellen Signs Note.

"If you'll sign the note yourself. If you'll plan a definite schedule of payments."

In the end it was arranged—$20 a month plus interest at 6 per cent, payable in advance every six months. Ellen's hand trembled as she signed the note. It seemed to her that with it she signed the document that shut her away from love and Mike—and from a life of her own.

Now the trivial quarrel over whether she would give up work and give up tennis seemed unbelievably ridiculous. This was real trouble. This was something to be unhappy about.

She tried to put Michael Dale out of her thoughts. But that was impossible. All forenoon the thought of him had persisted. She wondered if he had gotten home last night as his mother said he intended to.

Could Talk Frankly.

And if he came, would he call her tonight? She made up her mind that she must see him—just once out of a long lifetime. Surely that wouldn't be wrong. She'd tell him then, frankly, that she could not marry him, that they must break their engagement forever.

"Miss Mallory," her kindly boss at the real estate office said, "will you write this letter again?" He smiled knowingly as he handed it back to her.

There, right in the heart of the letter, she must have started day dreaming as she typed, for clear across the page one line read, "Michael Dale. $2,700. Tennis Wimbledon. Michael Dale."

The telephone rang and Mr. Benson, standing by it, took the receiver in his hands. "Hello, Hello," he said, "yes, she's here."

Then, turning to Ellen, "Talk about an angel and you hear the fluttering of his wings. That's your young man right now."

"Does he want to talk to me?" Ellen barely whispered.

"No, no, no," the old man laughed. "He wanted to talk to me." And he walked out of the room while Ellen picked up the telephone to hear Mike's impatient voice.

Chemists Promise A New Delicacy —Dried Grasses

Dried grass promises to be the latest delicacy you can serve your dinner guests. Interest in dried grass dishes has developed among dietitians as a result of the recent announcement by Dr. C. F. Schnabel at the meeting of chemists in New York that young cereal grasses—oats, barley, rye—are several hundred times more nutritious than spinach, carrots, lettuce, collards, endive and chard.

The dried grasses, according to Dr. Schnabel, contain 30 to 40 per cent protein and taste and smell like malted milk. However, they must be cut at the right time as a delay of a week reduces the vitamin, mineral and fat content by as much as 50 per cent, he said.

Dr. Schnabel suggests that those who do not like the grasses served as vegetables should mix them with cookies, pancakes and candy as they will add to their flavor.

Woman Who Dislikes Appeals for Funds Has Raised $30,000 for Leper Mission

Mrs. Harrison's Pig Bank Idea Gets Results

Richmond Resident Has No Gift for Organizing, However, She Says.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

SHE CAN'T BEAR to ask people for money. She laughingly declares she has no gift for organization. Yet Mrs. Robert Randolph Harrison nas managed to get together enough free-will contributions to build for lepers in India a church, hospital and boys' school, and for lepers in the Virgin Islands a church. She has also raised about $30,000 for the Leper Mission.

Mrs. Harrison can't be definite about the amount. She keeps no books and is always a little embarrassed, she confided yesterday, when anybody inquires about her system for raising money.

"I don't have any system," she said as she chatted away merrily at the home of Miss Mary H. Marbury, 1517 Thirty-first street. Mrs. Harrison's home is in Richmond.

"I certainly don't have any organization," she continued. "And I've never asked anyone to give money. I couldn't; lack of courage or nerve or something, I guess. However, my son often says, 'Well, mother, you may not be able to ask for money but you certainly can hint for it.'"

Little Pigs Turn the Trick.

A great help in the hinting process, vivacious Mrs. Harrison admitted, is a huge litter of little pigs; 350 pigs, in fact. Each one, made of metal and gilded, holds a generous supply of coins inside its small, fat body. Mrs. Harrison, for the last 19 years, has distributed the amusing little animals among Sunday school classes and missionary societies. Twice a year she sends out letters to the possessors of the pigs, asking them to send to her whatever has been contributed. To those correspondents she is known as "the pig lady."

"I've had that title ever since I talked to a babies' Sunday school class in Richmond years ago," she explained. "I didn't want to talk to those children about lepers so I told them any pennies they put inside the shiny pig would be used to help little boys and girls who were awfully sick and had no one to look after them. Evidently the pig made a big impression. A few days later I was in a Richmond department store and a child toddling along with his mother saw me and yelled, 'There's that pig lady'."

Mrs. Harrison fancied the title, kept it, and today her business stationery bears the picture of a fat little pig with the motto of the Harrison crest, "Vinci qui patitur," printed beneath it. And beneath the motto is written "The Hon. F. P. L. of A.," which means, in case you haven't already guessed it, "The Honorable First Pig Lady of America."

Finds Flattery Never Hurts.

The Latin motto is translated into English on some of the Pig Lady's business letter paper. She uses this for the women. Men receive the motto in its original Latin. Mrs. Harrison believes it flatters them to imply that of course they can translate it.

"A little flattery never hurt anybody," she explained; which is probably the reason she's never had to beg people to fill her little pigs.

Mrs. Harrison's interest in helping lepers began on Sunday night 19 years ago when she heard a missionary from India speak in an Episcopal church in Richmond. The missionary said $25 would take care of a leper for a year. He offered a little pig bank to anybody who wished to help with the work. Mrs. Harrison said yesterday she "simply had to take at least one pig."

Most women wouldn't relish being called "the pig lady," but Mrs. Robert Randolph Harrison, of Richmond, above, is proud of the title. She won it through distributing pig banks in behalf of the Leper Mission.

In that first year she placed 10 other pigs, collected $45. Now she has 350 scattered from here to Texas. One year she collected $2,000. But that was unusual. She usually gets about $1,000 a year. When a church was built at Manamadura, South India, with money she had raised the heads of the leper mission wanted to name it after her. Mrs. Harrison refused. She wanted it to be named Christ Church. Later when a hospital was built at Manamadura the leper mission officials named it after her and affixed a brass plate engraved with "Harrison Hospital" before saying anything about it to Mrs. Harrison.

Will Speak Here Friday.

Recently "the pig lady" has managed to get girls and women to make bandages and crazy quilts for Harrison and other leper hospitals. Employes of a Richmond insurance company made her a crazy quilt during their lunch hours. Mrs. Harrison is mighty proud of it. Now she is in the Capital to address the biennial meeting of the Leper Mission's Washington Auxiliary on Friday at the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church.

Although she has spent 19 years doing her bit for lepers Mrs. Harrison has never visited a leper colony. William M. Danner, general secretary of the Leper Mission of the United States, offered to take her to the colony in Louisiana. Her son talked her out of going; told her she already had enough pictures of lepers to keep her awake at night the rest of her life. So she contents herself with keeping track of the 350 little pigs she has distributed.

The pig bank idea began 21 years ago when Mr. Danner spoke in a Midwestern town—Mrs. Harrison thinks it was in Kansas—about lepers. He stayed in the home of a family which had a small boy. The mother helped the town raise $250 for the lepers. The goal had been $300. When the small boy realized his mother's disappointment he took the $3 Mr. Danner had given him as a farewell gift, bought a little pig, set about fattening it, sold it at market for $25. He gave the entire amount to his mother for the leper fund.

When the Leper Mission heard the story it had the little pig banks made. Two years later Mrs. Harrison acquired her first little pig.

Mother's Day Meetings Set All Over U. S.

Leading Men's Groups to Give Special Programs on May 12.

FOR THE FIRST time since 1914, when Woodrow Wilson proclaimed the second Sunday in May as Mothers' Day, the occasion is to be signally marked this year by what promises to be the concerted action of the leading men's organizations of the country to use Mothers' Day, May 12, to make motherhood safe for mothers.

Meetings of men's groups are to be held from coast to coast, according to an announcement made yesterday by Mrs. Shepard Krech, president of the Maternity Center Association of New York, which is sponsoring the observance.

"Without the active interest of the men of the Nation," Mrs. Krech said, "little can be done to improve the care received by the average mother in the greatest crisis of her life. In most communities better care is now available than the mass of mothers are receiving. The reason they are not getting it is because they do not know what it is; they do not know what they need. The requirements of adequate care include the cooperation both of the father and the mother in following out the instructions received from the doctor who should be consulted as early as possible.

The sponsoring committee for the key meeting in New York includes Dr. Thomas Parran, jr., commissioner of health of New York State; Dr. John L. Rice, commissioner of health, New York City; Alfred E. Smith, Maj. Edward Bowes, Surgeon General Hugh S. Cumming, Jack Dempsey and Kermit Roosevelt.

Virginia Society Dance.

The sponsors for various districts are Miss Lillian V. Morris, first; Miss Lucy Caroline Hodges, second; Miss Lillian Fleming, third; Miss V. Helen Tarry, fourth; Miss Ann Graves McGuire, fifth; Miss Thelma Earl Epperly, sixth; Miss Mary Tayloe Newton, seventh; Miss Madalaine Hatcher, eighth, and Miss Elsie Harman, ninth. The queen of sponsors is Mrs. Lena Epperly MacDonald and the maid of sponsors is Miss Anne Preston Crawford.

The receiving line will be composed of the members of the executive council, headed by Commander E. M. Blackwell, president of the society.

The Women's Army and Navy League will hold a rummage sale today, tomorrow and Friday at 527 Seventeenth street northwest. All funds will be used for relief work for enlisted men and their families in the Washington area. Mrs. C. J. Peoples will have charge of the sale.

The weekly luncheon meeting of the Washington Zonta Club will be held today at the Young Women's Christian Association, Seventeenth and K streets northwest. Luncheon will be served promptly at 1 o'clock.

How Can Maryland Farm Woman Find Children to Board for Summer?

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have been reading your column and wonder if you can help me solve my problem. I am interested in boarding some children for the summer, since I know a lady who boards a child for $4 per week.

* * * *

Can you tell me if there are any organizations in Washington or Baltimore which send out children to the country and pay their board?

* * * *

I live on a farm and since we raise all our own vegetables I feel that I could make a small profit, and would like to do something to increase our income. Please let me know if there are any such societies and also how I can get in touch with them. INTERESTED.

Four Suggestions.

DEAR INTERESTED: The child welfare division of the Washington Board of Public Welfare, to which organization I referred your petition, had the following suggestions to offer:

* * * *

The Washington City Orphan Asylum, 4119 Nebraska avenue northwest (telephone Cleveland 6164) occasionally arranges to send convalescent children to private boarding homes in the country. Write or call them.

If yours is a Catholic home, contact the Catholic Charities, 601 E street northwest (telephone National 2795), which occasionally places children in approved Catholic homes to board.

* * * *

Also, write the Board of State Aid and Charities, Union Trust Building, Baltimore, Md., and state your case. This organization, in order to develop and improve standards of child care, pursues a policy of licensing children's boarding homes which come up to requirements. If you can prove your qualification for such a license, you will achieve an indisputable standing in your community and find the way made much easier for procuring children to board.

* * * *

The fourth and final suggestion was that you advertise in the Sunday newspapers. This was said to be perhaps the most direct means of attaining your goal, and a method widely followed by persons who wish to board children for the summer season only. M. H.

Illusion Favored By Girl Readers

Reality Preferred by Boys, Survey Indicates.

Girls prefer the world of illusion, boys, the world of reality. Such would seem to be the conclusion from a survey of reading tastes made by the Toronto Public Library. Results published in the current Wilson Bulletin for librarians show the following differences in taste:

Girls read more than boys and read nearly twice as much fiction as boys. Boys read nearly twice as much non-fiction as fiction.

Girls read three times as much poetry, four times as many fairy tales and five times as much music and drama as boys.

Boys read twice as much science, twice as much biography, three times as much natural history and four times as much history as girls.

Science Develops Extra Sweet Sugar

A new sugar about half as sweet again as cane sugar is expected to be on the market soon. It is called levulose and abounds in the Jerusalem artichoke.

The new sugar was described at the recent meeting of the American Chemical Society in New York by Dr. William D. Horne. A new process for extracting the sugar from sliced Jerusalem artichokes has been developed.

A marked decline in the production of maple sugar was reported. Dr. Horne predicted the development of a synthetic maple sugar flavor.

Peace Campaigner Finds Youth Carrying Torch

Harris & Ewing.

Disarming Is Sole Hope to End Wars, Says Miss Wellborn.

YOUNG PEOPLE in the United States are carrying today the torch for world peace which was lighted 20 years ago when a group of public-spirited citizens, including Jane Addams, founded the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

Although the older generation is also deeply concerned about peace, it's the young people who are confident it can be achieved, Mary Moss Wellborn, secretary of the committee in charge of the league's anniversary, believes. The organization's twentieth anniversary will be celebrated here Thursday with a dinner in honor of Jane Addams.

As leader of the league's flying squadron, Miss Wellborn traveled through the Middle West, West and Southwest last fall speaking in the congressional election campaigns, urging voters to support candidates who have committed themselves to the cause of peace.

More Intensive Effort Urged.

I found young people determined to obtain lasting world peace," Miss Wellborn said yesterday. "They believe our country is largely responsible for the present armament race among nations. The minute we appropriate money to increase our forces the other countries go us one better."

While she is convinced the younger generation is intensely interested in the cause of peace, Miss Wellborn believes the youth of the Nation is not expressing itself strongly enough along this line.

"If all the college students let members of Congress know they would vote only for those who stand for peace and disarmament, they would hesitate before putting through armament appropriations," she said. "They would realize that within a couple of years all those college students will be able to vote."

Only One Way to Peace.

While she was on the Flying Squadron tour, Miss Wellborn found college boys and girls were the most eager to learn about the work being done for peace. Whenever she visited a small college town the students received her with great enthusiasm; wanted her to tell them how they could help end wars.

"The only way," she said yesterday, "is to lay down arms. When all the nations do that we will have universal peace."

What Today Means

"Taurus."

IF MAY 1 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:45 to 11:45 a. m., from 1:45 to 3:45 p. m. and from 6:45 to 8:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:45 to 9:45 a. m., from 3:45 to 5:45 p. m. and from 8:45 to 10:45 p. m.

Today calls for deliberation before adapting any plan of action, as errors of judgment may be costly. Speculative tendencies should be curbed, and conservatism practiced. Prices of commodities should not be taken for granted, but carefully checked. Letters written in haste on this date may be repented at leisure, so be guarded in the way you express your feelings in black and white. Any disregard for conventionalities at a social affair is likely to be a decided mistake, and result in a quarrel.

Interesting news may have an important bearing on some of your plans, but before making any change in them, it will perhaps be wise to verify whatever you hear. It will be tactful to keep your conversation free of gossip or harsh criticism, as there may be danger of it being repeated or overheard. Married and engaged couples, as well as those hopeful for an agreement of espousal, will serve their own interests best by being ready to be of service to others.

If a woman and May 1 is your birthday, your sweet, lovable disposition may have one trait it is important for you to control, and that is a hasty temper if aroused. Words uttered in anger can do a great deal of damage. You owe it to yourself to be careful what you say, as well as how you say it. You should be very fortunate in money matters.

Beauty Routine Is Made Easier By These Rules

List of Eight Suggestions Offered to Save Time and Money.

HUNDREDS of women say they haven't the time and certainly not the patience to do all that beauty specialists say they should. As a matter of fact, there is no specific reason why they should indulge each night in a tedious process of beautifying themselves, since there are so many short cuts they may take. Here is a list of a few beauty pointers that may help them save both time and money:

1. Don't forget the value of the oily cream patted around your eyes at bedtime. It's one of the best ways to smooth away or prevent the tiny wrinkles caused by exposure or eyestrain.

2. Soap and water and liquid cleansers which do not have an oil base are fine to cleanse the oily skin. They may be safely used both morning and night.

3. If you are troubled with blackheads, wash your face two or three times a week with a mild oatmeal meal—just as grandmother used to. Sometimes the old remedies are still the best!

4. To remove your mascara be sure and rub your cleansing cream over your lashes. It softens the dark tint, takes off most of it and makes the final removing with soap and water much easier. Besides, the cream is good for the lashes and prevents their being brittle.

5. The surest way to prevent the lines in your neck from becoming apparent is to keep them free of dirt. Never fail to cleanse your neck as assiduously as you do your face.

6. After you wash your hands and while you dry them, use the towel for pushing back the cuticle. By doing this frequently you will train the cuticle to stay back.

7. You can prevent hangnails ever appearing by using a good hand cream around the nails each night.

8. If you go in for outdoor sports and don't feel it is quite appropriate to wear much make-up, use a light rose-colored pomade, which gives only the slightest color and is fine for the lips.

I Made Up My Mind To Get Thin..and Did!

It was so simple! I ate what I liked, took no strenuous exercises, did not weaken my body with drastic purgatives—yet day by day I felt myself getting lighter, the fat seemed to slip away. Now I have a lovely, graceful figure—and I never felt better in my life!

That, in brief, is what thousands of women who have reduced the Marmola way might well tell you. Four times a day they take a little tablet containing in exactly the right quantity a world-famous corrective for abnormal obesity. A corrective prescribed by physicians everywhere and acknowledged to be the most effective known.

Since 1907, more than 20 million packages of Marmola have been purchased. Could any better recommendation be had?

Today—buy a package of Marmola, and start at once. Soon you will experience Marmola's benefits. When you have gone far enough, stop taking Marmola. And you will bless the day you first discovered this marvelous reducing agent!

Lexicographer Failure on Air

Radio Listeners Take Issue With Pronunciation of Dr. Vizetelly.

A LEXICOGRAPHER should be read but not heard, Dr. Frank H. Vizetelly is convinced. For years his pronunciation of words as set forth in dictionaries has been accepted without question. But recently Dr. Vizetelly has spoken over the radio and a good many listeners have declared he doesn't practice what he preaches.

Immediately after one broadcast a man put through an expensive long distance call to tell the lexicographer he had accented decade on the last syllable.

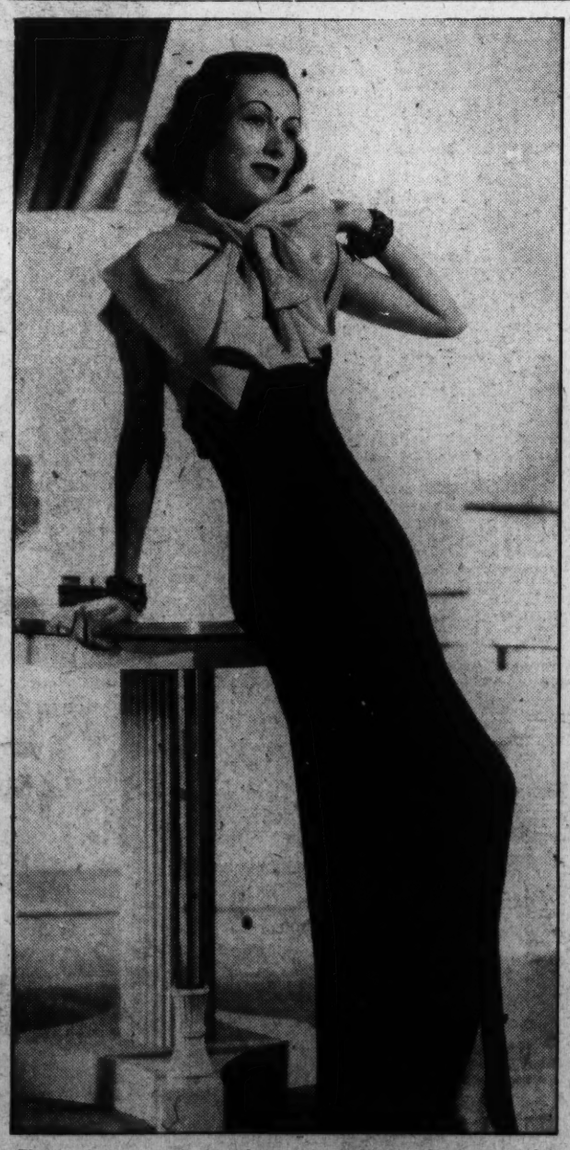
"And I suppose I did," Dr. Vizetelly admitted in an interview recently. "That's the way I learned it in England—what's bred in the bone comes out in the flesh."

The word decade, however, should be accented on the first syllable, the lexicographer declared. He prefers the Anglicized version to the Latin wherever possible. Thus Dr. Vizetelly says "indexes" rather than "indices." He doesn't mind some slang; uses the word gyp in his own speech. But he has never been able to learn why New Yorkers—at least some of them—pronounce "er" as "oi" and "oi" as "er."

When he first came to this country from Sussex, England, he had a lot of trouble learning how to pronounce "banana;" couldn't refrain from making the "a's" broad and says he probably annoyed Americans as much by saying "banawna" as they do him by saying "pecan" with the "a" flattened.

The word couldn't be anything but "pecahn," according to Dr. Vizetelly, who has traced its origin to the Algonquin language.

Massive Gems Add Touch to Frocks



The handcuff effect in bracelets is shown above. It's part of the massive jewelry craze which strangely enough is accompanying the feminine trend in summer frocks.

Topazes Among the Most Striking; Clips Out in New Guises.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 30.—Massive jewelry adds a smart but startling touch to ultra feminine frocks this spring.

It's virtually all genuine—though rarely expensive for such fantastic stuffs as gilded leather and topaz set pigskin. Enameled metal, crystal and wood also play their part. Size is one of the first rules for the designs.

Schiaparelli shows with her new 1935 spring frocks dog collars, bracelets and bags of pebbled gilded leather which looks as massive as Cleopatra's jewels but weigh almost as little as the proverbial feather. Colored leather necklaces and bracelets are shown, too, while one designer adds to the variety by displaying a pigskin belt and clip set with glowing topazes.

Topazes make some of the most striking jewels shown. A massive handcuff gold bracelet is peppered with the sun-like gems embedded in the metal, and a gold shepherd's crook brooch is rimmed with them cut on geometric lines.

Clips are out in new guises. Some are made of smoothly polished brown wood cut on planes as methematical as a pyramid and set with colored glass stones. One, in the shape of an open book, is made of crystal set with diamonds, and another is a great pigeon's wing studded with pale blue Indian sapphires and diamonds.

Ordinary isinglass makes a bracelet which draws the eyes. It is a simple flat hoop branded once across the top with a ribbon of rhinestones. Another bracelet is a massive affair of black enameled metal clasped with a diamond clip which can be unfastened and hooked to the neckline of a frock.

One of the most striking necklaces seen this season is made of square cut turquoises mounted on a triangle of turquoise crepe and tied close about the throat. Another of black crepe is studded with little mother of pearl pyramids.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

Today is Kate Smith's big day—a celebration of her fourth year on the air. Too, it's her birthday—she's 28 years old. During these four years she has sung 4,800 songs in more than 1,200 broadcasts in 23 different cities.

Eleven million people have seen her in person in her vaudeville tours; 48 plaques and loving cups grace her office. She has interviewed some 32 world or national champions on her matinee hours; has lost 4 pounds, and still considers chocolate sodas important.

Her popularity, during these four years, has been steadily increasing; her usefulness to radio was manifest in her talent hunts throughout the larger cities of the country. Her best friends call her Katherine; her golf score hovers around 110 for 18 holes; she likes to draw comic strip figures, and hates night clubs.

She has written lyrics to Rachmaninoff's famous "Prelude;" has no favorite song; does her own cooking at home. She has missed only one of her many broadcasts, and that because of illness.

This is her big day. May she have other anniversiaries, and all as important.

Her special program is heard on WJSV, 9:30 p. m. She will sing the numbers that she first presented on the air.

Mrs. Roosevelt's on the Farm and Home Hour, WMAL, 12:30 p. m. Her message is concerned with May Day-Child Health Day.

The second annual athletic banquet of Catholic University is heard on WMAL, 9:45 p. m. It is expected to be the largest of its kind ever held in Washington. Dr. Hans Luther, German Ambassador, will outline plans for the 1936 Olympics to be held in Germany; Jim Crowley, football coach for Fordham University, and one of the famous four horsemen of Notre Dame, will reminisce. A tribute to the 13 Catholic University athletes who were killed in the World War will be paid by the Rev. Ignatius Smith, with the Army, Navy and Marine details participating.

This broadcast comes from the Mayflower Hotel.

Representative Hamilton Fish, jr., is on WJSV, 10:15 p. m. His topic, "A Republican Reply to Roosevelt."

U. S. Bars Mails to 412 Forcign Lottery Aids

By the Associated Press.

The largest fraud order in the history of the Postoffice Department was issued yesterday when a ban against using the United States mails was placed on 412 persons and firms connected with the operation of lotteries and sweepstakes in foreign countries.

The order includes the names of 358 Canadians, 27 in Havana, Cuba, and 27 in the Irish Free State. Of the Canadians 222 are located in Montreal, 28 in Ottawa, 21 at Sherbrooke, Quebec; 8 at Hull, Quebec; 2 at St. Gabriel de Brendon, Quebec, and 1 each at Woodroffe, Ville and Notre Dame de Grace.

Bishop Cannon Here As a Hospital Patient

A new Sibley Hospital patient yesterday was Bishop James Cannon, jr., formerly general superintendent of the Southern Assembly of the Methodist-Episcopal Church South, leader of the anti-Smith Democrats of the South in 1928, and now bishop of California, with headquarters in Los Angeles.

Bishop Cannon was suffering from a bruised and strained right arm. He injured it when he fell in his hotel room in San Francisco Easter Sunday.

The Federal Diary

Trade-Mark Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

BAKER.

WHILE no expansion in personnel has been announced or anticipated at Agricultural Adjustment Administration, applications are being filed at the rate of 150 a day, it was learned last night. Approximately 100,000 applications are on file.

The only appointments being made, it was said, are to fill vacancies caused by resignation, transfer, or dismissal under Section 213 (marriage clause) of the economy act or for inefficiency. Several days ago a call came in for stenographers and a test was immediately arranged. Fifty persons took the test and only 13 passed, a personnel officer said.

The applications section has added to its staff to handle the increasing number of job hunters. Each application requires Congressional and other indorsements. With these appended data, it is easiyy sen that the applications section has one of the largest files in the AAA. Each application is filed with notations as to qualifications, indorsements, State apportionment and other factors.

Virtually every applicant bears letters from Congressmen and frequently from former employers and civic leaders back home. The personnel office strives to answer each letter of indorsement from a member of Congress. Multiply the 100,000 applications by two or more indorsements and the result is a stupendous task and expense in those replies, reading like this:

"Dear Senator—

"This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter indorsing Miss——, of ——for a position with Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

"We have studied Miss——qualifications and will be happy to give every consideration and effort toward placing her in this department. ..... etc. etc. etc."

On the door of the personnel office applicants will find this notice today:

"Office will be closed on Wednesday in order that we may catch up with our correspondence. Will reopen Thursday at 9 o'clock. Julien N. Friant. Congressmen, Senators and their secretaries please knock on Door 6713."

Insubordination Count Against Officer Heard

Charges of insubordination against Park Policeman H. W. Brown, jr., were heard yesterday by the Police Trial Board of the National Park Service. The charges were brought by Sergt. L. G. Purtlebaugh, who accused Brown of refusing to change his detail on April 5 from one side of the Tidal Basin to the other.

Decision was deferred by the board at the conclusion of the hearing, at which Purtlebaugh said he struck Brown after the latter had threatened him and used abusive language. Brown declared he refused to change his station because his assignment had been approved by the captain.

High Tuberculosis Rate Is Laid to Lack of Beds

Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, managing director of the District Tuberculosis Association, attributed Washington's high tuberculosis death rate mainly to the lack of hospital beds for persons suffering from this disease in its active stage, in a radio interview last night over Station WRC.

Mrs. Grant gave a detailed explanation of the new program of Health Officer Dr. George C. Ruhland, through which students in senior high schools will be examined for tuberculosis in cooperation with the medical societies and other groups.

WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, MAY 1, 1935

Troops Set To Reenact 1863 Battle

1,000 to Participate in Observance on Date of Civil War Tilt.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 30.—Lights blinked throughout the Chancellorsville sector tonight as more than 1,000 United States Marines and Fort Myer Cavalry troops made camp, preparatory to the reenactment of the Battle of Chancellorsville Thursday. The scene was in sharp contrast to that of 72 years ago, when Gen. Joseph Hooker's troops, whose roles the Marines will enact, lay in the territory without a light showing for fear they might be spied upon by the Confederate army.

Tonight, however, "Gen. Hooker's camp" was without fear of an enemy and the soldiers went about making their temporary headquarters as habitable as possible.

Acceptance to invitations were pouring into the headquarters of the National Park Service here tonight as hotels were rapidly filling with guests from the Eastern seaboard.

Accept Invitations.

Among those accepting invitations were R. Walton Moore, secretary of state; Arno B. Cammerer, director of the National Park Service in the United States; State Highway Commissioner Henry G. Shirley, Dr. H. J. Eckenrode, State historian; Robert Fechner, head of Citizens Conservation Corps work in United States; Col. W. W. T. Torr, military attache from Great Britain; Lieut. Col. Vincenzo Coppola, military attache, Italy; Brig. Gen. Juan F. Azcarate Pino, military attache, Mexico; Lieut. Col. Emmanuel Lombard, military attache, France; Lieut. Gen. Friedrich von Boetticher, military attache, Germany; Col. Tsi-Ming Chow, military attache, China; Representatives Otis S. Bland, Andrew J. Montague, A. Willis Robertson, Howard Smith, T. G. Burch, Clifton Woodrum, J. J. McSwain and John W. Flannigan, jr., all of Virginia, and Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia.

Shortly after noon today 240 officers and men with 200 horses, 12 motor trucks and armored cars, constituting the Second Squadron of the Third Regiment, U. S. Cavalry, moved into Chancellorsville. Commanding the cavalry is Col. Kenyon A. Joyce. They will "flank" the V. M. I. Cadets as Stuart's Virginia Cavalry flanked Gen. Jackson's troops in his march around Gen. Joseph Hooker.

Tents Placed.

Chancellorsville assumed a warlike aspect tonight. More than 500 tents were up, housing the Quantico Marines, and others were being placed this afternoon with the arrival of the cavalry. Tents were in rows, with company streets between, and at the south end of the camps kitchens were sending up streams of smoke. The marines are under command of Capt. W. W. Davies, with Lieut. W. J. Stuart second in charge.

The United States flag and the Red Cross flag are raised in the infantry camp. Yesterday 700 more marines with four 75-mm. guns moved into the camp. Tents are pitched on two sides of the highway passing through Chancellorsville.

Guns of Battery F, 111th Field Artillery, will be manned by the V. M. I. Cadets.

There will be no "cracker box conference" tomorrow night at the Bivouac Stone, a half mile south of Chancellorsville, such as took place on the night of May 1, 1863, when Gen. Stonewall Jackson and Gen. Robert E. Lee sat before a log fire and planned the historic march Jackson was to take early next day.

Dress Parade.

The Virginia Military Institute Cadets, portrayers of the Confederate army, are not to move to the scene of battle until early Thursday morning. As in contrast to the night of May 1, 72 years ago, when Jackson's troops were spread out in the woods while he conferred with Lee, the cadets will be presenting a dress parade at the fair grounds in Fredericksburg for benefit of the thousands of persons expected here to witness the sham battle.

A truck caravan will bring the 600 cadets from Virginia Military Institute to this city tomorrow afternoon. Some 75 trucks of the Virginia National Guard have been ordered out for the expedition by Adjt. Gen. S. Gardner Waller, the movement being in the nature of training for the guardsmen in handling a convoy such as they might be called on for in time of war or other national emergency.

Officers in charge of the convoy are Maj. Ewart W. Opie, of Staunton; Maj. Charles H. McCurdy, Capt. H. W. Dickerson and others.

The Chancellorsville section, now a part of the National Battlefield Memorial Park, never has been more beautiful than now, with the trees already green and dogwood in full bloom.

The program of the two-day event will open tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. with the dress parade by the V. M. I. Cadets at the fairgrounds. From 8 to 9:30 p. m. a concert will be given by the United States Marine Band in the high school athletic field.

Thursday's program opens at 11 a. m. at the Bivouac Stone where Lee and Jackson held their famous conference and where they watched Jackson's corps start on its flank march. Here Dr. Douglas Freeman, authority on the Civil War, with the aid of amplifiers and a giant map, will deliver a narrative address outlining the battle. Closing his address about 11:30, he will announce the start of "Stonewall" Jackson's march, the V. M. I. Cadets, headed by two troops of the Third Cavalry, taking this part. The buglers will announce the start of the march and the corps will swing into column down the same old Furnace road that their predecessors trod under the most famous of all V. M. I. instructors, and on to the flank of Howard's Corps out on the Orange turnpike.

Will Await Gunfire.

After the corps has passed the spectators will move to the area a mile west between Fairview and Hazel Grove. Here at 2 p. m. Dr. Freeman and his audience of several thousand persons will wait for the sound of Jackson's guns on the turnpike, the signal that "Old Jack" has reached his destination and found his prey. Then at 2:30 p. m. there will be fought, in sham before the crowd the last phases of the operations of the morning of May 3. This will present the desparate charge of the old Stonewall brigade, now under command of Col. Funk, Gen. Paxton having been killed about an hour previously.

The Stonewall brigade takes the works on Fairview Hill, but for lack of support must fall back. Units of Franklin's and Mott's brigades hold grimly to their recaptured works. Then Perry's and Posey's brigades of Anderson's division come up from the south and, joining their left with Archer's brigade, again charge the Federal position in the face of a grueling fire, and take it finally. Union troops falling back through Chancellorsville. This infantry action will be accompanied by the fire of the Confederate artillery at Hazel Grove and the Federal at Fairview.

Planes to Drop Wreaths.

The battle will be followed at 3:45 p. m. by an exhibition drill staged by the Fort Myer cavalry and machine gun troop. At 5 o'clock 36 Marine Corps planes, flying in formation, will pass over the battlefield in a demonstration of aerial maneuvers and, returning to this city, will sweep low over the National Cemetery here, where are buried 16,000 Federal dead, and over the Confederate Cemetery, where lie 4,500 Southern soldiers, dropping blossoms and wreaths upon the graves.

City Decrees Holiday For Battle Festival

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 30. With plans for the reenactment of the battle of Chancellorsville complete, Mayor R. J. Payne today declared Thursday a city holiday.

Receipts Levy Facing a Test In State Court

Retailers to Charge Tax in Maryland Unfair to Merchants.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 30.—Retail merchants of Maryland were said today to be planning a test case of the gross receipts tax to be carried to the courts in the near future.

A meeting at which a number of retailers and the principal retail organizations of the State were represented was held in the offices of a law firm yesterday.

The firm, of which Senator Millard E. Tydings and former Judge William C. Walsh, of Allegany County, are members, is said to have been retained to prepare the test case.

Ben M. Kamens, president of the Allegany County Retailers Association, was present. It was contended that the gross receipts tax throws the entire relief burden of the State on the shoulders of the retailers and will ruin many of the smaller merchants.

The tax measure was passed to raise funds for relief purposes. It was accepted by Federal officials as part of the State's relief program and Federal funds are being supplied in belief that it will continue in force.

Eastern Shore Firemen Will Attend Meetings

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Heathsville, Va., April 30.—Firemen of the Eastern Shore will participate in two meetings to be held May 8 and June 19 to 21. A large delegation from the Crisfield company as well as delegations from the shore's volunteer fire companies will attend the May meeting of the DelMarVa Volunteer Firemen's Association in Cape Charles.

The Crisfield Volunteer Fire Company also will name delegates to the State firemen's convention in Oakland, Md., in June.

Northern Neck Expects A Large Fruit Crop

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Heathsville, Va., April 30.—Reports from all parts of the Northern Neck of Virginia indicate a bumper crop of fruit. While the Northern Neck is not listed as a fruit growing territory, the scarcity of local grown fruit last year was a disturbing factor in the economic conditions here. Apples, peaches, pears and other fruits were bought from other sections for canning.

Millions of early tomato plants are being set to the field in the Coan River belt, near Heathsville, and other parts of the Northern Neck.

Diphtheria War Leads Program Of Health Day

Maryland Director Holds Plans for Future Are Most Important.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 30.—Dr. Robert H. Riley, State health director, said child health day, to be celebrated tomorrow, is not "one day to look to the health of our children, but a day to survey what has been done and to make resolutions for the future."

The director asserted his department has resolved to make diphtheria as rare in Maryland as smallpox. In the period from 1913 to 1934, he said, the diphtheria death rate has been cut from 15.1 per 100,000 population to 1.3, or more than 1,000 per cent.

"I am using this as an example of what is being done in child health in this State," said Dr. Riley. "There has been only one case of smallpox in Maryland in four years. That one was in 1931, and it was imported."

The doctor praised the acts of President Roosevelt and of Gov. Harry W. Nice in issuing proclamations for child health day. In his proclamation, Gov. Nice asserted "the future welfare of the State is dependent on the welfare of its children."

Dr. J. H. M. Knox, jr., chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health, said some of the things to which attention should be given tomorrow are:

"The right of every mother to adequate care before, during and after the birth of her baby; the right of every child to adequate care; the right of every young child to be protected against diphtheria and smallpox; the nutritional needs of growing children and the importance of milk, whole grain cereals, green leafy vegetables and fruits in their diets, and the recreational needs of children and young people, suitable places for play and pleasure."

Nuttle Elected Farm Unit Head

Succeeds C. T. Cockey, of Pikesville.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 30.—The election of Harry H. Nuttle, of Denton, as president of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation was announced today.

Nuttle succeeds Charles T. Cockey, jr., of Pikesville, who resigned. Cockey had been president of the organization since 1933. Nuttle was vice president.

An Eastern Shore farmer and canner, Nuttle had been president of the Caroline County Bureau since 1930. He was elected to the House of Delegates at the age of 28 and served in the State Senate from 1918 to 1921. Nuttle is an honor gradaute of Dickinson College and a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Howe Named Rotary Head At Salisbury

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, Md., April 30.—It is fallacy to believe Scotland Yard methods can be applied to law enforcement operations in America, Hugh H. Clegg, assistant director, Bureau of Investigation, United States Department of Justice, told the concluding session of the thirty-fourth district conference, Rotary International, here today.

The present system of coordination of local, State and Federal enforcement agencies is more effective in this country, he said.

"Contrary to illusions created by the movies and fiction, Scotland Yard is no more than a very efficient, very effective police department for the City of London. According to information furnished us by Scotland Yard, it made only six excursions on crime investigation outside of the City of London in 1932-33-34."

Rotarians were given graphic description of methods used in tracking down some of America's most notorious criminals. In solving the kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel and subsequent ransom payment co-ordinated operations of local, State and Federal officers covered a territory in the Southwest and Middle West equal to all of England, Scotland, Ireland, France, Italy, Germany, Austria and Switzerland, yet 30 participants in that crime had started serving sentences within 100 days after the kidnaping, Clegg stated.

Eighty-one law-enforcement agencies throughout the country are using fingerprint identification service of the bureau, where 4,900,000 impression cards are filed and additional cards are being recorded at the rate of 310 every hour, he stated.

Accepting the formal nomination as district governor for the next fiscal year, Harrison E. Howe, Washington, declared "actimism" will be the slogan of the organization during his term. He defined an "actimist" as one who translates optimism into action.

Two Women's Groups Install Officers Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Manassas, Va., April 30.—Officers of the Manassas Woman's Club and the Manassas Junior Woman's Club will be installed at the annual May breakfast in the Swavely School tomorrow. Mrs. L. Buck, State director, and Mrs. Alexander, candidate for State president, will speak.

Officers of the Senior Woman's Club to be installed are Mrs. Paul Cooksey, president; Mrs. Eula Holt Merchant, first vice president; Mrs. A. A. Hooff, second vice president; Mrs. C. C. Lynn, recording secretary, and Mrs. Harvey Steele, treasurer. Officers of the Junior Woman's Club are Miss Rena Bevans, president; Miss Sue Gibson, vice president; Miss Janet Trusler, secretary, and Miss Walser Conner, treasurer.

Two Jailed for Holdup By Winchester Judge

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., April 30.—Judge Donald Weems yesterday sentenced two youths to a year in jail on charges of assault and hold-up.

According to the testimony, the defendants, Hubert Campbell and Charles Ritter, assaulted Brown Burke, of Clearbrook, in a vacant lot and robbed him, later returning a part of the money.

Field Day Planned.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Montrose, Va., April 30.—The Upper Northern Neck Health and Field day will be held here at the Washington and Lee High School Friday. The program will consist of health exercises, the crowning of a queen and baseball. The Warsaw High School will present a four-act play.

Hearing Gets Plan to Save W. B. and A.

Tax Emption, Wage Cut and Rate Raises Are Proposed.

Board Counsel Says It Would Avert Expected $150,000 Deficit.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 30.—A plan to avert an expected deficit and forestall abandonment of all services of the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis Railway was outlined before the public service commission today.

As described by E. Austin James, people's counsel to the commission, the plan involves tax exemption, which the road has been seeking, wage decreases and rate increases.

James put his proposal before receivers of the road and members of the commission as a hearing was resumed on the railway application for permission to discontinue operation.

The commission attorney said the plan would eliminate the anticipated $150,000 deficit for 1935. The receivers have said they can not continue operations in the face of the deficit.

Tax Plan Involves $70,000.

James said he would present testimony to show that the legislature, at a special session to be called in 1936, would offer the road tax exemption for that year and retroactively for 1935. He said it would amount to $70,000.

To wipe out the remaining $80,000, James suggested a general 10 per cent salary cut for employes of the railway, and a slight increase in rates. He estimated the former would save the road $60,000 and that the latter would bring in $20,000.

He said he believed patrons of the railway would approve the rate increase to prevent discontinuance of services and that the employes would accept the salary cut in the assurance their source of income would not be cut off.

Receiver Testifies.

Earlier, George Weems Williams, receiver for the company, has testified that in addition to losing revenues, the road had to pay $300 a year for each of the seven miles of track located within Washington.

Harold E. West, commission chairman, asked the witness if any revenue losses would be sustained if the road were terminated at the District of Columbia line. Williams said a study he had made showed many persons would not patronize the road if this were done.

Virginia Group Votes to Admit Girls' Schools

Preparatory Association to Revise Constitution; Officers Named.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 30.—The Virginia Association of Preparatory Schools, in its annual meeting at the University of Virginia yesterday, voted to revise its constitution to open membership in the organization to girls' secondary schools.

The revision was adopted after discussions of administrative problems and election of officers. Representatives from 14 private schools attended.

Col. N. J. Perkins, commandant of Fork Union Military Academy, was chosen president to succeed Grigsby C. Shackelford, assistant headmaster of Episcopal High School, who presided yesterday. Col. John C. Boggs, headmaster of Randolph-Macon Academy, was elected vice president, and Charles H. Kauffmann, of the University of Virginia, was re-elected secretary-treasurer. J. Carter Walker, headmaster of Woodberry Forest School, and Mr. Shackelford were named to serve on the executive committee along with the newly-elected officers.

The executive committee was instructed to write new provisions in the constitution to cover admission of private schools for girls. The expansion program is expected to be made effective next year.

Delegates included Col. W. H. Hudgins of Fishburne Military Academy; Col. W. M. Kemper, of Virginia Presbyterian School; Edwin B. King, of Stuyvesant School; Dr. Oscar D. Randolph, of Virginia Episcopal School; Col. J. M. Moore, of Greenbriar Military Academy; Col. H. J. Benchoff, of Massanutten Military Academy, and Col. A. H. Camden, of Hargrave Military Academy.

School Head Writes Play For Festival

Blossom Ceremony Will Open Tomorrow With Large Parade.

By C. B. Carr.
A Staff Correspondent.

Winchester, Va., April 30.—For the fifth consecutive year, Garland R. Quarles, superintendent of Winchester public schools, has written the continuity of the pageant to be presented in honor of the queen of the Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival, to be held here Thursday and Friday.

Each year he has taken the theme of the return of springtime and the beauty of nature and has woven it with either the national or historical background of the queen's throne to make it a more fitting tribute to the newly crowned sovereign of Blossomland.

When Mlle. Nella Veverka, daughter of the Czechoslovakian minister to the United States, Dr. Ferdinand Veverka, and Mme. Veverka, was selected to reign as queen of the 1935 fete, Mr. Quarles had already penned the lines of the pageant—"Dawn, a pageant of Springtime!" In his text were such episodes as the dance of the winds, the sun dance, Indian dances, barn dances, polka groups and the dance of the blossoms—all to carry out the theme of the dawn of spring, the dawns of yesterday and the dawn of today.

Students to Dance.

As a fitting tribute to the Slavic Queen, he has inserted into the pageant one of the old Czechoslovakian dances which will be interpreted by a group of Handley High School students who have been trained by Miss Virginia Hunter Boyd.

In 1934 the pageant embraced one of the famous dances of the huntsmen to honor Mrs. John Hay Whitney, of Upperville, Va., internationally known sportswoman. The year previous students were taught one of the favorite steps of ancient Belgium in honor of Miss Francoise May, daughter of the Belgian Ambassador to the United States, Paul May.

When it came to picking dances to honor the queen of the 1932 fete, Mr. Quarles had a wide selection from which to choose. Miss Helen Ames Washington, of Overbrook, Pa., a collateral descendant of George Washington, was queen of the fete that year and the pageant contained such familiar steps as the minuet and Virginia reel.

Stage Set.

Director General Fred A. Read, jr., and his staff today declared the "stage set" for the festival Thursday and Friday. It will open Thursday morning with a parade of 3,000 school children of Frederick County. That afternoon Mlle. Veverka will be crowned Queen Shenandoah XII by Gov. H. G. Kump, of West Virginia, in a colorful ceremony adapted from the Anglo-Saxon. Immediately following the coronation, the pageant will be presented in the Handley High School amphitheater. This pageant will be presented again Friday morning and that afternoon the grand feature parade of the festival—"The Trail of the Pink Petals"—four miles in length, will be held. The queen's ball Friday evening will bring the fete to a close.

Horticulturists expressed the opinion today that the sudden drop in temperature last night will tend to keep the orchards garbed in the millions of apple blossoms in which they have been clothed since Friday. Already thousands have toured the maze of highways leading through the orchards of the famed Shenandoah-Potomac-Cumberland belt, extending from Staunton, Va., on the south to Lancaster, Pa., on the north, and 250,000 visitors are expected in these regions by Sunday night, when blossom week ends.

'Actors' Fund of America, Despite Impediments, Makes Handsome Profit on Benefit

Playing Crowd Makes Big Bill An Ace Success

By Nelson B. Bell.

Despite the fact that it was presented at the modest price scale of 50 cents, 75 cents and $1, the Actors Fund Benefit with which the National Theater Players inaugurated their eleventh annual "little season" in the National Theater on Sunday night, netted almost as great a profit as the Actors Fund of America, Inc., has made upon the previous occasions when, under the managerial direction of Daniel Frohman, it has brought its own troupe of stars to town to put on a heterogeneous and roughly routined variety bill.

Although the National was not sold out—as it should have been, the volume of the entertainment and the low admissions being what they were—the gross receipts ran to approximately $1,400. After the small incidental expenses of putting on the combined "Accent on Youth" performance by the Players and the unified vaudeville bills from the Earle and Loew's Fox, and the cost of the orchestra, the only department of the theater to demand payment for its services, had been deducted, the venerable Mr. Frohman, octogenarian dean of the theater and for more than half a century president of the Actors Fund of America, found his pet charity enriched to the tune of about $1,000.

There have been vastly greater gross receipts than this on the occasion of earlier benefits with which I happen to be personally familiar, when net profits were less. This, of course, is to be attributed to the transportation and other costs of bringing large groups of players down from New York to appear in a single Actors Fund benefit performance.

Last of the Survivors.

It is interesting in this connection that Mr. Frohman reminded me, and announced from the stage in his brief talk Sunday night, that Washington and New York are the only two cities remaining in the country in which Actors Fund benefits can be successfully put on.

Back in the days when I was more actively concerned in the staging of Mr. Frohman's benefits than I am now, it was the usual thing to put them on in Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Chicago and one or two other cities, in addition to New York and the National Capital.

The veteran head of the Fund now finds such a procedure utterly impracticable; it is considerably more costly than it is profitable. Mr. Frohman, therefore, entertains feelings of especial cordiality and gratitude toward the city of Washington.

And it is for that reason that it seems to me particularly lamentable that not all of the factors essential to the success of the benefit this year could find it in their hearts to co-operate in the same fine spirit of kindliness and charity with which the Actors Fund is administered for the comfort and succor of those members of "the profession" who, after a lifetime of effort find it no longer possible to supply themselves with the necessities, let alone even the minor luxuries, of living in their declining years.

An interested and interesting guest at Division Manager Carter Barron's Sabbath afternoon tea in honor of Greta Niesen in the Willard Hotel was Mrs. Louis K. Sidney, wife of the director of stage entertainment for Loew's Inc. Mrs. Sidney is a "show woman" who knows her theater as thoroughly as any of the Broadway magnates who help to keep it alive and kicking.

Diplomats Can't Act.

Back in the seething days of the World War it was an easy matter to differentiate between the "war pictures" actually filmed in the trenches on the Western, or any other, front and those synthetically made on the back lots of Hollywood.

The real soldier facing the camera's lens would indulge in all sorts of silly didoes, stare fascinatedly into the eye of the camera and comport himself generally after the fashion of a small and excited boy at his first picnic.

The Hollywood actor, on the other hand, called upon to assume the guise of a warrior in the trenches, always was amenable to direction and never performed any of the spontaneous idiocies that marked the genuine fighting man's moment of relaxation from the grim business of organized slaughter.

The same elfin spirit, the same self-consciousness, the same surrender to the quaint urges of childish whimsy are to be observed in the "clip" in the current issue of the Fox Movietone News, in which the world's supposedly greatest statesmen are assembled in Europe to insure the peace of the world in the face of ominous threats of war.

Simon, of England; Laval, of France; Mussolini, Litvinoff and all the rest "perform" for the camera in an obvious paroxysm of self-consciousness that makes them appear more like a group of freshmen than powerful political figures competent to pose as saviors of world peace.

There isn't a good actor in the crowd, although one or two of them are to be applauded for the grotesquery of their unconscious comedy.

Actors, after all, it seems, make the best actors.

Stan Kavanagh, the comedy juggler at the Earle this week—and probably the foremost exponent of his agile profession there is left to the theater—is a native of Australia and has performed before theater audiences for 28 years. He has appeared in every country in the Far East and has toured South Africa and the Antipodes. His only trip across the Atlantic was to play the British Isles and then to hop to the continent for a short glimpse of Paris. The man possesses a degree of dexterity that few have been able to acquire. Tennis balls and Indian clubs usually are not the fondest things I am of, but I could watch this fellow work all night.

Those Opening Days!

The managerial gentlemen holding the reins over the Capital's palaces of the titillating tintypes continue to juggle their opening days no less than scandalously.

Take tomorrow, for instance. While it can not be termed "juggling" on the part of Sam Cummins, who comes back to town again to operate the Little Theater on Ninth street, as he did so successfully several years ago, he, nevertheless, is opening his "War Is a Racket" tomorrow for a first Washington presentation. This, as I understand it, is one of his own productions. The lad is versatile, as you may have guessed.

Master Meakin, manager of the RKO-Keith Theater, however, is up to his old tricks. He is opening "The Bride of Frankenstein," with Boris Karloff and Elsa Lanchester (Mrs. Charles Laughton), tomorrow with a complete indifference to the usual schedule that says the picture should be unfurled locally for the first time on his screen Friday.

All of this complicates matters tremendously for the local drama desks. Wednesday, normally—or perhaps abnormally is the word—is a terrific day in this department, at best. With two movie openings, it becomes practically a major symptom of paresis—assuming, of course, that there is a mind involved of sufficient stability to crack up.

Concerning "The Bride of Frankenstein," Papa Carl Laemmle is very frank, indeed. It was as far back as April 23 when I received the following letter, which I have withheld from publication until now, when it would have some point with relation to an immediately impending cinematographic event:

Papa Laemmle Speaks.

Dear Mr. Bell: Several years ago, when Universal Pictures considered producing the first "Frankenstein" picture, I realized that it was a great experiment. It was a horror story that had lived through the years, and gone through reprint after reprint in book form. I'll admit, I gave the okay to go ahead on the production with much trepidation. When the picture was ready for release, I instructed theaters to warn the public that it was not for the nervous or the scarey. I believed in keeping the screen clean and being honest with the public in telling them just what they may expect in a picture.

The picture "Frankenstein" met with such popular approval and overwhelming success that it became one of the biggest box-office sensations in years. For this reason, and because I have been urged for the last two years by people from all sections of the country to put out a sequel, Universal has produced the "Bride of Frankenstein." As I write this letter, it is being dated into leading theaters throughout the country for immediate showing.

The "Bride of Frankenstein" is a horror picture. I need mince no words in telling you that. It is a shocker—even more so than the first "Frankenstein." I am writing this letter to you so that you will know the picture for what it is, and that it was made for the particular audience that demanded it.

Theaters have been instructed to warn the public just what the picture is. The "Bride of Frankenstein" is not a picture for children. I want everyone to know that. I am frank in bringing this to your attention so that you can pass the word on. The "Bride of Frankenstein" is for those people who like weird, mysterious, fantastic plots. It is a shocker picture. But it is a wholesome picture and unforgettably exciting and entertaining for those people, numbering millions, who like this type of story.

Copies of this letter are being sent to the Parent-Teacher Associations throughout the country so that they, too, may be informed.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) CARL LAEMMLE.

Concerning Mr. Cummins' exhibit, "War Is a Racket"—and I am inclined to think he is right—I have not quite so complete and confidential a confession. Knowing him as I do, I can only say that if you attend the Little Theater tomorrow or later, you probably will be diverted by a pretty good show. Sam doesn't dally with the bad ones.

Morris Friedman, trumpet player in Prof. Lampkin's pit orchestra at Loew's Fox Theater, leaves for New York today to take himself on a ride. And what a ride! On May 2, which would be Thursday by dead reckoning, Mr. Friedman will board the S. S. Majestic for the other side. After touring Yurrup, he will proceed across the blue Mediterranean to Alexandria, Egypt, and hie himself thence to Jerusalem and the Holy Land. He will return to the Fox in the fall after three months of this meandering around the face of the globe and I will lay as high as 11 to 10 that when he does his lip will be all shot to—well, well, how've you been?

Word-from-Dead Note.

Well, I found out about that old roadside acrobatic team of Oscar & Etheldreda that used to make their jumps in a Ford. Etheldreda has been trying to work up a single act and Oscar has gone into permanent retirement. So now you know.

Bill Robinson, king of the tap dancers, while working on the Fox lot, one hears, collects bricks taken from old Keith-Orpheum theaters that have been torn down.

Or wouldn't you know about that?

Miss Tobin Goes Gay for Spring

Once one of the legitimate stage's most demure ingenues—almost a "church mouse" type—Genevieve Tobin, under the Hollywood influence has blossomed forth into one of the most radiant young actresses the cinema can boast. She is pictured above in a very smart, semi-mannish ensemble in black and white which she wears in a forthcoming picture for the Warner Brothers—that much-discussed and highly touted, so to speak, number known as "The Goose and the Gander."

The time has come to chronicle the advent—and almost immediate departure—of the last production in the 1934-1935 season of the Drama Guild of Washington.

In Mordaunt Shairp's tensely dramatic, "The Crime at Blossoms," the guild reaches the zenith of its long and creditable career. The earlier plays of the season have served eloquently to attest the guild's adaptability in acting and stagecraft, but none of them has offered so pregnant a medium as "The Crime at Blossoms" for sustained drama erected largely by sheer force of well-limned characterizations.

At times a penetrating study of the clash of temperaments in the Merryman household, at times a keen satire on the public's insatiable curiosity about gruesome and sordid murders, at times a treatise on the judge-not-lest-ye-be-not-judged theme, the word-heavy drama presents a challenge which was met with courage and overcome with distinction.

Cast Excels.

The guild has gathered together a uniformly excellent cast of 22, of which 5 bear the brunt of the pivotal situations. Clarence W. Moore is the dilly-dallier who cares more about his garden than the more immediate demands of an empty larder. Isobel White is the sensitive, yet matter-of-fact, wife who decided so long as there is a public willing to pay for a look at where the murder was committed, she will, in a purely impersonal and mercenary way, cater to that desire. Betty Owens is the housekeeper who, having been the one to discover the tragedy, adds to the authenticity of Miss White's inspired imaginings. Frederick V. Rand is the cleric who plants the seeds of rebellion in Mr. Moore's heart. Thomas M. Cahill is the "very late visitor" who does some climactic explaining.

Appearing for about three minutes at the end of the last act, Mr. Cahill, through his consummate artistry and intense sincerity, turns what would otherwise be unusual performances of near-professional caliber into rather inept attempts. Surely, no more powerful and compelling characterization has been portrayed here this season.

Paul Bradbury Walter has effectively re-created in the single set the charm of an old English cottage. And finally, congratulations to Denis E. Connell for his excellent direction.

Twelfth annual festival of pianoforte music by the Washington Pianists' Club; Calvary M. E. Church. Recitals Nos. 1 and 2 by Ann Sugar and Leah Effenbach. Miss Sugar's program: Toccata and Fugue in D minor (Bach-Tausig), two movements of Sonata, Op. 22 (Beethoven), Nocturne in F sharp minor and Etude in G flat major (Chopin), "Voiles" (Debussy), Rhapsody in F sharp minor (Dohnanyi), first movement of Concerto in G minor (Saint-Saens). Miss Effenbach's program: Fantasia and Fugue in G minor (Bach-Tausig), "Vogel als Prophet" (Schumann), Mazurka in C sharp minor, Etude in F minor, Fantasie in F minor (Chopin), Concerto in E flat major (Liszt).

At the outset of its popular and well-attended festival, the Washington Pianists' Club presented a debutante member, Ann Sugar, and a retiring member, Leah Effenbach, pupils respectively of Felian Garzia and Alexander Sklarevski. Although only 15, Miss Sugar is no novice on the concert stage, having appeared as soloist with the National Symphony Orchestra in 1932 and in numerous recitals during the last three years. Miss Effenbach graduates this year as a scholarship student at Peabody Conservatory, and is thoroughly habituated to facing audiences.

Miss Sugar has an interesting talent still in the process of formation and promising to develop into artistic flowering. One feels at present in her readings a tentative approach to interpretation, and an unreadiness to rely upon her own instinct. That is a commendable trait in so young a musician and preferable to the overweaning confidence which has checked and crystalized many a growing talent.

Her fluent keyboard technique is in advance of both her emotional and spiritual unfoldment, and as a result, her playing seldom penetrates beneath the surface of compositions. From Beethoven she extracts only the romantic poesy and none of the underlying qualities of genius, and she was at her interpretative best in the two Chopin pieces. The delicacy of her performance of "Voiles" leads one to hope that she will become an adept in Debussy's idiom. She should give more attention to her pedaling, which is frequently a detriment to the clarity of her playing.

Miss Effenbach is coming rapidly to full artistic stature, having made notable gains in the past year. Her finger technique is finely finished, her pedaling admirable and her command of dynamics exceptionably assured. She has both speed and strength and employs them with surety. Her artistic sense restrains her from any exaggerations for the sake of display and her playing is nicely balanced.

One was particularly pleased with her handling of the Chopin pieces, although the fantasie left something unsaid emotionally. One surmises that her penetrative insight has lagged a little behind her dexterity. She attained positive brilliance in the Liszt work, and with Mr. Sklarevski as her collaborator the performance was one of the best two-piano declamations of a concerto that one has ever heard.

"Medea"

"MEDEA." The Wilson Teachers College presents the New College production of a new acting version of the tragedy by Euripides. A rare and most unusual treat was spread before the devotees of Thespis last evening at the Roosevelt High School when Columbia University's New College presented its new acting version of Euripides' famed tragedy, "Medea," under the auspices of the English department of the Wilson Teachers College.

Rare indeed is the production of a Greek tragedy, and last evening's performance will long stand out in the memory as one of the most unusual and colorful events in the season's theatrical history. Simply staged before the massive gateway to Medea's home on the road from Corinth to the sea and costumed with a color and brilliance that made even more effective the tragic tale of Medea's revenge for the faithlessness of Janus, the action unfolds with quiet deliberation with the final death of the two boys becoming more and more inevitable.

The full significance of a play of this type can not be encompassed at a single sitting, nor can a truly adequate summary be held within the narrow confines here available.

The principals were uniformly commendable, with Jeanne Reilly, in the title role, especially covering herself with histrionic glory in a truly protean task.

Special mention should be made of the symbolic dances which are interpolated, with merely percussion accompaniment, and particularly the second routine wherein is allegorically told the story of Medea's gifts of the poisoned cloak and crown.

Hollywood

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, April 30.

IT IS a strange feeling to watch an actor and an actress play a scene for the camera and a few hours later watch that same scene being played by another actor and actress on a stage before an audience.

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon I looked at Herbert Marshall and Astrid Allwyn, on a sound stage at Paramount, play a scene in "Accent on Youth." Later, that evening, I sat in the El Capitan theater and saw Otto Kruger and Lillian Bond do the same thing in the Coast production of that play. Because of only the few hours' difference, seeing this same sequence on a stage and before a camera was very impressive. It denoted, forcibly, much of the difference between the stage and the screen. The scene in brief is that in which the playwright, Mr. Marshall or Mr. Kruger, tells the actress. Miss Allwyn or Miss Bond, that he has an ideal role in his play for her.

* * * *

In the screen version, the playwright must appear to be almost a juvenile and the romantic appeal; hence the selection of Marshall. The scene is being played on the terrace of the playwright's penthouse apartment.

On the stage, the playwright can look his age; all that is necessary is that he be able to act the role. Kruger would never be given this type assignment in a flicker . . . For the screen, this speech was uttered on the terrace of the playwright's penthouse apartment. On the stage, this speech was uttered in front of the fireplace in the playwright's penthouse apartment. Action must be confined to the set on the stage. The camera must roam. There must be motion in motion pictures.

The one line that Marshall and Miss Allwyn had to say to each other took over half an hour before Director Wesley Ruggles got a take which pleased him. The same one line spoken by Kruger and Miss Bond was over in a few seconds. The entire first act of "Accent on Youth" was played in the time that I spent watching that one brief speech being filmed.

* * * *

MARION DAVIES isn't working this day in "Page Miss Glory," but her five-piece orchestra is on the set playing away for Pat O'Brien, Mary Astor, Dick Powell, Frank McHugh and Director Mervyn Leroy. They are having an afternoon musicale as they sit around waiting for the cameraman and electricians to arrange the new setup. It is a gay troupe and every one has a yarn to relate, and being actors they try to top each other. It is like a vaudeville show, every one stepping out in one to do his stuff . . . Finally, the real stage is set and Director Leroy summons the players to become the characters of "Page Miss Glory." The five-piece orchestra stops playing. The music is supposed to have put the actors in the mood, but don't ask what mood.

They play the scene again and again. Each time something seems to go wrong. It may be the misuse of a prop, an actor stumbling on a line, or the sound not recording properly.

* * * *

This time everything is going okay. Then suddenly Dick Powell fumbles on an important work. He blows up, steps out of the character, stamps his foot and blasts a few words which can't be printed here. Director Leroy shouts: "Save that scene for me. I want it for my collection of blow-ups." Many directors and producers save these blow-ups of your favorite performers.

* * * *

GRACE MOORE has completed the Metropolitan sequence, and I can get out of Mr. Astor's seat. The set was an exact reproduction of the Metropolitan Opera House, with the exception of the stage curtain. Miss Moore and Michael Bartlett played the entire first act of "La Boheme." It will run for about 15 minutes on the screen in "Love Me Forever," and will be the nearest approach to pure opera that has yet come out of Hollywood. Miss Moore insists that she was as nervous and excited about this debut at the prop Metropolitan as she was about an opening night at the real Met. She claims she worried about this sequence for two weeks. Miss Moore realized her part in the picture needed a climax as big as "Madame Butterfly" or "One Night of Love," and she believes that this first act screen version of "La Boheme" will fill the bill.

* * * *

The filming of "Love Me Forever" is finished. Miss Moore brought a huge hat onto the set. The hat was filled with papers, and on each slip was written a number. The members of the cast, the electricians, the stage hands, etc., each picked a piece of paper from the hat. They then went to a shelf and selected a package marked with the corresponding number. It was Grace Moore's gifts to the entire troupe.

"Love Me Forever" is now completed, and all the Columbia executives immediately went into a conference. They must get a new title for the picture, and you shouldn't ask why.

Fall Election Inquiry Reopened in Baltimore

Baltimore, April 30 (AP).—A new investigation of alleged voting irregularities in last November's election was taken up by the grand jury today.

Neither State's Attorney J. Bernard Wells nor Deputy State's Attorney William H. Maynor would dsiclose the exact nature of the proceedings, but it was known that six witnesses who figured in last fall's inconclusive probe had been summoned to appear tomorrow. Two officials of the board of supervisors of elections were summoned today with old election records.

Suspect Arrested In Farm Mystery

'Hired Man' at 'Haunted House' Had Fled Hospital.

By the Associated Press.

Lancaster, Pa., April 30.—Richard Parker, "hired man" at the Mechanics Grove "haunted house," was captured today, a few hours after he escaped from a hospital.

Parker and Dr. H. E. Zimmerly were arrested after police raided the ramshackle farm, seeking Mrs. Gladys Lawson, of Calvert, Md., who disappeared after an operation there.

Bones recently found on the farm have been identified by a pathologist as those of a young woman. Zimmerly is charged with performing illegal operations.

Nats' 6-Run Rally Futile as Yanks Win, 9-8, on Errors in 9th

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

New York, April 30.

I TALKED with Jack Doyle at his billiard establishment today at Forty-first and Broadway. That's where prices are made. You pays your money and takes your choice and Jack Doyle will bet you're wrong—at his odds.

POVICH.

He's been following baseball now since 1903, when the Pirates met the Red Sox in the World Series, and he's made book on every World Series since with the exception of the 1919 Black Sox affair between Chicago and the Reds. He laid off that, he said, because "by midsummer, every dog in the street knew that something was crooked with the Chicago team."

He's getting out a new line of odds on May 1, and you can then have the Detroit Tigers for 5 to 2, whereas you could get only 9 to 5 last April 1, and only 8 to 5 on February 1. People aren't betting on the Tigers these days what with their poor start in the pennant race, and that's why the odds are going up. It's the old economic theory of supply and demand that governs the prices, Doyle says.

The Yanks and Indians are the new favorites in the American League, co-favorites. Doyle will lay you 11 to 5 against either one. It represents a come-down from the 5 to 2 he quoted against the Yanks on February 1, and the 4 to 1 he laid against the Indians. Washington, 30 to 1 in February, is now 20 to 1, and may go to 15 to 1 next week, he says.

IF the betting is any barometer, times are better and there is an increased interest in baseball. Doyle says there is lots of loose money lying around now in contrast to the depths of the depression area. The volume of bets don't equal the Coolidge prosperity days, but there are more bets of smaller sums, he says.

Doyle makes his odds from personal observation. He sees every team in every league play at some point during the season as a result of his daily attendance at either the Yankee Stadium, Polo Grounds or Ebbetts Field. But he never offends the baseball magnates by accepting a bet at the ball yard. All his business is transacted either at his billiard establishment or at his hotel.

The biggest bet he is holding now is $3,000 spread across the board on the Boston Braves to finish first, second or third at odds of 20 to 1, 15 to 1 and 6 to 1. But the big money is showing for Cleveland and the Yanks in the American League, and the Cardinals and the Giants, who are quoted at 8 to 5 and 9 to 5 in the National League.

The odds of 1,000 to 1 which he quoted on the Cincinnati Reds before the season started he has revised to read 100 to 1, in order to stop the influx of annoying one-dollar and two-dollar bets. It was mostly a publicity gag anyway. He holds nothing less than $20 at those figures, although he is holding for a personal friend two dollars on the Reds at 1,000 to 1.

BETTING on sports events doesn't compare to the betting on presidential elections, Doyle says. The peak was reached in the election of 1918, when a Georgia cotton planter wagered him $10,000 at odds of 9 to 10 on Wilson to win over Hughes. Doyle lost the bet, but as a result of the close election rightly refused to pay off until the vote of the Electoral College six weeks later.

Doyle quotes golf prices, too. He leans not on expert opinion, but from personal observation. An inveterate golfer, himself, and an attendant at every big tournament, he says he thinks he knows golfers and golf ability. Right now he is designating Gene Sarazen as the favorite to win the United States Open at odds of 6 to 1, with Paul Runyan and Olin Dutra at 8 to 1. Henry Picard, Harold Mac Spaden, Mac Smith, Bobby Cruickshank and Horton Smith will probably be in the 10-to-1 class, he says.

The sport that is making the most headway as a betting proposition, according to Doyle, is football. During the two months the game is played, the volume of bets is even greater than in baseball. He took it on the chin fearfully, he says, during the 1933 season, until Notre Dame and Columbia came along to rescue him. That was the year that the Irish, a 2-to-5 shot, beat the Army in the last few minutes, and that Columbia knocked off the 5-to-1 Stanford team in the Rose Bowl on New Year's Day.

Brooklyn Just Hates and Hates And Despises and Hates, Etc.

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

EBBETS FIELD, Brooklyn, April 30.—Today was a fine day for hate here in Brooklyn. Hate is sometimes a good cleanser, especially if you can sit out in the open. True, there is a certain alarming virulence in the Flatbush haters that expresses itself in explosives hurled at first base, and when Bill Terry came to bat for the first time for the opening of the Giant-Brooklyn series here an orange was slung at him and rolled at his feet past the batter's box. But then the Brooklyns have been suppressing venom all through the long, cold, winter months, and this has really been their first chance to free themselves of a libido.

There are, apparently, but two general types here today, them as hates the Giants, and them as hates the Brooklyns. There may be also, I suspect, a scattering of them as hates them both and the umpires to boot. But only the Brooklyns seemed to be armed. The Red-coated ushers in the lower grandstand back of first base are having a merry chase trying to locate the hidden bomber who has been curving cannon crackers into the coaching box.

They Carry Firecrackers.

Out in the center-field bleachers there seem to be parties who came with their pockets stuffed with Chinese repeating crackers, because the outfield has been crackling like distant musket fire. These are the manifestations of rather more untramelled souls to whom a good loud yell is not sufficient release. Also, the distance affects them. From the far reaches of the bleachers epithets will not reach the plate in any kind of shape.

In the third inning, in a grand, thrilling and hysterical spree of hits, runs and errors, Brooklyn scored six times. As each of the first four men crossed the plate there would be a flash, a puff of smoke and a sharp "Bang!" from back of first base. Repeaters were crackling in the outfield, the crowd was screaming, the Giant pitcher was being demolished. Then the fifth man scored. Silence from the bomber. And the sixth! Somewhere in the stands a bitter and disappointed man was searching through his pockets for just one more bit of caged dynamite to celebrate this magnificent discomfiture of the enemy.

There was so much more to come that should have been hailed with howitzer fire, shrapnel and mine bursts. Koenicke was to hit a home run. Terry was to strike out with men on bases. The Brooklyns were to stage another rally that brought in three runs. There were errors, and excitements and an extraordinarily jocose moment when Boyle lined a ball through the box right at a Giant pitcher named Gabler, who quickly turned around and presented the least vital portion of his self to the liner. It struck him squarely there and dropped to the ground. He made the putout. And still no fireworks to signalize this amazing play.

This interborough animosity is a wonderful money-maker. There were seventeen thousand people here this damp, chilly showery day.

Rookie, in First Game, Beats Cards for Reds

Cincinnati, April 30 (AP).—Young Gene Schott, only home town lad with the Cincinnati Reds, pitched his first full game as a major leaguer today, and led his mates to a crushing 12-to-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

With the Reds' twenty-first and twenty-second double-plays of the season to aid him, he held the Cards to five hits. The only runs off him came in the second as Medwick walked, Collins tripled, and Davis singled. Meantime the Reds pounded the Cardinals unmercifully, getting well started on two trips around the batting order for an eight-run seventh inning.

Misplays Net New York 6th in Row

Bolton's Low Throw and Stone's Muff Set the Stage for Dickey.

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

YANKEE STADIUM, New York, April 30.—Along about the cocktail hour this afternoon the Nats went sour. If merely to err is human, they were superhuman; because they tossed four large and luscious errors into the proceedings today and contrived, finally, to lose to the Yankees, who won the ball game almost despite themselves.

It is sad to relate, folks, that 9-8 defeat the Nats managed to incur coincidentally with the Yankees' sixth straight victory. Washington apparently had the game won, going into the ninth inning, but there was some doubt as to their purposes in that ninth.

The depressing feature is that they had fought back furiously in the eighth inning to pound Johnny Broaca from the box with a six-run uprising that wiped out the Yanks' 5-2 lead, but Jake Powell's hour of triumph was short-lived.

Powell Puts Nats in Lead.

The former Takoma Park sandlotter appeared to have won the game in the eighth when he walloped a home run into the left-field bleachers with two mates on base to put the Nats in a 6-5 lead. Two more runs in this inning put the Nats in front, 8 to 5, but the Yanks came up with two runs against Jack Russell in the eighth to reduce the margin to 8-7 and set the stage for what happened in the ninth.

What happened in the ninth as I was saying, was most depressing. Jack Russell, who had relieved Earl Whitehill back in the seventh inning, was the victim of both the Nats and the Yankees. Before he was able to get a man out, the Yankees had two more runs and the ball game.

Jess Hill instituted proceedings against Russell in the ninth when he bashed a single through the box, to put the tying run on base. Then Cliff Bolton, of Washington, D. C., came to the aid of the Yankees. When Rolfe laid a sacrifice bunt in front of the plate, Bolton threw it into the dirt at first base and all hands were safe with none as yet out.

Russell then contributed to the tenseness of the situation by issuing a walk to Selkirk to fill the bases, bringing Lou Gehrig to the plate. The 3,000 in the stands implored Gehrig to do something about the situation, but that remained for Johnny Stone. On Gehrig's fly into right field, Stone made a perfect muff, and, naturally, Hill scored from third with the tying run.

The only reason the Yank's didn't win the ball game then and there is that the runners on base, like the 3,000 in the stands, expected Stone to catch the ball and thus

St. Louis, April 30 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers handed the Browns their eighth successive defeat today, 11 to 3, in a game that sent the St. Louis Club into a tie with Philadelphia for cellar honors in the American League. Goslin knocked his second home run in as many days in the fourth inning.

Cubs Shut Out Pirates in Quiet Duel

All Is Calm and Orderly as Bucs Succumb to Henshaw.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 30.—With everything calm and orderly after yesterday's pugilistic encounters that caused the suspension of two players, the Cubs shut out Pittsburgh, 3 to 0, today for their sixth victory in seven starts.

The victory moved the Cubs to within half a game of the first-place Giants and to within a full game of the second-place Dodgers, the apparent discrepancy being due to the vagaries of early season percentages.

Roy Henshaw, young left-hander, pitched well in the pinches to turn in his first starting victory in his big-league career, although the Pirates outhit the Cubs, eight to seven.

Augie Galan, Cub left fielder, led the winning attack with a pair of doubles off Ralph Birkofer, scoring in the first inning on a wild pitch and fly, and driving in the third run in the sixth. Red Lucas finished for Pittsburgh.

Guy Bush, former Cub pitcher, who was suspended for five days and fined $50 for his part in yesterday's brawl, pitched batting practice for the Pirates and then watched the game from the stands. Billy Jurges, Cub shortstop, suspended for three days, also worked out and then retired to the stands.

12 Qualifying Places Added to U. S. Open

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 30.—In allotting the qualifying places for the sectional trials of the 1935 open championship, the United States Golf Association disclosed today 12 places have been added to the field for the tournament finals to be played at Oakmont, Pa., in June. This raises the total from 150 to 162.

The increase is due to several factors. In the first place three sectional qualifying points were added for this year's championship so that the total number of districts is 25; second, 40 exemptions from the sectional tests have been granted, and finally there are 1,087 district entrants for the 122 places to be contested May 13 throughout the country.

The sectional entry list is the third largest since preliminary qualification was instituted in 1924. A total of 1,127 players, including six Japanese and South African, filed entries. The list includes 780 professionals and 347 amateurs. Last year there were 1,063 entrants. The peak year was 1930, when the total was 1,177 and the next largest was 1,141 in 1931.

Chicago List Largest.

The three new qualifying centers accounted for almost 10 per cent of the local entry. Forty-four players entered for the 36-hole medal play sectional rounds at Madison, Wis.; 42 at Greensboro, N. C., and 24 at Jacksonville, Fla.

The largest sectional entry was filed by the Chicago district with 135 players, who will battle for 14 places. New York is second with 130 entrants, including Craig Wood and Johnny Farrell, for 13 places, and Pittsburgh third with 122 for 11 places.

Seattle offered the smallest but by far the most interesting entry. Two amateurs, Scotty Campbell, winner of the Canadian amateur championship for the last two years; Harry Gandy, one of the sensations of the 1934 National Amateur, and a professional, Ted Longworth, will battle for two places. In most sections, however, only about 10 per cent of the entries have a chance to qualify.

The exempt players include the first 34 low scorers in the 1934 open championship and all but one of these claimed their places. The one exception was William Lawson Little, jr., en route to England to de-

Gold Cup Field To Be Small But Select

8 to Start in Name Race, 11 in Warrenton Hunt Cup.

SMALL but select fields will compete in the Virginia Gold Cup Races to be held at the Broadview Estate of Alexander B. Hagner near Warrenton Saturday afternoon.

The final entry—that of Gittings Boyce's Walter K in the Warrenton Hunt Cup—was received at the Gold Cup Association's headquarters yesterday. If all the entrants start, there will be a field of 11 in the Warrenton Hunt Cup, 10 in the Virginia Grand National and Broadview and eight in the Virginia Gold Cup.

The race committee of the association announced yesterday that George W. Cummings will serve as clerk of the course instead of Harry Kirkover, as previously announced. Cutting was in charge of the new course at the Broadview Estate.

The complete entries and conditions of the races:

FIRST RACE—The Virginia Grand National. Steeplechase, about three miles over brush course. For 4-year-olds and upward. Purse, $1,000, of which $150 to second, $75 to third and $25 to the fourth horse. Weights: 4-year-olds to carry 143 pounds, 5-year-olds to carry 153 pounds, 6-year-olds and upward to carry 157 pounds. Winners in 1934-35 to carry the following penalties: of $300, or two races, 5 pounds additional; of $700, or four races 8 pounds additional. Nonwinners in 1934-35 allowed 3 pounds; maidens, if five years old or upward, allowed 8 pounds. (White riders only.)

Entries: Charioteer, Mrs. George Eustis; Oliver C., Mrs. T. H. Somerville; Pimochio, Northwood Stable; Swamp Fox, Alexander B. Hagner; Resent, T. M. Waller; Drapeau, A. Untermyer; Melita, Upshur Smith; Royal Riot, J. E. Hughes; Star Light, Mrs. Frank M. Gould; Luckie, J. W. Y. Martin.

SECOND RACE—The Virginia Gold Cup. Steeplechase; about four miles over timber course. For 4-year-olds and upward. A gold cup, presented by Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Pingree, to become the property of the owner winning it three times, not necessarily consecutively, with a piece of plate to the owner of the winner each year. Weights: 4-year-olds to carry 150 pounds, 5-year-olds to carry 160 pounds, 6-year-olds and upward to carry 165 pounds. Overweight allowed. To be ridden by amateur riders in racing colors, or by officers of the United States Army or Navy.

Entries: Career, Mrs. Simon T. Patterson; Chatterplay, Paul Mellon; Indiso, Northwood Stable; Avalon, Howard Bruce; Sileve Lune, W. W. Lanahan; Laguna Seca, C. C. Perkins; Bagatelle, A. Untermyer; Gigolo, Mrs. Vadim Mackaroff.

THIRD RACE—The Broadview Steeplechase; about two and one-half miles over brush course. Handicap for hunters holding certificates from the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association or those eligible for the same. Purse, $500, of which $100 to second, $50 to third, and $25 to the fourth horse.

Entries: Isolateur, Col. Albert E. Pierce; Hal Dal, Mrs. Simon T. Patterson; Argonaut II, R. E. Young; Frost Cake, R. E. Young; Swamp Fox, Alexander B. Hagner; Drapeau, A. Untermyer; Long Prince, Graham Brant; Portrait, Mrs. Vadim Mackaroff; Star Light, Mrs. Frank M. Gould; Massapegua, Mrs. Howard C. Fair.

FOURTH RACE—The Warrenton Hunt Cup. Steeplechase; about three miles over timber course. For hunters holding certificates from the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association or those eligible for the same. Maidens and winners of one race. Purse, $300, of which $60 to second, $40 to third, and $25 to the fourth horse. Weights: 5-year-olds to carry 160 pounds, 6-year-olds and upward to carry 165 pounds. Winners of a race in 1935 to carry 5 pounds additional.

Entries: The Mole, Mrs. George Eustis; Welbourne Jake, Mrs. T. H. Somerville; Avalon, Howard Bruce; Silver Fay, R. E. McConnell; Patrick's Day II, Mrs. Kenneth Jenkins; Sea Farin' Dan, Ewart Johnson; Dionysius, T. W. Durant; Saunton Boy, W. Bowes; Jaunty, Mrs. Howard C. Fair; Walter K., Gittings Boyce.

FIFTH RACE—The Agricultural. Steeplechase; over a two-mile flat course. Purse, $300, of which $50 to second, $25 to third, $15 to fourth, and $10 to the fifth horse. For horses the absolute property of bonafide farmers owning or leasing at least 50 acres in the Warrenton country and such country as the Warrenton hounds hunt over. To be ridden by farmers or farmers' sons who have never ridden in a race other than one restricted to farmers' horses. Catch weights. Post entries.

Whiskolo Wins, Advances as Derby Hope

Chance Sun Beaten Badly; Bradley Sure Boxthorn Will Win 'Off.'

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 30.—Whiskolo, bay colt from the Milkway Farm, came from behind to defeat nine other Kentucky Derby eligibles, including the former favorite, Chance Sun, in the Preparation Purse at Churchill Downs today.

The colt's time for the mile was 1:37 4-5. He paid $8 on a $2 pari-mutuel ticket.

Weston, hope of Jouett Shouse to win the Derby, and Bluebird, Mrs. R. B. Fairbanks' candidate, showed early speed, but finished among the also rans.

Whiskolo, smartly ridden by W. Garner, came from behind to beat D. B. Midkiff's Tearout, not a Derby candidate. Whopper, nominated for the Derby by Hal Price Headley, finished third.

Chance Sun, which was among the colts defeated in Saturday's test by the filly, Nellie Flag, showed poorly again today, finishing seventh.

Big Gawk, one of the two "barrels" aimed by Col. E. R. Bradley at the 1935 Derby, was an also-ran in the second race on today's card. The colt Boxthorn is Col. Bradley's main reliance, however, to win the Derby for him for the fifth time.

Boxthorn was given a three-

Dodgers Top Old Foes in Weird Tilt

17,000 Howl Approval as Stengels Humble Giants, 12 to 5.

By Edward J. Neil,

Associated Press Sports Writer.

BROOKLYN, April 30.—Those amazing Brooklyn Dodgers, still mesmerized by the spell of Mahatma Stengel, picked right up today where they left off picking on the Giants last year—crushing the New Yorkers, 12 to 5, in the first renewal this season of the interborough warfare that knocked the Giants out of the 1934 pennant.

A loud and raucous 17,000 turned out in the finest Brooklyn tradition, hooting the enemy, tossing fire crackers at them, howling continually at their personal foes—Bill Terry, Giants' manager, and Dick Bartell.

Terry, who made that crack about Brooklyn still being in the league, escaped unscathed as Lefty Watson Clark, Giant cast-off, won his third victory of the season, busting the Giants' string of seven straight conquests, but Bartell had a fearful day.

Bartell's Boots Costly.

Bartell made two costly errors. The first, on a grounder from Len Koenecke with one out in the third, kept in motion a Dodger rally that blew Fred Fitzsimmons, Giants' starter, from the box, and run up six runs on triples by Buzz Boyle and Danny Taylor, singles by Lonnie Frey, Jimmy Bucher and Tony Cuccinello, and another error by George Davis in right before Frank Gabler got the side out. He tossed another into a three-run Dodger rally off Leon Chagnon, who finished for the Giants, in the eighth.

It was a weird ball game, with both sides starting patched lineups, the Giants looking like the Dodgers, the Dodgers looking like themselves, and both sides kicking in with a total of seven errors, four for New York, three for Brooklyn.

Travis Jackson, Giants' third baseman, ill with influenza, forced Terry to put Mel Ott on third and send a frantic call to Nashville for Al Cuccinello, farmhand, to report for immediate duties. With Hughie Critz, regular second baseman, out with an infected finger and Mark Koenig filling his place, the Giants had no infield reserves left.

Dodgers Team Shifted.

Sam Leslie, Dodgers first baseman, also was ill, so Brooklyn played a third baseman, Joe Stripp, at first; Second Baseman Cuccinello,

Gar Wood Drops Attack on Record

Trials of Miss America X Prove Unsatisfactory.

By the Associated Press.

He plans to ship the 38-foot hydroplane back to its factory in Michigan, where it will be rebuilt to increase its speed.

Decision to abandon further speed trials here was reached today after mechanics drove the boat twice over a mile course on Indian Creek at comparatively slow speeds.

Abel Rides St. Moritz, His Own Horse, to Victory at Pimlico

Feature Won In Blanket Finish

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, Md., April 30.—"Whitey" Abel is a young man who deserves a "Strange As It Seems" cartoon. He is a very ambitious fellow who chose riding as a career some years ago. Since then Abel has become not only an excellent jockey, but a clever trainer and a respected horse owner to boot.

Some of Abel's handiwork was on exhibition here today in the feature race—the Baltimorean—a 6-furlong sprint. Abel rode his own horse, St. Moritz, to the post and after Starter Milton let the field go, Abel piloted the son of St. James to victory in a blanket finish that made the blood tingle.

It was St. Moritz, Billy Bee and Galon Boy fighting it out as if the three were attached to a chariot. It was a finish in which the jockey as well as the horse counted and the Abel combination was equal to the task.

Of course, Abel collected the glory and the winning end of the purse. He might have had also some of that betting money which was returned at the rate of $12.80 for each $2 investment.

The crowd was one of the smallest of the Maryland season, only some 6,000 reporting for the day's activities. The daily double pool totaled only $10,000. The winning combination of Hut and Cold Shoulder was well backed with a $27.80 mutuel resulting. Had Lealette won the third race, however, the payoff would have been $1,672.70, but Lealette was last.

Gilbert Rides Three Winners.

Johnny Gilbert, contract jockey for the Glen Riddle Farms, carried off the day's riding honors with three winners. The boy who topped the Nation's jockeys in 1932 was successful on Hut, War Stripes and Legume.

The program was run over a course slightly dull from last night's rains, and the time of 1:14 1-5 was hung up for the feature.

Bachelor Dinner was installed an even-money choice in the big race and he looked the part as the field moved along the back stretch. He was followed by Enthusiasm. St. Moritz was a good sixth at the moment. But when the real racing began, both Bachelor Dinner and Enthusiasm folded.

Jockey Abel brought St. Moritz around the field entering the stretch. Galon Boy and Billy Gee already were in front battling it out. St. Moritz moved up to them and then went bumping along to the finish, so close together that the jockeys were talking in one another's ears. The chartmakers called the finish a head and a neck.

Favorite Hut Wins.

An odds-on favorite rolled home in the race when Hut, from the E. K. Bryson barn, won in a field of 12 Maryland breds. Gilbert sent the choice ahead in the stretch. Canimar, a long shot, was second and Tight Wad third over the mile and 70 yards route. The winner paid $3.80.

Aneroid, a son of The Porter, moved out of the maiden class in the second race to the tune of a $34.90 mutuel. In front from the start, Aneroid barely lasted to take a close decision from Flosilda, another long shot. Dixie Dora was third. Some One Else and Cablegram, the lures for heavy play, were not prominent. The time was a mediocre :56 1-5.

The daily Vanderbilt victory came in the third race with Cold Shoulder, Fallon up, outgaming Thruster in a drive. Wise Sister was third. Nine 3 and 4-year-olds ran. Thruster and Cold Shoulder hooked up at the eighth pole and it was anybody's race from there to the wire. The Vanderbilt entry, which also included Gum, paid a $10.70 mutuel.

War Stripes Pays $17.40.

Civil War proved a favorite in the fourth race. Played and played during the betting interval, the son of Omar Khayyam, although he had poor racing luck, was last in the field of six. Another "war" horse did the winning. It was War Stripes, which proved the first winning entry for the Glen Riddle Farm this season. With Johnny Gilbert aboard, the son of Man o' War defeated Credulous and Honeysweet to pay $17.40 mutuel.

Legume, Breckenridge Long's 3-year-old, defeated the favored Fur Fiber in the fifth race over the mile and a sixteenth course. Boston Brook was third and Hows Chances fourth as seven competed. Legume was given a front running ride by Johnny Gilbert, who was piloting his third winner of the day. The mutuel was $7.70.

Luculent, which couldn't get out of his own way on closing day at Havre de Grace, proved a game winner of the finale at an $11.90 mutuel. Highest Point was second and Atmosphere third.

In Baseball History

May 1, 1920—The longest game in history was played between Brooklyn and Boston. It was a 26-inning 1-to-1 tie. Cadore and Oschger were the only pitchers.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HUT, $3.80, $2.90, $2.30; CANIMAR, $18.00, $7.10; TIGHT WAD, $4.50.

HUT, badly outpaced for the first six furlongs, secured racing room on the inside to better his position, took command entering the home stretch and drew out slowly under mild urging. CANIMAR improved his position on the outside and came courageously in the closing test. TIGHT WAD worked his way up gradually, then closed willingly under a drive. ROLLICK, far back for most of the trip, could not menace when in full stride. POOP DECK went well placed and had no excuses. ORTHOPRISM was used up racing DALMATIA into defeat. DALMATIA began tiring after seven furlongs. BOSCOBEL was never dangerous. The others were never factors.

SECOND RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:59. Off at 2:59. Winner, E. Bruner's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ANEROID, $34.90, $12.50, $9.40; FLOSILDA, $18.70, $10.40; DIXIE DORA, $7.90.

ANEROID, quickest to get going and saving ground after moving into command, responded willingly after reaching the home stretch, withstood a strong drive and just lasted to win. FLOSILDA challenged strongly when reaching the home stretch and was wearing the winner down steadily after swerving under punishment nearing the finish. DIXIE DORA bettered her position slowly and finished with good courage. SOME ONE ELSE was miserably ridden from the beginning. She was taken up with the start, then was eased back leaving the back stretch. He settled in his stride midway of the turn, circled his field and closed a big gap. LOVELY GIRL raced green in the early stages. CABLEGRAM could not get up when put to pressure. The others were held safe.

†A. G. Vanderbilt entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COLD SHOULDER (entry), $10.70, $3.50, $2.80; THRUSTER, $3.30, $2.60; WISE SISTER, $6.90.

COLD SHOULDER, permitted to reach full stride before moving into contention, swung to the outside when approaching the last furlong, gained command during final furlong, and held on stubbornly to outstay THRUSTER. The latter, in trouble at the first turn, recovered when reaching the back stretch, reached the pacemakers at the stretch turn, and closed gamely on the inside of the winner. WISE SISTER had lot taken out of her racing ROYAL COMMAND and SONG into defeat, and she could not stay with the first two in the final drive. SONG, rated back of the leaders, made a strong effort midway of the final turn, but failed to rally in the closing drive. GUM was unable to menace after saving ground. RUSTIC REST was used up early. SOLDIERS DREAM raced poorly. ROYAL COMMAND had too much taken out of him in the early racing.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:06. Off at 4:11. Winner, Glen Riddle Farm's ch. g. (5), by Man o' War—Insignia. Trained by G. Conway. Value to winner, $750; second, $125; third, $75; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:14 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WAR STRIPES, $17.40, $8.30, $4.20; CREDULOUS, $6.80, $4.90; HONEY SWEET, $7.10.

WAR STRIPES, handling in his weight well, challenged strongly when reaching the turn, wore HONEY SWEET down and was under pressure to reassist CREDULOUS. The latter fell back rounding the turn, was vigorously shaken up and came strongly under punishment on the outside of the winner. HONEY SWEET displayed plenty of speed while setting the pace, saved ground, but tired badly under his weight when AGAIN could not engage the leaders after being clear throughout. HUG AGAIN was outrun most of the trip. He was lugging in the final furlong. TRULY YOURS drive and was in light quarters. CIVIL WAR stopped.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:36. Off at 4:38. Winner, Breckenridge Long's ch. c. (3), by Eolinard—Shenanigan. Trained by M. Smart. Value to winner, $750; second, $125; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:13 3-5, 1:40 3-5, 1:47 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LEGUME, $7.70, $3.50, $2.60; FURFIBER, $3.60, $2.50; LEGUME moved to the front going to the first turn, was rated in front for the first six furlongs, responded nicely when shaken up, and held FURFIBER safe during the closing furlong while under extreme pressure. FURFIBER bettered his position on the outside, challenged strongly in the final furlong, but tired nearing the end. BOSTON BROOK continued gamely and outlasted HOWS CHANCES. Latter weakened during the stretch drive after moving up strongly. INDIAN NEWS was held safe. The others did not figure after moving up strongly.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:07. Off at 5:08. Winner, A. J. Abel's b. g. (3), by St. James—Feminist. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48, 1:14 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ST. MORITZ, $12.80, $6.70, $4.40; BILLY BEE, $7.50, $5.10; GALON BOY, $7.20.

ST. MORITZ worked his way up rapidly on the outside to engage the leaders when swinging into the home stretch, took a brief lead in the closing furlong and outstayed BILLY BEE. The latter slipped through on the inside entering the home stretch and fought it out determinedly. GALON BOY finished between the first two and met with slight interference during the closing drive. BACHELOR DINNER showed speed to hold away during the first five furlongs, then tired badly. SUN PORTLAND could not gain during the closing test. ENTHUSIASM stopped.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:31. Off at 5:33½. Winner, Starmount Stable's ch. c. (4), by Pal of India—Miss Milburn. Trained by M. Milburn. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:49, 1:14 3-5, 1:42, 1:48 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LUCULENT, $11.90, $4.80, $3.40; HIGHEST POINT, $3.30, $2.80; ATMOSPHERE, $2.80.

LUCULENT, going in improved form, bettered his position steadily on the outside, reached the leader when straightened into the home stretch, then closed stoutly to get up in the closing strides. HIGHEST POINT worked his way to ATMOSPHERE down when reaching the final turn, saved ground, but could not stall off the winner. ATMOSPHERE was rated in front until challenged, but tired badly under his weight when forced to a drive. BARCELONA PETE was gaining slowly at the end. POLO BAR went wide and trailed far back. He can do better. STEPBROTHER could not engage the leaders. BROWN TORCH stopped early.

Tech Opens Inter-High Series by Trimming Western, 14-7

Game Spotty, Fast Winds Whip Ball

Liggett Sets Record by Fanning 12 Batters; Errors Plenty.

By John R. Vosburgh.

THE inter-high baseball series opened on a marathon scale yesterday afternoon as Tech and Western alternately flashed and floundered through a steady gale for nearly three hours before the Techmen walked off the Eastern High field with a 14-to-7 victory.

While both teams faced a rollicking nor'easter, Pitcher Bill Liggett, slim Tech right-hander, flung strike-out after strike-out into the collective faces of the Western batsmen to fan an even dozen men for one of the high strike-out marks of series history.

Pitcher Liggett was vulnerable in spots, however, as Western's 10 hits attest, but was still far ahead of Teddy Kinsman, who started on the mound for Western. Young Kinsmen fell victim to a heavy Tech assault in the fourth inning, the end of which he was not permitted to see. After the Maroon had nailed him for four hits and seven runs to give it a 9-2 lead, Coach Cliff Moore motioned him benchward and Dan Cleary took over the mound duties with much better success.

Tech opened the series with a run in the first inning when George Hahn walked, stole second and scored on Ed Skinner's double over the right field hedge.

A single by Tommy Allen, Western lead-off man, was followed by a scratch hit by Morrison Rutherford, whose bunt pop-fly was blown safe and the two scored through the aid of errors by Skinner and Allen and a single by Manuel Inglesias.

Tech tied the count in the third on a single by Hahn and three subsequent walks by Kinsman and then fell on that individual in the fourth with deadly effect. Liggett singled, Roland, Hahn and Snow were put on base by a fielder's choice, error and a walk, respectively, and Liggett was forced over the plate. George (Cotton Top) Crawford tripled, Julius Singer singled, White France doubled and Kinsman made his departure.

Cleary retired the side without allowing further scoring and his four-hit pitching from that point was impressive, despite five walks. Five errors by his teammates were instrumental in further Tech scoring.

Nats' Four Errors Win for Yankees

But Bill Dickey put an end to it all with a single to right field off the hapless Russell to score Rolfe, who should never have been on the bases in the first place.

Dickey made four hits this afternoon and drove in four Yankee runs and scored two. It was he who had boosted the Yanks' lead from 2-0 to 5-0 in the sixth inning with a tremendous home run drive off Earl Whitehill into the right field bleachers with two Yankees on base.

The Yanks used four pitchers, Broaca, Murphy, Van Atta and Deshong, and the Nats were making errors at the rate of one per Yankee pitcher. Each of their four misplays figured in a Yankee run.

The Yankees took a 1-0 lead in the fourth inning without the semblance of a hit when Powell made an elemental muff on Gehrig's fly to center field, and they boosted it to 2-0 in the fifth when Lazzeri led off with a triple. In the next inning, after Selkirk had tripled, the Nats' strategy went awry. Gehrig was intentionally walked to permit Whitehill to pitch to Dickey, who met the insult with a home run.

The Nats had only three hits off Broaca until the seventh, when they picked up a pair of runs on Hill's two-base error on Travis' fly, a single by Cliff Bolton and Pinch Hitter Red Kress' double. They finished Broaca in the next inning.

Heinie Manush began the six-run festivities of the eighth with a single to center and Travis scored him with a double to left. Bolton drew a walk and then it was that Powell met the first pitch full for the home run that put the Nats in a 6-5 lead. It was the end for Broaca, but Johnny Murphy, his successor, was no help to the Yanks. Two more runs scored on a walk to Russell, a double by Myer and a triple by Stone and the Nats led, 8-5.

The Yankees became one up in the home run duel and one down in the score when Tony Lazzeri smacked a circuit clout into the left field stands in the eighth after a high wind had transformed Dickey's pop to Lary into a lucky single.

Thus, the score stood 8-7 in favor of the Nats when the Yanks stepped to bat in the ninth, but why bring all that up again?

Burton Downs Rippy in 21 Holes

Two Sensational Overtime Matches Lead Him to Semi-Finals.

BOBBY BURTON, 26-year-old bespactacled golfer with the unorthodox swing and poison-studded putter, made two miraculous comebacks yesterday, one against the best municipal player in the District, to enter the semifinals of the East Potomac Spring tournament.

Twice a qualifier for the National Public Links championship, but an in-and-outer during the last few years, Burton crashed through with an unexpected 21-hole victory over Claude Rippy, big favorite, in the feature of the first day's matches.

Two down and three to go against Herman Allen, a seasoned campaigner, in his morning match, Burton played the next four holes in 1 under par to triumph on the nineteenth hole. A birdie 3 turned the trick on the extra hole.

Burton was 3 down and 4 to go against the lanky Rippy, but fired 4-4-3-4—even par—for the next four holes to force Rippy into an overtime duel.

Never once during the 18 holes was Burton up on Rippy. On the nineteenth (B course) both were on the green with seconds and, with a chance to win the hole with a 4, Rippy missed a 2-footer. They halve the twentieth, and on the twenty-first, Rippy knocked his drive into a trap, recovered nicely, and reached the green in 4. Burton laid his iron approach 10 feet from the pin and canned his putt for a birdie 4 to end the battle.

Burton shot a 75 and Rippy a 73.

George Molloy, former District municipal champion, bucked a strong wind, to play near-par golf, and eliminated the medalist, Harold Bowers, 1 up in the quarter-finals. Molloy, strongly favored to win, came home in 35, with the finest golf of the day.

Molloy meets Bob Leapley, conqueror of Ted King, and Barney Welch, and Burton is figured to take over Charlie Beall, winner over John Downey, 1 up on the nineteenth, and Serge Folk.

St. James Track Team Tops Hagerstown, 47-35

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 30.—Douglas Chapman scored 35 of his team's 47 points to enable St. James School to win its track meet at St. James with the Hagerstown High School. Hagerstown scored 43 points.

Chapman won first place in the 100, 440, high jump, broad jump, discus, shot put and javelin throw. Murray, of Hagerstown, won first place in the 880 and mile runs.

D. C.-Baltimore Golf Tourney Arranged

Team of 15 or 20 Public Links Players to Compete May 12 or 19.

WASHINGTON'S first inter-city municipal golf match in several years will take place at East Potomac's course on either May 12 or 19, with an all-star team from Baltimore opposing a District team.

Mel Shorey, East Potomac professional, yesterday completed arrangements for the match. The Baltimore talent will be combed from the Clifton Park and Mount Pleasant public links courses, while Shorey will muster the best players from Rock Creek and East Potomac.

A return match will be held in Baltimore late this month.

Among those who will play on the District outfit are Claude Rippy, George Molloy, John Connelly, Herman Allen, Charlie Ficco, Buddy Sharkey, Lefty Jamison, Charlie Beall, John Downey, Harold Bowers, Bobby Burton, Earl Jameson.

Entries for Washington's first invitation tournament of the season—Woodmont Country Club—will close Friday at 6 p. m. The tournament opens Tuesday. Two days will be devoted to qualifying, with match play in four flights scheduled Thursday and Friday.

Cliff Spencer will open his weekly complimentary classes this morning at 10 o'clock. Fifty women are expected to attend.

Virginia Frosh Beat Fishburne Team, 10-8

Pegelow Aids Seaford To Beat Laurel High

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Seaford, Del., April 30.—Seaford High defeated its old rival, Laurel High, here yesterday afternoon, 6 to 5, in the hardest fought game of the season. Both teams hit hard, the visitors missing several chances to score, due to the effective work of Pegelow, Seaford catcher, at the plate in tagging runners out.

Griffith Sees Old Line Rout Duke, 12-4

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A SWARM of heavy-hitting Maryland undergraduates, arrayed in baseball suits and armed with heavy pieces of lumber, descended upon the unsuspecting head of Ed May in the sixth inning of yesterday's Maryland-Duke game, and when the boys finally ceased hammering Mr. May's offerings the Terrapins had clinched their sixth consecutive victory.

Duke's powerful outfit ran a poor second, finishing eight runs in arrears as their hosts amassed 10 runs in the last three innings to win by the somewhat one-sided figures of 12-4.

To Charley Keller, squat, muscular Terrapin centerfielder, went the individual laurels for the day. Best of all, "Lil Charley" did it with beetle-browed Clark Griffith looking on. Mr. Griffith was completely surrounded by Maryland freshmen, who lustily cheered Keller's every move as though to impress the Washington Club's prexy with the lad's value.

Keller Hits for Circuit.

Keller slapped the first ball pitched to him over into Princess Anne County and later came through with a double and two bases on balls to score four runs. Bob Love and Jake Hartenstein also socked homers for Maryland, and Michael came through with one for Duke.

Steve Physioc went the route for the victors, allowing eight hits scattered like buckshot over the distance. Naktenis and Daly were sent to May's rescue when he faltered and fared little better than their predecessor.

Duke scored a run in the first on singles by Tayler and Mitchell and Wagner's double. The Blue Devils collected three more in the fifth on singles by Wagner and Wentz, followed by Michael's home run, and appeared to be well on their way to victory. But the finishing power of the Terrapins had not been reckoned with, and they finished entirely too strong for Duke's comfort.

Washington-Lee Beats Virginia, 7-5

Dickman Fans 7 Men in 3 Innings for Generals.

Lexington, Va., April 30 (AP).—Staging a seventh-inning rally, Washington and Lee defeated the University of Virginia baseball team here today, 7 to 5.

Washington and Lee scored three markers in the first. In the seventh Mattox scored on Moore's hit and then with the bases loaded Dickman hit to Rogers, whose throw was wild, scoring Iler and Moore. A wild pitch scored Short in the same inning.

Dickman, who relieved Pette in the seventh for the Generals, struck out seven men in the remaining three innings.

Augusta Runners Lose to Fishburne

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Va., April 30.—Fishburn Military School took all three places in the quarter-mile run here today to win over the Augusta Military Academy trackmen, 61 to 56.

In their first home track meet in more than five years, the Fishburne runners showed exceptional strength in the middle distances. Harvey, Fishburne, won both the half and quarter, while Abbott, a teammate, took the mile and placed second in the half.

Allen showed well for Augusta, running the century in 10 seconds flat and winning the 220-yard dash in an even 23 seconds.

Congressional Women Take Golf Lead

Defeat Indian Spring in First Team Matches; Chevy Chase Next.

CONGRESSIONAL COUNTRY CLUB moved into the lead in the District women's first team matches yesterday at Kenwood by defeating Indian Spring, 10½ to 1½.

Beaver Dam sprang the grand surprise by turning back Army and Navy, a few weeks ago the pacesetter, 7 to 5. Columbia won from Manor, 8½ to 3½, and Washington conquered Woodmont, 9 to 3.

Congressional now has 34½ points, Chevy Chase, 31; Beaver Dam, 27½; Columbia, 26½; Army-Navy, 23½; Kenwood, 24; Manor, 21; Indian Spring and Washington, 19; Woodmont, 13.

The big upset was the defeat of Virginia Pope and Mrs. Leo Walper at the hands of Miss Elizabeth Houghton and Miss Louise Claytor, of Chevy Chase.

William and Mary Wins From Hampden-Sydney

Williamsburg, Va., April 30 (AP).—William and Mary defeated Hampden-Sydney here this afternoon, 13 to 1, in a game that was half comedy and half tragedy.

Bernier, Tiger pitcher, was injured when hit by a pitched ball in the fifth and was removed from the game. Jester, Indian catcher, hurt his finger on a foul tip in the third and went into the outfield, being replaced by Stewart, who was in the stands because of illness. The game was delayed while he dressed.

Did You Know Little Wolf Is Such a Man?

By George Considine.

DID you know that—

He makes his home in the Sunflower Valley, near Trinidad, Colo.

He is 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighs 210 pounds, and bears a striking resemblance to Emperor Jee-mee Londos.

His real name is Ben Tenario.

He has been rassling for seven years, starting as a welter and gradually growing into the heavyweight division.

He went to Haskell University.

He is an expert blanket weaver, clothes designer, and a master worker at fashioning bracelets and necklaces. Added to that, he is an all-round rodeo star and used to make his living competing. But, for some unaccountable reason, he prefers rassling.

He isn't a real chief at all.

He has defeated in faster time than Londos such men as Dick Shikat, Gus Sonnenberg, Man-Mountain Dean, George Zaharias, Ray Steele, Sammy Stein, Nick Lutze, Jim McMillen, Sandor Szabo, Joe Savoldi and gosh knows who else.

He says he'd rather be putting over some trade, involving trinkets, characteristic of his race, than complete a big financial deal, netting him thousands. Yeah, he says.

He smiles a lot and likes to wise crack.

Londos signed to meet him last February and then took a run-out powder causing him to be suspended by the California commission.

His manager, Toots Mondt, has developed two world champions, Dick Shikat and Jim Browning. If the old aphorism is true about all good things coming in threes, then the future looks pretty bright for Little Wolf.

Sweet Briar Set For Horse Show

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Sweet Briar, Va., April 30.—Plans for the annual May Day horse show at Sweet Briar College are now complete and every afternoon Sweet Briar's riding ring is filled with riders practicing for the event.

The show this year will begin at 10 a. m. May Day (Friday), and there are 10 classes listed on the program. The first class, for Sweet Briar colts, is new this year. The horses will be shown in hand and include only colts that have been bred and raised on the Sweet Briar Farm.

Our automobile radio service is the kind that will insure you satisfactory reception.

Horse Shows to Begin Today In Loudoun

Special Dispatch to The Post.

UNISON, Va., April 30. — The stage is all set for the opening of the horse show season in Loudoun County tomorrow, with the Unison-Bloomfield event to be held on the school grounds for the benefit of the Community League. A large number of entries, which will be made at the post, will be on hand tomorrow. The grounds have been put in excellent condition and everything is in readiness for the hundreds expected to attend.

Leading horsemen look to this show as a schooling ground for their mounts, which they later send to the big shows on the circuit.

Outstanding exhibitors at the show tomorrow will include Mrs. John Hay Whitney, E. L. Redmon, Peach Bros., Arthur White, C. E. Norman, Clifton Simpson and M. N. Lyon.

The first class will be called at 10 o'clock. Judges are Norman Corbin, of McLean; Esler Palmer, of Fairfax, and Lodge Bowles, of Boyce.

Golf Course Opened.

Tappahannock, Va., April 30.—The Tappahannock golf course, which was constructed on the high schools grounds here, was officially opened Saturday.

Fleming to Get C. U. Award Tonight

Presentation to Feature Annual Banquet as Notables Attend.

THE famed Harris Cup, highest honor that can be bestowed upon a Catholic University athlete, will be awarded Francis (Red) Fleming tonight at the second annual Cardinal athletic banquet, to be held at the Mayflower Hotel. The presentation, which will be made by Arthur J. (Dutch) Bergman, director of athletcs, will feature the program.

Bergman announced Fleming's selection yesterday after conferring with academic officials of the university. The award is made to the outstanding scholar-athlete of the ycar. In previous years the students selected the athlete to be honored by popular vote.

Fleming will receive his A. B. degree in June. He played end on the varsity eleven last autumn and was chosen for two consecutive years on The Post's all-District team. He also boxed heavyweight with the Cardinal leather pushers and won all but two matches, which were draws.

Foley Won in 1928.

Ray Foley won the cup the first time it was awarded in 1928. Since then it has been bestowed upon Jack Malevich, Ed Mansfield, Rocco Blasi, Carl De Mello, Vincent Fraatz and Eddie White.

Dr. Hans Luther, German Ambassador to the United States, will deliver the principal address of the evening, discussing the forthcoming Olympic games to be held in Berlin. His speech will be broadcast by Station WMAL and will go out over a network of 30 stations. The program will be on the air from 9:45 to 10:15 p. m.

Other features of the banquet, which will be attended by Lou Little, Tom Hamilton, Jimmy Crowley and a score of other well-known football coaches, include the award, posthumously, of "C" certificates to 13

Silver Shares Lead Reaction In Stock Mart

Rails Also Weak, but Steel Developments Are Favorable.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 30.—The stock market was a rather bedraggled affair today. The shine seemed rubbed from the recent enthusiasm for silver shares, which led a reaction. Declines of 1 to 3 points were the lot of the recent favorites in the white metal group, while losses in leaders elsewhere ranged from fractions to as much as 2 points or so for some of the high-priced items.

Bull forces, however, took heart because turnover was noticeably restricted as stocks turned ragged after a little early morning firmness.

Turnover in the stock exchange was down to 860,760 shares, slightly under the previous session and the smallest volume of business done in nearly two weeks. The market decline, as measured by the Associated Press average for 60 stocks, was five-tenths of a point.

A number of individual carrier issues lost major fractions to as much as 2 points or so, and secondary rail bonds were a weak feature in a bond market that was otherwise mildly improved. Steel companies dominated the corporate news. After the close of the trading session U. S. Steel revealed that in the first quarter its loss after charges was $2,173,801, compared with a loss of $6,989,965 in the initial period of 1934. Earlier, however, Inland Steel had struck a cheerful note in reporting for the first three months net income equal to $2.05 a share, compared with 92 cents in the previous year, and by raising its dividend to 50 cents from 25 cents paid in previous quarters. National Steel helped along the better tidings from the group when its first quarter profit was shown at $1.56 cents a share, compared with 76 cents a year ago.

Corn Traders Fear Squeeze

Cotton Dealings Quiet With Narrow Range of Prices.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 30.—Prospects that little corn will be available for delivery on May contracts tomorrow led to tension and to price upturns in the corn market today.

The unsettled open interest in May corn here is notably larger then at any corresponding time during recent years, and scarcity of offerings today became very evident. As a result, previous speculative sellers of corn switched to the buying side and there were late rallies of other grains, owing more or less to reports of violent dust storms in Kansas and Saskatchewan.

Corn closed nervous, ⅛ off to ¾ up compared with yesterday's finish, May 89¾@89⅞, wheat ⅛ to ¾ down, May 98⅞@99⅛, oats at ¼ decline to ¼ advance, and provisions varying from 10 cents setback to a rise of 2 cents.

Haunted by fears of a possible tight squeeze in corn prices before the end of the coming month, grain trade interest focused chiefly today on what might develop tomorrow, the first delivery day for May contracts. Wheat failed to overcome its early decline. It was predicted that there would be ample wheat available tomorrow for May delivery here, although this wheat is of the soft winter kind and is less in request than the hard winter variety desired by millers, especially at Minneapolis.

Oats felt the effects of May liquidating sales notwithstanding that only limited deliveries of oats are expected. Provisions lacked aggressive support.

Cotton Market.

New York, April 30 (AP).—Cotton price fluctuations were confined to a range of 5 to 8 points today in quiet trading. Scattering liquidation on prospects for rain in the West met trade buying and the market closed at an advance of 1 point to a decline of 1 point.

Absence of important overnight developments and uncertainty over cotton textile problems as well as new crop policies checked trading. Early steadiness reflected an advance of silver at London, trade and Far Eastern buying, but traders were not inclined to follow the advance.

Revival in Home Building Continues Into Second Quarter But Pace Is Gradual; Volume Still Only 20 Per Cent of Predepression Level.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, April 30.—A gradual but persistent expansion in home building activity is now going on in urban and suburban communities throughout the country. This has been reported by building material manufacturers with Nation-wide organizations since the turn of the year. It is confirmed by the monthly reports on construction contract awards compiled by the F. W. Dodge Corporation.

During the first quarter of this year, the value of construction contract awards ran 25 per cent ahead of the corresponding period in 1934. A consensus of opinion among building supply company executives indicates that the increase for the second quarter will be upward of 30 per cent. In fact, the second quarter of this year may witness the largest volume of individual home building since 1931, they state. The percentage rate of increase just cited refers to all residential contracts. Since apartment house construction continues at low ebb, the rate of improvement in small home building is materially higher.

Expect Pace of Revival Will Be Gradual.

Students of the building situation now look forward to a slow and gradual revival of building, rather than to the abrupt upturn which was being sought by Government stimulation earlier. The large number of foreclosed properties still overhanging the market in many communities, and the fact that numerous mortgages are now in arrears and may lead to foreclosure proceedings before long, tend to slow up the rate of new building.

A second influence is the fact that costs continue unduly high in relation to rents. While reports from various centers indicate that the rising trend of rentals is becoming more decisive, the maladjustment of costs is still far too great to encourage large-scale resort to new building. However, this does not affect home construction as much as it does other types of building, in view of the extent to which many persons prefer to build their own homes even if an existing property may be acquired at at a lower price.

Despite the recovery in small home building that has taken place since the turn of the year, residential construction as a whole is still distinctly subnormal in volume. The present volume of residential contracts is only 20 per cent of the 1929 level. It is estimated that, since 1929, a deferred demand for 1,000,000 additional homes has been generated because of new families that have come into existence during that period. At the same time, some 400,000 homes have been destroyed or abandoned. New construction has been negligible. Whenever the population of the country can afford to return to 1929 housing standards, therefore, an enormous pent-up demand will be released. However, while average individual incomes remain reduced and building costs are maintained at a relatively high level, this accumulated demand can make itself felt but slowly.

One segment of the building industry has felt that the chief hope for a sharp upturn in activity lay in perfecting the prefabricated house. Produced on a large scale in factories, such housing would largely eliminate the need for high-priced local skilled labor. Several leading industrialists have become interested in this development, and the head of one of our largest corporations is reported to be the chief stockholder of a company whose prefabricated house is now on display at a large New York department store.

Most building men feel, however, that at least two or three years of additional intensive effort will be needed to perfect prefabricated housing and bring down its cost. While this is held likely by them to become perhaps the greatest "new industry" of the next decade or two, its present status resembles in some respects that of the automobile 25 years ago. While technical progress from this point should be far more rapid, the local building industry does not appear severely threatened by it for the time being.

Building Upturn Will Be Needed Soon.

The automobile industry has been largely responsible for making the level of general business activity during the first six months of this year moderately higher than in the corresponding period in 1934. During the second half and much of 1936, the public works program now about to get under way will furnish an additional stimulus. However, as long as private building remains depressed, there is no assurance that the increased rate of industrial activity thus being generated will long endure.

In the light of this consideration, an upturn in private construction is of vital importance. Residential building is making steady gains, and the gradual progress in reviving the mortgage market will help assure its continuance. Home modernization work has been registering even more notable progress during the spring, sales of materials for such work rising 30 per cent from March to April. The amendments to the Federal housing act, now in conference, will facilitate modernization activity further by permitting loans for this purpose up to $50,000, thus extending the movement to apartment and commercial structures of moderate size, where the need for rehabilitation expenditures is reported especially great.

Beet Sugar Up to 5.05.

Denver, April 30 (AP).—The Great Western Sugar Co. announced an increase of 15 cents a hundred pounds for sugar today, raising it $5.05 a hundred. This is the highest price since October 30, 1929.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

	Tues.	Mon.
Advances	170	263
Declines	353	233
Unchanged	164	176
Total issues	687	672

Stocks—Silver shares yielded from 1 to 3 points to lead a wide downward sweep. Rails joined in the price drops. Steel news was generally favorable. Turnover of 860,760 shares was the smallest in two weeks.

Bonds—A dozen Federals climbed to new highs for the year. Industrials were firm, while rails were lower. Sales increased to $10,844,000.

Curb—Sold lower on profit taking. Some specialties displayed firmness. Aluminum was off 2½ points. A. O. Smith Co. was off 4 points. Transfers approximated 156,000 shares.

Grains—Fears of a price squeeze raised the price of corn during the session to close unsettled at 89¾. Wheat rallied early, but closed off at 98⅞.

Cotton—Moved in a narrow range of 5 to 8 points. Rain prospects induced some selling. Closes were off 1 to 1 higher. May last at 11.77.

Chrysler to Pay Its Funded Debt Of $30,150,500

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, April 30.—Chrysler Corporation announced today that it would pay off tomorrow its entire remaining outstanding funded debt of $30,150,500 of 6 per cent debentures of Dodge Brothers, Inc., Wednesday. The debentures have been called for redemption.

The corporation's announcement said it had recently arranged an aggregate credit of $25,000,000 with some of its depository banks in the form of 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 year notes. The balance of $5,150,500, the premium of $1,507,525, and accrued interest of $904,515 will be paid out of funds of the corporation, a total disbursement of $32,562,540.

"As a result of wiping out this funded debt the corporation will, after the first year, effect an interest saving of approximately $1,200,000 annually," the corporation announced.

International Silver Reports Heavy Loss

New York, April 30 (AP).—International Silver Co. and subsidiaries reports for the March quarter net loss of $341,477 after taxes and charges, this compared with net profits in the first quarter of 1934 of $56,794.

Telephones Up 11,225 in City Over Last Year

March Operating Revenue 829,730; 1934 Month Was $820,366.

By Karl von Lewinski.

Telephones in service here on the last day of March increased 11,225 over a year ago to an aggregate of 192,549, the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. reported to the Public Utilities Commission yesterday.

Units in service at the end of March were 1,110 higher than at the end of February and at the highest point since 1931. The number of telephone calls made during the month increased 7,000 over the same 1934 month to 21,210,000.

Operating revenues of the company were $829,730 for March, 1935, as compared with $820,366 for the same month last year, according to the report.

Operating expenses, including interest, amounted to $681,142. Net operating revenues were $148,588, as compared with $156,087 in March, 1934.

Taxes for the month of March amounted to $61,415, as compared with $61,016 for March, 1934. The cost of telephone plant in service on March 31, 1935, was $36,483,153, compared with $35,177,232 in March, 1934, according to John A. Remon, general manager of the company.

Quarter Installations Up 1,000.

During the first 1935 quarter the company reported a net gain in telephone installations of 3,578 as compared with a gain of 2,563 during the same 1934 quarter. Total telephone calls during the three months increased to 62,152,000 from the 1934 total of 60,216,000.

Operating revenue increased $43,192 over the 1934 period to a total of $2,458,634. In the same time the expenses were $58,817 higher than during the first 1934 quarter, to total $1,685,656.

Net operating revenues in the quarter were $714,163, as compared with $729,786 last year. Net operating income was $529,028, as compared with $544,223 in 1934. Balance before dividend was $454,406, in the first quarter of 1935 as compared with $478,941, during the same period last year.

Check clearings through Washington banks increased $53,747,398 during the first quarter of 1935 as compared with the same 1934 period, the Washington Clearing House reported yesterday. In great part this large gain was due to the April total of $77,447,954, which was larger by $16,150,619 than the corresponding 1934 figure.

Clearings in April were also considerably ahead of March, when the total was $74,112,669. The March 1934 total was $61,297,334. In addition, clearings in the last month reached the highest point since June, 1932, when $85,449,660 cleared through local banks.

Dutch Court Rules Against Gold Payments

Rotterdam, Netherlands, April 30 (AP).—The courts today dismissed the claim of the Amsterdam Stock Brokers Association against the municipality of Rotterdam for payment in gold on the coupons of its $6,000,000 6 per cent loan of 1924. The ruling authorized the municipality to meet its interest payments in depreciated currency.

The court held that the American law applied to the loan contract, which contained the clause, "This contract shall be construed according to the law of the City of New York."

Spain Ends Preference For French Autos

Madrid, April 30 (AP).—The Spanish cabinet today ruled that the accord of March 6, 1934, giving French automobiles a 35 per cent tariff preference, was officially terminated and announced that a quota would be fixed immediately on French cars.

Ambassador Claude G. Bowers of the United States described the ruling as of "extreme and intense interest to the United States."

Standard Oil Dividends.

Chicago, April 30 (AP).—Standard Oil of Indiana has declared a dividend of 25 cents a share payable June 15 to stock of record May 15.

Houston, Tex., April 30 (AP).—A dividend of 41 cents was declared by Standard Oil of Kansas today on the 146,542 shares of capital stock outstanding for the quarter ending March 31.

Railroads Spent $600,224,000 For '34 Supplies and Materials

Total Is $134,374,000 More Than in the Previous Year But $729,311,000 Below 1929; Traffic and Construction Increased Yast Year.

Class I railroads of the United States expended $600,224,000 for fuel, material and supplies in 1934, according to reports just filed by the railroads with the Bureau of Railway Economics of the Association of American Railroads and made public today.

This was an increase of $134,374,000 compared with the amount of such expenditures in 1933, but a reduction of $729,311,000 below 1929, the last year prior to the depression. No reports as to such purchases were compiled by the Bureau of Railway Economics in 1930, 1931 and 1932.

The railroads spent a larger sum in 1934 for each class of fuel, material and supplies than was expended in the preceding year. This was due not only to an increase in traffic in 1934 compared with the preceding 12 months, but was also due somewhat to increased construction work, partly as a result of Public Works Administration loans. The fact that prices of materials and supplies, as well as fuel were on a somewhat higher level in 1934 than in 1933 also accounted for a part of the increase.

Fuel Cost $217,294,000.

Class I railroads during the past calendar year paid $217,294,000 for fuel, an increase of $36,768,000 compared with the amount purchased in 1933. Of the amount bought, $175,061,000 was paid for bituminous coal in 1934, an increase of $26,411,000 above the amount paid in 1933, while for fuel oil the railroads paid $34,221,000 in the past year compared with $24,850,000 in the preceding year.

The railroads also bought $159,758,000 worth of iron and steel products in 1934, an increase of $49,038,000 compared with the amount of such purchases in 1933. For new and second-hand steel rails the railroads in 1934 paid $31,107,000, while in 1933 the corresponding amount was $11,835,000. For track materials, such as fastenings, bolts, spikes, tie plates, rail anchors, frogs, switches and crossings, the railroads expended $31,283,000 in 1934 compared with $16,691,000 in 1933. They also purchased locomotive and car castings, beams, couplers, frames and car roofs costing $24,583,000, compared with $18,562,000 in the preceding year.

Wood Purchases Increase.

Purchases of forest products amounted to $64,271,000 in 1934, an increase of $21,839,000 above such expenditures in 1933. Included in the amount of forest products bought during the year 1934 were $35,605,000 for cross-ties and $4,340,000 for switch and bridge ties. In 1933 cross-ties purchased totaled $21,746,000 and switch and bridge ties $2,901,000.

Purchases of miscellaneous materials and supplies totaled $158,901,000 in 1934, compared with $132,162,000 in 1933. Miscellaneous supplies included metals and metal products, cement, lubricating oils and greases, ballast, air brake material, electrical materials, stationery and printing, commissary supplies for dining cars and restaurants, rubber and leather goods, painters' supplies and chemicals, and automotive equipment and supplies.

Cities Service 1934 Net Rises To $61,593,921

Earnings Last Year Exceed 1933 by $1,808,989.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 30.—The Cities Service Co., in its financial statement for 1934, reports consolidated net earnings before depletion and depreciation of $61,593,921 against $59,784,932 in 1933.

Gross operating revenue for the year amounted to $173,835,020 against $153,806,755 in the previous year. The company reported that funded debt and notes payable were reduced $20,316,000. Reserves for depletion and depreciation out of current earnings amounted to $22,297,000 compared with $17,744,000 in 1933.

Total production of crude oil by operating subsidiaries was 30,840,707 barrels, the highest reported for the properties for any year except 1930.

Regarding operations by the electric light and power subsidiaries, the report said that "from the viewpoint of total electric generation and sales in kilowatt hours, the year 1934 showed satisfactory improvement."

National Cash Register Co. and subsidiaries report for the quarter ended March 31 consolidated net profit of $196,775, equivalent to 12 cents a share on the capital stock. This, compared with net profit of $280,817 in the first quarter last year.

Phillips Petroleum Co. reports for the first quarter net profit of $1,542,335, after charges, taxes, interest and depreciation, equal to 37 cents a share on the capital stock, compared with net profit of $726,125 ,or 17 cents a share, in the same quarter last year.

Consolidated Gas, Electric Light & Power Co., of Baltimore, reports for the quarter ended March 31 net income of $1,770,297 after charges and taxes, equal after preferred dividend deqiirements to $1.27 a share on the common stock. This compares with net income of $1,707,451, or $1.21 a share, in the same quarter last year.

600 Tons of Liquor In One Shipment

Pekin, Ill., April 30 (AP).—John Bernard, plant manager for the American Distillery Co., today said that what he believed to be the largest single shipment of liquor ever to leave the Midwest would be sent Wednesday to the company's new bottling plant at Hoboken, N. J.

Six hundred tons, about 120,000 gallons of liquor, will constitute the shipment, he said. The liquor is being loaded on a barge for the trip.

Sloan Explains Auto Upturn, Cotton Slump

Seeks to Discourage More Excursions Into Economic Wonderland.

"My attention has been called to the suggestion made by Chester C. Davis, agricultural adjustment administrator, as reported in the morning press of April 25. Mr. Davis finds fault with the growing increase of motor car exports and the growing decrease in cotton exports. True to the thinking of the moment, he proposes to correct the difficulty by more regulation—the universal cure-all. I would suggest that he look into the fundamentals and find out what is really happening.

"Why are the world markets absorbing an increasing number of American motor cars, and why are they absorbing a decreasing amount of American cotton? It is simply because they can buy greater value of motor cars in the world markets from America than from anywhere else.

"Now as to cotton. The circumstances are directly opposite. Other producers of cotton are glad to sell at lower prices, hence they get the business. The number of dollars available in foreign exchange is, to be true, a factor. But far more fundamental is the question as to whether the deal is possible irrespective of foreign exchange. It certainly is not, because it is not profitable to the buyer. The whole situation is very plain.

"But let us look into the matter further. Why is it that 40 to 50 per cent of our cotton was formerly sold abroad and why are conditions now so different? It is a practical illustration of the fallacy of the 'theory of scarcity,' which has hypnotized our economic thinking. That thinking prejudices our whole national economy. Normal recovery is retarded. The automotive industry suffers relatively, but because of its recognized high efficiency and large volume possibilities as compared with competing manufacturers in other producing countries, it is still able to exist and to sell its products abroad, but the unfortunate producer of cotton for export, has not the same fundamental advantages. I sympathize with him. I sincerely hope that something will be done. But if it is not, his suffering will be short lived because he can not continue to exist in the face of such a policy.

"What is suggested is nothing more or less than to regulate out of the world markets American motor cars that represent American labor, American material, even a certain amount of American cotton itself, and try to substitute more cotton that we can not sell at the price we must ask.

"I make these observations in the hope of discouraging what will turn out to be another excursion into economic wonderland, and in behalf of the automotive industry as well as of national recovery in both of which I am profoundly interested."

Thomas W. Lamont On Santa Fe Board

New York, April 30 (AP).—At the annual meeting of Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe held today for the election of officers other than members of the board of directors, Thomas W. Lamont, of the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co., was elected a member of the executive committee to succeed Charles Steele.

E. J. Engel, formerly vice president, was elected executive vice president. H. B. Fink, assistant treasurer at Topeka, Kans., was elected secretary and treasurer to succeed E. L. Copeland, retired. M. L. Lyles, secretary to the president, was appointed assistant to the president.

Federal Issues Set New Highs In Bond Trades

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 30.—Aside from an easier tone in railroad loans, domestic corporation bonds held steady at unchanged to modestly higher prices today. U. S. Governments were strong, with new record highs established by some of the Treasuries.

Trading picked up considerably from the small volume of the previous day, with transfers aggregating $10,844,000, par value, compared with $7,993,000 on Monday. Of this total, sales in the Government division totaled $1,480,000, against only $890,000 the day before.

An abrupt halt in the downward plunge of Postal Telegraph 5s gave the signal for the entire market to stiffen up soon after the opening, and, with the exception of the carrier obligations, all groups reflected fairly cheerful investment sentiment.

A particular bright spot developed around the various issues of the Paramount-Famous Players and Paramount-Publix, most of which gained 2 to more than 4 points on reports of progress made in reorganizing the outfit.

Among U. S. Governments, 12 or 13 issues got up to new highs in the course of the day. Principal trading centured in the Treasury list, where gains fanged from 4-32ds in the 3¾s of 1946, which closed at 110.6, to 8-32ds in the 3½s of 1946, which ended at 105.4, the high of the day.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Foreign exchange markets were quiet and only slightly changed yesterday.

In London the dollar was a shade higher at 4.83; to the pound sterling and in New York the British unit declined ¾ of a cent to $4.83¼.

In Paris the dollar was steady at an equivalent of 6.622 cents to the franc and in New York francs were unchanged at 6.62⅛. Other gold currencies were a trifle higher and some improvement was shown by leading silver currencies including Hongkong dollars.

Profit-Taking Lowers Curb

Aluminum Company Loses 2¼ Points, A. O. Smith 4.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 30.—Despite further profit taking in the general list of the curb market today, a number of specialties showed independent firmness. Some utilitie and metals, contrary to the trend of those groups on the big board, were in moderate demand. Transfers approximated 156,000 shares compared with 172,000 Monday.

Aluminum Co. of America yielded 2¼ points, while losers of fractions to around a point included Hiram Walker, Distillers Corporation, Seagrams, Dow Chemical, Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Sunshine Mining and Swift Internacional. A. O. Smith & Co. lost 4 points on a brief selling flurry. Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Commonwealth Edison and Hartford Electric closed around a point higher, while American Gas & Electric, Lake Shore, Pioneer Gold and International Petroleum ended slightly improved.

Piscatorially Speaking

By M. W. Meier.

NOW that spring seems here to stay the angler is coming into his own. The hot sun is warming the waters of river, lake and stream and Nature's annual marine cycle is swinging into motion.

Maryland and Virginia trout streams are paying daily dividends to patient, hard-working flycasters and bait fishermen. The Potomac teems with a horde of silver herring, shad and small-sized rock bass. The mullet also have started to bite and only the humble, though toothsome, catfish is proving hard to locate.

1,000 Try Their Hand.

Lake Shenandoah, Dayton, Va., is providing no end of splendid sport. Opening day saw upwards of 1,000 fishermen getting their share of the finny denizens. It still affords good fishing.

It is in salt water, however, where the greatest sport is now to be had and each day is bringing improvements. Up to now the water has been too cold and rough. The rocks are showing up in liberal numbers and there are plenty of hardheads in the Chesapeake. Around Boone's Island and Solomon's Island bluefish are already being caught and ere another week passes the sport should be almost in its prime—a fortnight ahead of past years.

The Doughty Blue.

WE used to think the North Pacific salmon the gamest scrapper that ever swam the seas. His savage, unexpected rushes wrecked exactly 11 rods for us the first season we fished for him.

Today we are inclined to hand the palm to the blue fish. There, brother anglers, is a fish to doff one's hat to. Ounce for ounce, he does what other fish do with pound for pound. He may not break water like a salmon and he may not rush at the source of the tantalizing line. But, man! what a tug-of-war he will give a contemplating captor and what a whale of a lot of sport he affords the user of fairly light tackle.

Gives Strong Fight.

Caught in the surf on a 3-6 combination of line and rod, he will make an angler dance jigs and run marathons to land him. He also can be caught by trolling, but for real sport on blues, you've got to enjoy the fun of surf-casting on a sandy beach.

The annual bluefish pilgrimage is already on and any day now they will reach the Chesapeake in unbelievable numbers. Commercial fishermen off the Carolina coast report they have never known them to be so numerous. Quite a number of District anglers have already made splendid catches of large-sized ones in the vicinity of Oregon Inlet, in the neighborhood of Norfolk, and in this section on the Chesapeake.

Eight-Pound Blue.

One angler who doesn't wish his name used, reported a string caught trolling near Wanchese, N. C., which average between 4 and 8 pounds. An 8-pound blue, in our estimation, is a better prize than a 50-pound drum.

Blues are largely caught on spoons and drones while trolling. From the shore they will usually fall for cut bait placed just beyond the first breakers. We also have caught them on black bass plugs just to prove it could be done. But a light casting rod should never be used unless you can afford numerous replacements.

An Angling Vacation.

GEORGE M. GOOCH felt the call of spring so badly last week that he took what he dubbed an angling vacation and, accompanied by his wife and two Alexandria friends, Arthur and William Herbert, headed for a few of the Virginia Beach resorts bent on salt-water fishing.

Driving down to Kitty Hawk, N. C., they learned that the blues and channel bass were being caught in great profusion off Wachese. To Wachese they hurried and for an all-too brief day enjoyed some of the best sport in their memories. Hiring the boat of Capt. Arnold Daniels, they speedily put out the inlet and trolled back and forth beyond a bar. In a few hours they landed all the channel bass they cared to pull in.

Five Splendid Bass.

Although the sea was somewhat rough and the weather unpleasant, the party landed five splendid bass respectively weighing 36, 35, 31, 28 and 25 pounds. Two others were hooked, but got away. These later were tackle-smashers and took line, drone and leader off with them.

Mr. Gooch, an ardent saltwater fisherman, declares this will be the greatest fishing season of his experience and cites numerous reasons why. He expects the blue-fish and channel bass runs to exceed anything on record. Already he is contemplating another trip for mid-May down in the same section.

300 Miles From D. C.

Wanchese, N. C., is approximately 300 miles from the District line. The road is excellent and lays through Richmond, Portsmouth and Kitty Hawk. It can be made in a night without difficulty. Boats rent from $12 to $15 a day or $4 per person.

All along the North Carolina coast are splendid stretches of beach suitable for surf casting. The ideal way is to make several days of it and take along a sleeping bag, food, utensils, hatchet, et cetera. There is nothing more thrilling than a trip of this sort during full moon. You fish at night and sleep in the daytime. Be sure and take water canteens, however, and fill them up before you head for the beach.

at third, and Substitute Jimmy Bucher, at second.

Clarke's life was made miserable for a few moments in the fifth when Cuccinello and Frey made errors on the first two hitters, Koenig and Gus Mancuso, after which Joe Moore hit a single and two runs were in. The Giants scored two in the sixth on doubles by Hank Leiber and George Davis, and Koenig's single. Mel Ott hit a homer with none on for the Giants in the second and Koenecke did the same for the Dodgers in the fourth.

Clark allowed 10 hits, while the Dodgers collected 15. Despite the defeat, the Giants held the league lead with 7 victories in 10 games. The Dodgers, with 9, won and 4 lost, are only 7 percentage points behind them.

Brewers Face Sandlot War For Flag

Gichner's Ironworkers and 3 New Teams Provide Tough Opposition.

HEURICH BREWERS, who proved themselves the class of The Post Association teams in the week-day competition last season, face a fierce struggle in their endeavor to repeat their 1934 achievement in the Industrial League. The new blood recently transfused into the league by the entries of the Washington Coal Co., Gordon's Cafeteria, Southwest Market and Sanitary Grocery has given the industrial circuit a competitive vitality. Each of the newcomers, and also Gichner's team from the iron works, stands out, with little to choose among them, as real threats for the pennant.

One fellow who doesn't think the Brewers have a chance this year is Henry Gichner, manager of the team sponsored by his pa at the Gichner Iron Works. Henry's choice is the iron works' nine, of course, but he will tell you he is not letting sentiment overcome his judgment.

Young Gichner can back his contention with sound arguments, but the sandlot fans may judge for themselves Saturday, when Heurichs and Gichner's team clash on the West Ellipse in the opening game of the Industrial League.

Adger Adair and John "Fee" Collier, the battery mates, who almost ruined the Brewers' title aspirations last year while playing for the Pig 'n' Whistle, probably will start against the iron workers Saturday. Attractive pre-game ceremonies have been arranged.

The week's postponement of the opening games in the Northern Virginia League, an affiliate of The Post Association, has only heightened the baseball enthusiasm of that vicinity. "All the teams are fit and ready to go," said James Buchanan, president of the league. "It looks like a wide-open race. The acquisition of the Vienna, Purcellville, Millwood A. C. and Marshall teams has tightened the pennant races considerably in both sections."

Rinaldi Coalmen have taken over the franchise of the disbanded Pig 'n' Whistle team in the National City League. Mickey McDonald will manage the Coalmen in their drive for The Post Association title in this fast Sunday league.

Vic Gauzza has called a meeting of the National City Midget League teams for tonight at 8 o'clock in the Atlas Sport Store. Franchises will be posted at tonight's meeting. The juniors will meet on Monday night at the same time.

By the Associated Press.

London—A more cheerful tone prevailed on the stock exchange yesterday, with aircraft shares soaring on prospects of an increased air force. Oil stocks were firm on rumors of a rise in petroleum, while gilt-edged securities and industrials were supported by investment buying. Rubber and gold mining shares remained easy. The market closed generally firm.

Paris—Trading on the Bourse yesterday was most active since Easter. French industrials and rentes improved along with international, metal and rubber shares. Belgian stocks were irregular. The market closed active.

Berlin—Trading was livelier at the opening yesterday, but gains, however, were lost later in the session. The closing was listless.

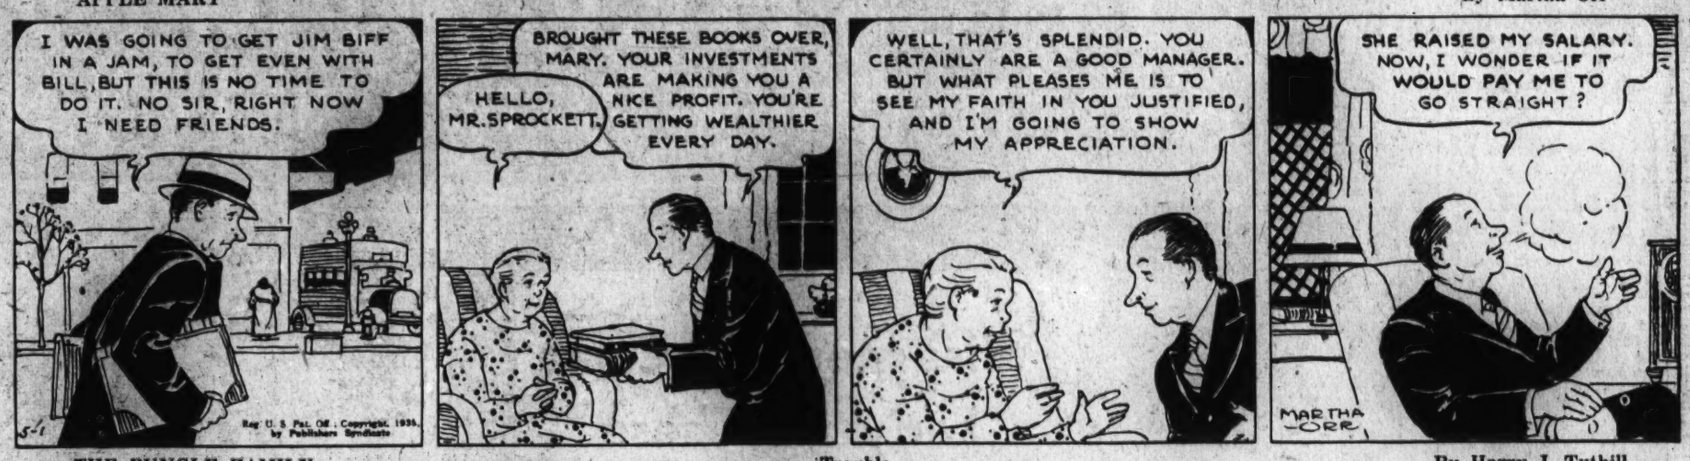
APPLE MARY — By Martha Orr



I WAS GOING TO GET JIM BIFF IN A JAM, TO GET EVEN WITH BILL, BUT THIS IS NO TIME TO DO IT. NO SIR, RIGHT NOW I NEED FRIENDS.
HELLO, MR. SPROCKETT.
WELL, THAT'S SPLENDID. YOU CERTAINLY ARE A GOOD MANAGER. BUT WHAT PLEASES ME IS TO SEE MY FAITH IN YOU JUSTIFIED, AND I'M GOING TO SHOW MY APPRECIATION.
SHE RAISED MY SALARY. NOW, I WONDER IF IT WOULD PAY ME TO GO STRAIGHT?

Preacher Looks Upon the World 'As in a Stupor'

100 Evangelists Hear Call to 'Adventurous Program' to Save Souls.

Declaring that the church is not organized for those within its ranks but for all on the outside, evangelistic leaders in conference here yesterday called for an "adventurous program" for saving souls.

More than 100 delegates representing 25 Protestant denominations attended first-day sessions of the twelfth annual conference of the Department of Evangelism, Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. Sessions are being held at Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H streets northwest. They will end today.

"I look upon the world, and our country, as in stupor," said the Rev. Ross Stover, pastor of a Lutheran church at Philadelphia. "And uless we, as evangelists, do something to awaken it the stupor will grow more deadly.

Foresees Black Decade.

"Let the church's program be an adventurous one. Let it turn the world upside down, so it will be right-side up."

Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, prophesied a decade of drunkenness and gambling, unless there is a revival of religious enthusiasm.

"The statement of James Truslow Adams that the slump of morals in the United States is even greater than the economic slump is correct, in my opinion," the bishop said.

Host Pastor to Speak.

The Rev. William Hiram Foulkes, of Newark, N. J., retiring president of the Department of Evangelism, addressed last night's banquet meeting. He spoke on "The Contemporary Gospel." The Rev. Albert W. Beaven, president of the Colgate-Rochester Divinity School, Rochester, N. Y., discussed "The Evangelism for Tomorrow."

Meetings will be resumed at 9 a. m. today. Talks will be presented by the Rev. Jesse M. Bader, of the department's executive staff in New York City; the Rev. Ralph McAfee, executive secretary of the Detroit (Mich.) Federation of Churches; Frank Goodman, secretary of the radio department of the Federal Council of Churches in New York City, and the Rev. W. Angie Smith, pastor of Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church, Washington.

The Rev. W. S. Abernethy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, will address the group at its concluding session this afternoon.

Hearing Begun In Robles Case

Hoover Expects No New Arrests Yet.

The presentation to a Federal grand jury of evidence in the kidnaping of June Robles was begun yesterday at Tucson, Ariz., by the Department of Justice.

The evidence to be presented to the grand jury is reported to involve only Oscar H. Robson, night club operator, who allegedly wrote extortion letters asking for $15,000.

"The Robles kidnaping is not considered by us as unsolved," said J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice. "But we do not expect additional arrests at this time. The case is still being investigated."

The Robles child, who is 6 years old, was kidnaped and held prisoner in the desert for nearly three weeks before she was found by police.

PWA Funds Sought For New D. C. Armory

Request that public works funds be sought for construction of an armory for the District National Guard was made to the District Commissioners yesterday by the District department of the American Legion.

The request was contained in a letter signed by Howard S. Fisk, department adjutant, reporting the action of the legion executive committee. The legion understood, Mr. Fisk told the Commissioners, "the President has a program for the allotment of the funds of the Public Works Administration for the construction of National Guard armories throughout the country, and it is with this object in view that the request is made for funds for an armory to house the District of Columbia National Guard."

The proposal, the Commissioner said, will be taken under consideration.

C.M.T.C. Changes Camp Schedule

Camps for This Area to Be Held July 2 to 31.

Citizens' Military Training Camps in the Third Corps Area will be held from July 2 to 31, it was stated at the War Department yesterday. Previously, it had been announced that they would be held from July 10 to August 8.

The change in schedule was necessitated by plans for other military activities to be conducted in the summer months in this section. These include Civilian Conservation Corps duty and training of Reserve officers.

Camps will be conducted at Fort George G. Meade, Md.; Fort Hoyle, Md.; Fort Myer, Va., and Fort Monroe, Va. Boys between the ages of 17 and 29 are eligible for the four courses. Transportation and all expenses are paid by the Government. According to military officials the quota for the Washington area is nearly filled. Applicants in this section should address inquiries and applications to Maj. Charles Demonet, 3108 Cathedral avenue, northwest. A total of 307 will be enrolled from Washington and nearby counties.

Conferees in Congress Defer Parley on Rents

A scheduled conference between the Senate and House District Committees on local rent legislation was postponed indefinitely yesterday when the three Senators who attended stated they had other engagements.

Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House Committee, said that another parley will be fixed at the convenience of Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate committee.

Students Prepare For G. W. U. Fiesta

More Than 30 Attractions Erected for Fete.

The George Washington University campus took on a carnival appearance yesterday as students prepared for their 1935 fiesta. A large merry-go-round and a ferris wheel were only two of the more than 30 attractions erected for the three-day fete which opens tomorrow.

The program on the campus, Twenty-first and G streets northwest, will include dancing each night in the crystal ballroom, the presentation of eight revues and the Fiesta Follies, nine marionette shows by Francis Shinn, and boxing and wrestling shows.

With a cast of more than 50 students, the 1935 Follies, a two-hour production directed by Kenn Romney, will be given at 11 p. m. Friday in the university gymnasium. It will have two acts and 43 scenes, including the best of those presented in the eight revues.

Sam Futrovsky has general charge of the fiesta, and is assisted by Howard Ennes, Ross Pope, Everett Strandell and Don Wilkins.

Delaney to Fete Marine Reserves

Representative John J. Delaney, of Brooklyn, N. Y., will be host tonight at a dinner at the Army and Navy Club in honor of the Marine Corps Reserve Squadron VO6-MR, based at Floyd Bennett Field, Brooklyn. The squadron will fly from New York this afternoon.

Other guests will include Representative Maas, Minnesota, a Marine Corps Reserve major; Capt. Frank R. Lackey, U. S. N., attached to the Naval Reserve in New York; Lieut. Col. Roy S. Geiger, U. S. M. C., commanding officer of aviation at Quantico, Va.; Maj. Francis P. Mulcahy, U. S. M. C., and Capt. Harold C. Major, U. S. M. C., both of whom are attached to Marine Corps Aviation at headquarters, United States Marine Corps.

Le Droit Park Group Requests Bus Service

A petition signed by 417 residents of Le Droit Park asking establishment of bus service on Fourth street northwest, extending beyond Howard University, was presented the Public Utilities Commission yesterday by William A. Roberts, people's counsel.
